THE TURNOUT in the sixth phase of the Lok Sabha elections in 58 constituencies across eight states and Union territories on Saturday was 59%, according to early estimates at 7.45 pm. However, the final turnout number is likely to increase.

In 2019, these seats had recorded 64.73% polling. But this does not include the Anantnag-Rajouri constituency of Jammu and Kashmir, which was redrawn during delimitation in 2022. The constituency saw 52.28% polling on Saturday, according to early estimates released by the Election Commission (EC).

According to data available on the EC's Voter Turnout App at 7.30 pm, Bishnupur constituency in West Bengal recorded the highest turnout of 81.47%, while Siwan in Bihar recorded the lowest at 48.05%.

Of the 58 seats which went to polls on Saturday, 14 were in Uttar Pradesh, 10 in Haryana, 8 each in Bihar and West Bengal, 7 in Delhi, 6 in Odisha, 4 in Jharkhand, and one in Jammu and Kashmir. Polling was also held for 42 Assembly constituencies in Odisha.

In 2019, BJP had won 40 of these 58 seats, the BSP and BJD had won four each, TMC and JD(U) three each, and SP, LJP, NC and AJSU one each.

The turnout was 54.03% in UP; 58.24% in Haryana; 53.02% in Bihar; 78.19% in West Bengal; 54.37% in Delhi; 59.92% in Odisha, and 62.66% in Jharkhand.

EC releases seat-wise no. of voters in first 5 phases

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
 New Delhi, May 25

FACING CRITICISM—AND a case in the Supreme Court—the Election Commission (EC) on Saturday released the absolute number of electors who cast their votes in each constituency in the first five phases of the ongoing Lok Sabha elections, even as it said there was “a pattern of false narratives and mischievous designs to vitiate the electoral process”.

Unlike in 2019, when the EC released and later removed data on votes cast from its website due to alleged discrepancies between the provisional number of votes cast and those counted, the commission only released the total number of electors and turnout percentage after each phase of voting this time.

Responding to a question on doubts being cast on the turnout of voters in the elections, Chief Election Commissioner Rajiv Kumar on Saturday said it is some people's job to create doubts and asserted the systems in place at the Election Commission are strong to ensure no mistakes creep in. “Our system is strong, not from today, it has been there for the past 70-72 years,” he told PTI Videos. “All I can say is that there is no mistake in this, nor can there be any mistake,” Kumar said. “But why did these doubts arise, how were they created, and how much negative impact it has on our voting and the atmosphere, how our entire energy is diverted, we will definitely tell this to the country one day,” he added.

The EC's silence on the absolute number of voters this time had led to an interim application filed by NGO Association for Democratic Reforms (ADR) in the Supreme Court, seeking directions to the EC to compile and publish this data on its website after each phase and also upload Form 17C for each polling booth.

Go First closer to liquidation as Pitti withdraws bid

Sharjah-based Sky One is now the lone bidder

ROHIT VAID
 New Delhi, May 25

IN A DEVELOPMENT that might push bankrupt airline Go First closer to liquidation, EaseMyTrip's CEO Nishant Pitti on Saturday announced he has decided to withdraw his bid for the airline.

“We have decided to withdraw from GoAir bid to concentrate on our core areas of strength. Our focus remains on leveraging our expertise and resources to achieve sustainable growth and success,” Pitti said in a post on X.

The move comes after Delhi High Court's order last month, allowing lessors to deregister and take possession of 54 Go First planes. This made it tough for bidders to attempt a takeover, and also dashed hopes of lenders to the airline to get good value in the bids.

Pitti's bid was through Busy Bee Aviation (BBAPL), a joint venture with SpiceJet MD Ajay Singh.

Pitti's decision also coincides with his online travel firm posting a ₹15-crore net loss during the January-March quarter against a ₹31-crore net profit in the same quarter of the previous year. Pitti attributed the one-time loss to write-offs associated with Go First's dues. In total, ₹74 crore has been written off that Go First owed the venture, he added.

With Pitti pulling out, it is unclear if Ajay Singh will continue with the bid in an individual capacity. The future of BBAPL is also uncertain with its majority stakeholder backing off. However, the second bid, filed by Sharjah-based Sky One, remains.

Go First stopped flying on May 3, 2023, and its plea for voluntary insolvency resolution proceedings was admitted by the National Company Law Tribunal on May 10 last year.

by the Wadia group, is also embroiled in a legal battle with Pratt & Whitney at the Singapore Court of Arbitration.

In this case, the airline has claimed about ₹8,000-crore compensation, blaming its bankruptcy on the failure of P&W engines that forced it to ground many aircraft.

The now defunct airline owes its creditors more than ₹6,200 crore. Central Bank of India, Bank of Baroda and IDBI Bank are the secured creditors, with admitted claims of ₹1,934 crore, ₹1,744 crore and ₹75 crore, respectively.

With premium offerings, dark rum finds its sweet spot

Barrel-aged to craft, new offerings going beyond low-cost tag

KUNAL DOLEY
 New Delhi, May 25

DARK RUM IS having its moment in India. Having been associated with an iconic brand for decades and otherwise perceived to be a low-cost option, the alcoholic beverage is now going beyond being labelled a college cocktail favourite or a defence canteen staple to finding a sweet spot among connoisseurs as a niche, premium product. “Consumers today are willing to experiment and try something innovative and unique. They are drinking less but better. Further, with the increasing cocktail trend and the use of rum as a versatile ingredient to experiment with, the demand for premium rums is also increasing,” said Abhishek Khaitan, managing director of Radico Khaitan, a leading manufacturer of Indian made foreign liquor (IMFL).

The company recently launched a new dark rum variant, Kohinoor Reserve, crafted through small-batch distillation and using only fresh cane juice “during the north Indian winters.” “The rum is then matured in American oak barrels previously used for maturing our Indian single malt, followed by further maturation in Cognac XO and Vermouth casks,” Khaitan added. segment in India with its legacy brand Contessa Rum, Radico Khaitan underwent a transformative shift in the premium segment with the introduction of 1965 Spirit of Victory Rum in 2017. “In FY2022-23, the brand reached a significant milestone of surpassing 1 million cases in annual sales, further establishing its market dominance,” said Khaitan. Similarly, Piccadilly Distilleries, an independent manufacturer and seller of malt spirits in India, launched Camikara, a limited-edition sipping rum aged in ex-bourbon barrels for 12 years, in 2022. “This exceptional spirit, bottled at a strength of 50% ABV and containing no added sugar, flavour, or colour, made history by becoming the first and only Indian rum to win a gold medal at the prestigious IWSC Awards 2023,” said Praveen Malviya, CEO, IMFL, Piccadilly Distilleries.

Camikara 12YO is priced around ₹6,000 for a 750ml bottle, which is a far cry from the traditional dark rum offerings that can be had for ₹500-800.

Building on the success of the 12-year-old variant and in response to the burgeoning demand for premium rum offerings, the company expanded its rum portfolio in November last year with the introduction of Camikara 3YO, a 100% pure cane juice rum aged in American oak barrels for three years. Camikara 3YO is available for ₹1,500 a bottle (750 ml) in Delhi.

Meanwhile, Still Distilling Spirits, the creators of Goa-based Maska Zai premium craft rum, launched Mesma, a limited-release barrel-aged rare rum, in May last year. The launch of only 600 bottles (priced at ₹3,600/750 ml bottle) in the Goan market marked the brand's two-year journey since its inception in 2021.

Similarly, Amrut Distilleries launched Two Indies—a premium and natural dark rum made from Indian jaggery—a year ago.

Anasuya Sengupta wins best actress at Cannes

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
Cannes, May 25

ANASUYASENGUPTA, ONE of the lead stars of Bulgarian director Konstantin Bojanov's Hindi-language movie The Shameless, has created history by bagging the Best Actress award in the Un Certain Regard category at the 2024 Cannes Film Festival. Sengupta, who hails from Kolkata, is the first Indian artist to win the category's top acting honour, marking a significant milestone for India at the prestigious film gala.

In her acceptance speech, Sengupta dedicated the award to "the queer community and other marginalised communities" for bravely fighting for their rights all around the world. "You don't have to be queer to fight for equality, you don't have to be colonised to know that colonising is pathetic — we just need to be very, very decent human beings," the actor said.

The Shameless, which had its premiere at Cannes on May 17, forays into a dark, disturbing world of exploitation and misery in which two sex workers, one who bears the scars of her line of work, the other a young girl days away from ritual initiation, forge a bond and seek to

The Shameless also stars Mita Vashisht, Tanmay Dhania, Rohit Kokate and Auroshikha Dey in key roles.

British-Indian filmmaker Sandhya Suri's Santosh was also part of the Un Certain Regard but didn't win any award.

The Un Certain Regard, which runs parallel to the festival's main competition, aims to highlight new trends, new paths and new countries of cinema.

The top prize of the segment went to Black Dog by Chinese filmmaker Gou Zhen, while French director Boris Lojkine's L'Histoire de Souleymane bagged the Jury Prize.

G7 makes no final deal on money for Ukraine from frozen Russian assets

Final decision ahead of June summit of national leaders

ASSOCIATED PRESS
Frankfurt, May 25

FINANCE OFFICIALS FROM the Group of Seven rich democracies said they had moved toward agreement on a US proposal to squeeze more money for Ukraine from Russian assets frozen in their countries. But the ministers left a final deal to be worked out ahead of a June summit of national leaders.

"We are making progress in our discussions on potential avenues to bring forward the extraordinary profits stemming from immobilised Russian sovereign assets to the benefit of Ukraine," the draft statement said, without providing details.

Despite the progress made at the meeting in Stresa, on the shores of Lago Maggiore in northern Italy, a final decision on how the assets will be used will rest with the G7 national leaders, includ-

Finance officials from the Group of Seven rich democracies met in Stresa, on the shores of Lago Maggiore in northern Italy ing US President Joe Biden, next month at their annual summit in Fasano, in southern Italy. Host finance minister Giancarlo Giorgetti said that "progress has been made so far" but that there were "legal and technical issues that have to be overcome".

"It is not an easy task but we are working on it," he said at a news conference following the end of the meeting.

Ukrainian finance minister Serhiy Marchenko joined the finance ministers and central bank heads at their concluding session on Saturday.

The US Congress has passed legislation allowing the Biden administration to seize the roughly $5 billion in Russian assets located in the US, but European countries have a strong voice in the matter since most of the $260 billion in Russian central bank assets frozen after the Feb 24, 2022, invasion are held in their jurisdictions. Citing legal concerns, European officials have balked at outright confiscating the money and handing it to Ukraine as compensation for the destruction caused by Russia. Instead, they plan use the interest accumulating on the assets, but that's only around $3 billion a year — about one month's financing needs for the Ukrainian government.

US treasury secretary Janet Yellen is pushing for borrowing against the future interest income from the frozen assets. That would mean Ukraine could be given as much as $50 billion immediately.

But the proposal has run into concerns from European members about the legal complexities, and about concerns that Russia could retaliate against the diminished number of Western companies and individuals who still have holdings in Russia, or against the Euro-clear securities depository in Belgium where the bulk of the funds is held.

Russia has published a decree from President Vladimir Putin allowing confiscation of assets of US companies and individuals as compensation for any Russian assets seized in the United States. The ministers also discussed what to do about China's outsized, state-backed production of green energy technology, which the US considers a threat to the global economy.

The G7 is an informal forum that holds an annual summit to discuss economic policy and security issues. The member countries are Canada, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, the United Kingdom and the United States. Representatives of the European Union also take part, but the EU does not serve as one of the rotating chairs.

59% polling in Phase 6

"Polling in Anantnag-Rajouri parliamentary constituency in Jammu and Kashmir was completely peaceful with a turnout of 52.28% as at 7:45 pm, which is the highest in many decades. With this, the polling to the parliamentary seats in the UT of Jammu and Kashmir has concluded. In the ongoing General Elections 2024, the three parliamentary constituencies in the Valley, namely Srinagar (38.49%), Baramulla (59.1%) and Anantnag-Rajouri (52.28% as of 7:45 pm), have recorded voter turnouts which is the highest in many decades," the EC said in a statement.

With the end of the sixth phase, polling is over in 486 Lok Sabha constituencies. The remaining 57 seats will vote in the last phase on June 1.

The first three phases of the ongoing Lok Sabha elections saw a dip in turnout as compared to 2019. In the first phase on April 19, when 102 constituencies went to polls, the final turnout was 66.14%, down from 69.29% in 2019.

In the second phase on April 26, in which 88 seats voted, the final turnout was 66.71%, down from 69.43% in 2019. In the third phase on May 7, across 93 constituencies, the final turnout was 65.68% as compared to 66.58% in 2019.

But polling increased in the fourth phase on May 13, when the 96 constituencies that went to polls recorded 69.16% turnout, up from 68.8% turnout in these seats in 2019.

The fifth phase, too, saw a slight increase, with an overall turnout of 62.2% as compared to 61.82% in 2019. Also, unlike the first four phases, the turnout of women voters was higher than the turnout of men voters in the fifth phase on May 20, when polling was held in 49 Lok Sabha constituencies across eight states and Union territories (UTs).

Reversing past trends, the overall turnout of women voters (67.18%) was marginally higher as compared to men (67.02%) in the 2019 Lok Sabha elections.

EC releases seat-wise no. of voters in first 5 phases

Form 17C is the sheet on which the presiding officer records the total number of votes recorded on polling day, a copy of which is also handed over to the polling agents of candidates.

However, the top court on Friday refused to issue such a direction to the EC in the middle of elections and even rejected attempts to cast doubts on the role of the poll watchdog.

"Everyone is for free and fair elections... We cannot interrupt something... We are also responsible citizens. Let us trust some authority. We will keep it pending and (it) will be heard along with the writ petition after the elections are over. In between elections, a hands-off attitude has to be there," Justice Dipankar Datta said on Friday.

Stating that it feels "duly strengthened" by Friday's developments and the apex court's observations, the EC released data a day later showing that of the 76.4 crore eligible voters in the first five phases across 424 seats, 50.7 crore actually came out to exercise their franchise on polling day. Overall, the voter turnout in the first five phases has been put at roughly 66.3%.

Asked why the EC decided to share the number of votes cast, albeit only after five phases, a senior EC official told The Indian Express that it wasn't done earlier since the top court was hearing the matter. The official added that the EC decided to release the data in the interest of transparency. The Commission's statement on Saturday also states that the EC "decided to further expand the format of turnout data". However, in 2019, the Commission had shared the absolute, but provisional, number of voters.

Even as the EC released the absolute turnout numbers, sources said it will not upload all copies of Form 17C for open viewing given that it is under no statutory obligation to do so. "There are over 10 lakh polling stations in the ongoing elections. Even if we assume that four candidates in each station have polling agents and others don't, even then 40 lakh people have Form 17C with them," the senior official said.

"The total number of votes polled in a constituency, as recorded in Form 17C, can never be changed even by anyone's hypothetical mischief, as it is available with all contesting candidates... Agents of candidates are always allowed to accompany EVM and statutory papers, including Form 17C, from polling station till storage in a strongroom as per Rule 49 V(2) of the Conduct of Election Rules 1961," the Commission said in the press release to rule out any doubts about the authenticity of the turnout data it maintains.

"The Commission remains fully committed to the highest level of transparency and involvement of stakeholders at every stage of the electoral cycle," it said.

With premium offerings, dark rum finds its sweet spot

"It is doing exceedingly well. We are planning to launch the product throughout India in the coming year. Volumes are growing steadily," said Rakshit Jagdale, MD of Amrut Distilleries, a homegrown company best known for its eponymous Amrut brand of single malt whisky.

Contrary to popular belief, rum isn't just for winters anymore. "Globally, top-quality premium rums come from tropical countries like Jamaica and Barbados. Advancements in distillation and global ingreredient sourcing have made exceptional rums available year-round worldwide. Rum's versatility in cocktails has shifted its perception from a winter-only drink to an all-season drink," explained Malviya of Piccadilly Distilleries.

"It's all got to do with the premiumisation of the Indian spirits category. Consumers are beginning to enjoy premium dark rums along with premium whiskies and brandies," added Jagdale of Amrut Distilleries.

India is undergoing a rum revolution, and with it the shape of the country's spirit industry is also poised for a new era. As per Statista, the rum market in India is projected to grow by 6.75% resulting in a market volume of $1.6 billion by 2028. "The growth of the Indian rum industry constitutes more than a transient phenomenon, it exemplifies the industry's readiness for innovation, and aligning with the evolving preferences of a dynamic consumer base," added Khaitan.

China slammed in G-7 show of unity

CHINA'S ENGAGEMENT IN the global system of commerce was roundly criticised by Group of Seven finance chiefs in a show of unity accompanied by a threat of further escalation. The club of rich-world ministers and central bankers concluded its gathering in the Italian lakeside town of Stresa on Saturday with a communique that cited the world's second-biggest economy by name and accused the country of hurting the economies of its trade partners. "While reaffirming our interest in a balanced and reciprocal collaboration, we express concerns about China's comprehensive use of non-market policies and practices that undermines our workers, industries, and economic resilience," they said. "We will continue to monitor the potential negative impacts of overcapacity and will consider taking steps to ensure a level playing field." Those words of warning followed the Biden administration's announcement late on Friday to reimpose tariffs on hundreds of goods imported from China. The goods in rhetoric could just be the prelude to further tensions if Donald Trump regains the White House in US elections later this year. Washington remains the key protagonist in pressuring China, though earlier in the week, treasury secretary Janet Yellen stressed that G-7 participants from Germany, France and the European Union also harbour grievances. French finance minister Bruno Le Maire was one attendee pressing for a united front. "The issue of tariffs toward China is an objective fact, not a political choice," Italian finance minister Giancarlo Giorgetti, chair of the meeting, told reporters in a final press conference. "When the US, with its Inflation Reduction Act, started this type of policy, this forced a reflection, also within the EU, on how to behave in these situations."

America will allow tariff exclusions to expire on about half of 400 products that had been spared, the office of the US Trade Representative announced on Friday. A further 164 exclusions will be extended through May of next year. Earlier in the week, China signaled it's ready to unleash tariffs as high as 25% on imported cars with big engines, highlighting how tussles over automobiles — one of Europe's biggest industries — loom large in the current dispute. Chinese manufacturer BYD Co, which overtook Tesla in last year as the biggest global electric vehicle maker, plans to bring its Seagull hatchback to Europe next year. After tariffs and modifications to meet European standards, executives expect to sell it for less than $21,500 on the continent. Harmful practices — Language within the G-7 communique hints at possible retaliatory measures from the group as a whole. — BLOOMBERG

● BIG WIN FOR INDIA

Global pact to check theft of traditional knowledge

MUKESH JAGOTA
New Delhi, May 25

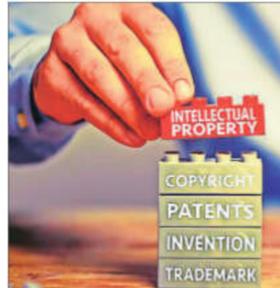

ABOUT 25 YEARS after the proposal was first mooted to put in place systems globally to prevent grant of patents on traditional knowledge, members of World Intellectual Property Organisation (WIPO) have adopted a treaty that puts down systems to deal with it.

The WIPO treaty on intellectual property, genetic resources and associated traditional knowledge prevents patents from being granted erroneously for inventions that are not novel or inventive with regard to genetic resources and traditional knowledge associated with genetic resources.

This is the first WIPO treaty to address the interface between intellectual property, genetic resources and traditional knowledge and includes provisions specifically for indigenous peoples as well as local communities.

"The treaty also marks a big win for India and the global south which has for long been a proponent of this instrument. After two decades of negotiations and with collective support this treaty has been adopted at

■ First WIPO treaty to address the interface between intellectual property, genetic resources and traditional knowledge

■ It also includes provisions specifically for indigenous peoples as well as local communities

■ To implement the provisions, the signatories to the treaty will have to establish information systems

■ These information systems will help in examination of patent applications and safeguard rights of the communities the multilateral fora, with a consensus among more than 150 countries," a senior official said.

To implement the provisions, the signatories to the treaty will have to establish information systems such as databases of genetic resources and traditional knowledge with genetic resources in consultation with indigenous communities. These information systems will help in examination of patent applications and safeguard rights of the communities.

According to the treaty, if a claimed invention in a patent application is based on genetic resources, each country that has signed the agreement shall ask for disclosure on the country of origin of genetic resources or their source.

Similarly, in case claimed application is based on traditional knowledge associated with genetic resources, the applicant will have to disclose the group of people who provided that traditional knowledge.

"This will offer added protection to Indian genetic resources and traditional knowledge, which while currently protected in India, are prone to misappropriation in countries, which do not have disclosure of obligations," the official said.

Under the treaty, "source of genetic resources" refers to any source from which the applicant has obtained the genetic resources, such as a research centre, gene bank, indigenous peoples and local communities, the multilateral system of the International Treaty on Plant Genetic Resources for Food and Agriculture (ITPGRFA), or any other collection or depository of genetic resources.

"Source of traditional knowledge associated with genetic resources" means any source from which the applicant has obtained the traditional knowledge associated with genetic resources, such as scientific literature, publicly accessible databases, patent applications and patent publications.

Negotiations for the treaty began at WIPO in 2001, initiated in 1999 with a proposal by Colombia. It was concluded in Geneva after the final stage of negotiations between May 13 to May 24.

Nazara Tech Q4 profit falls 98% to ₹18 lakh

FE BUREAU
New Delhi, May 25

GAMING AND SPORTS media company Nazara Technologies reported a 98% fall in its net profit to ₹18 lakh for the quarter ended March, against ₹9.4 crore in the year-ago period.

The fall in net profit was largely due to ₹16.9 crore loss, which the company incurred from discontinued operations. The company has written off legacy businesses, including real-money gaming business Halaplay to ensure its balance sheet remains healthy.

The company said it is in the process of divesting Nazara Kenya, Nazara Pro, Crimzon, and Sports Unity, while also evaluating options for Nazara Singapore and Mauritius entities.

The net profit from its continued operations rose 43.6% year-on-year (YoY) to ₹17.1 crore.

Revenue from operations fell 8% YoY to ₹266.2 crore in the March quarter, mainly due to decline in its gaming and adtech businesses. In the gaming segment, games such as Kiddopia, World Cricket Championship, and Classic Rummy witnessed a fall in revenue.

Overall, the gaming segment witnessed a 17% YoY fall in revenue to ₹91 crore.

The adtech business represented by Datawrkz fell 29% YoY to ₹27.5 crore in the January-March quarter owing to a strategic pivot to move away from lower-margin clients towards higher-margin clients and contracts.

The esports business revenue grew 6% YoY to ₹148.2 crore, led by content business Sportskeeda. The company's Ebitda margin increased to 11% in Q4 from 9.6% in the year-ago quarter. Ebitda increased 5% to ₹29.3 crore as against ₹27.8 crore a year ago. "Key initiatives from FY24 are set to yield results in the coming year, including our new publishing platform, new game launches through existing studios, IP partnerships, and a strong M&A pipeline," said Nitish Mittersain, founder, CEO & joint MD of Nazara Technologies.

For FY24, the company's revenue grew 4.3% to ₹1,138.3 crore. Net profit, including discontinued operations, increased 21.8% to ₹74.8 crore in FY24.

"We are optimistic about FY25, expecting accelerated growth in both revenue and EBITDA. With substantial cash reserves and a robust M&A pipeline, we are well positioned to seize further growth opportunities and enhance our growth trajectory through strategic M&A over the next 12 months," Mittersain added.

Nazara raised ₹950 crore last financial year, resulting in a net cash balance of ₹1,450 crore.

Over the next two years, it has earmarked ₹830 crore for mergers and acquisitions.

On Friday, the company also announced acquisition of the remaining 28.1% stake in Nextwave Multimedia for ₹21.6 crore. Nextwave is the developer of the mobile cricket games under the World Cricket Championship franchise. With this, Nazara will own a 100% stake in Nextwave.

RPower reports ₹397 cr Q4 loss

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
New Delhi, May 25

RELIANCE POWER ON Saturday reported a consolidated loss of ₹397.66 crore during the March quarter, mainly on account of increased cost of fuel consumed.

It had posted ₹321.79 crore profit in the year-ago period, the company said in an exchange filing. The firm's total income, however, increased to ₹2,193.85 crore from ₹1,853.32 crore a year ago.

Among expenses, its cost of fuel consumed increased to ₹953.67 crore during the quarter from ₹823.47 crore in the January-March period in 2022-23. For the full fiscal year, the company's losses widened to ₹2,068.38 crore from ₹470.77 crore loss in FY23.

The board of the company also "approved authorisations of members for issuance of foreign currency convertible bonds (FCCBs) and securities through qualified institutional placement (QIP).

"These shall be in terms of the applicable rules, regulations, guidelines, and laws, including Securities and Exchange Board of India".

Reliance Power has close to 6,000 MW of operational power generation assets.

FY25 cost inflation index higher than last fiscal's

FE BUREAU
New Delhi, May 25

THE INCOME TAX department has notified the cost inflation index (CII) for FY25, relevant to assessment year 2025-26, at 363, which is higher than 348 for FY24, and 331 for FY23. The CII is a tool used to measure inflation for computing long-term capital gains on the sale of assets, including immovable property, securities and jewellery.

The CII adjusts the purchase price of assets to reflect current inflation, ensuring that taxpayers are taxed on real gains rather than nominal gains inflated by general price increases. This adjustment is essential for maintaining a fair and reflective tax system. Without it, taxpayers could face disproportionate tax liabilities on gains that are primarily due to inflation rather than actual economic growth, experts say.

When selling assets such as immovable property, securities, or jewellery, the profit or gain from these assets tends to be high due to their increased sale price compared to the purchase price. As a result, assesses have to pay higher income tax on these gains. "Taxpayers can use this (CII) to calculate gains for the long term capital assets sold during FY25 and reduce the tax liability accordingly," said Sandeep Sehgal, partner-tax, AKM Global.

The CII is based on the Consumer Price Index (CPI) of the preceding year. The CPI is a measure of inflation that reflects the average price level of a basket of goods and services consumed by households. The Central Board of Direct Taxes (CBDT) fixes and publishes CII annually in its official gazette, under Section 48 of the Income Tax Act, 1961.

The current revision (for FY25) reflects inflationary trends, safeguarding taxpayers from excessive capital gains taxes and ensuring a fair tax framework, said Rahul Charkha, partner at Economic Laws Practice.

Dvara Kshetriya Gramin Financials raises $10 million

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
New Delhi, May 25

DVARA KSHETRIYA GRAMIN Financials has raised $10 million from BlueOrchard Microfinance Fund to fuel its expansion plans, the company said on Saturday.

The financial services company would utilise the funds raised to strengthen its efforts in the underserved communities across the country as it aims to grow 40% in the current financial year, company managing director and CEO LVLN Murty said.

BlueOrchard Microfinance Fund is a global investor and the debt was raised through the issuance of listed non-convertible foreign currency bonds under the External Commercial Borrowings route.

"In a great start to a very promising year, we are delighted to announce the debt raise from BlueOrchard.

The company aims to grow by 40% in the current financial year and exploring various avenues of raising liquidity will be critical to ensuring a well-diversified resource profile," Murty said in a company statement.

"Our increased partnerships with like-minded foreign funds working in the impact space will be instrumental in expanding our reach and empowering even more underserved communities by providing them with access to critical financial services," he added.

Paytm withdraws application for general insurance licence

FE BUREAU
New Delhi, May 25

ONE97 COMMUNICATIONS ON Saturday said an associate company, Paytm General Insurance Limited (PGIL), has withdrawn its general insurance licence application with the Insurance Regulatory and Development Authority of India (IRDAI).

The company informed the stock exchanges the move will help it conserve cash to the tune of ₹950 crore, which had been set aside for an investment in PGIL.

Paytm said its wholly-owned subsidiary, Paytm Insurance Broking Private Limited (PIBPL), has intensified its focus on insurance distribution to Paytm consumers and SMEs. The company plans to offer small ticket insurance solutions across various general insurance categories, including health, life, motor, shop, and gadgets.

"PIBPL brings affordable, easy to understand insurance products to our consumers and merchants, making their everyday lives easier," the company said.

According to the firm, it is also strengthening partnerships with Digit, Acko, ICICI

Lombard, New India, Bajaj Allianz, TATA AIG, Aditya Birla Health, and Universal Sompo to grow the insurance distribution segment. "...By focusing on small-ticket general insurance offerings and leveraging the strength of Paytm's distribution, we are committed to increase general insurance penetration to a wider audience," a Paytm spokesperson said.

Paytm reported a weak set of numbers for the March quarter, posting a net loss of ₹550 crore. The total revenue declined 3% y-o-y to ₹2,270 crore with the revenues from payments and financial services falling. Disbursements fell sharply by 54% y-o-y. Revenues from marketing services (commerce and cloud services) also were down by 23% sequentially to ₹400 crore.

RIL seeks CCI nod for Viacom18-Star India merger

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
New Delhi, May 25

BILLIONAIRE MUKESH AMBANI-PROMOTED Reliance Industries has sought approval from fair trade regulator Competition Commission of India (CCI) for the $8.5-billion merger of Viacom18 and Star India Pvt Ltd (SIPL).

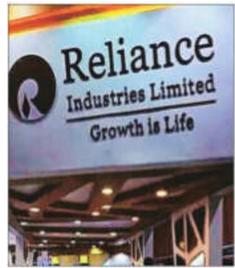

"The proposed transaction aims to combine the entertainment businesses (along with certain other identified businesses) of Viacom18, part of Reliance Industries Ltd (RIL) group and SIPL, wholly-owned by The Walt Disney Company (TWDC).

"As a result of the transaction, SIPL, currently a wholly-owned entity of TWDC through its subsidiaries, will become a joint venture (JV) which will be jointly held by RIL, Viacom18 and existing TWDC subsidiaries," a notice filed with the CCI said on Friday.

The proposed transaction will not cause any appreciable adverse effect on competition in India, RIL said in the notice.

However, to facilitate the CCI's assessment, they have identified several key markets where horizontal overlaps were significant such as licensing of audio visual content rights, distribution of broadcast TV channels, provision of audio visual (AV) content, and supply of advertising space in India.

SIPL is engaged in a range of media activities, including TV broadcasting, motion pictures and operation of an OTT platform. It is a wholly-owned entity of US-based The Walt Disney Company (TWDC).

Viacom18 is engaged in the business of broadcasting of television (TV) channels, operation of an over-the-top (OTT) platform, in India and worldwide. It is also engaged in the business of production and distribution of motion pictures.

In February this year, global media giant Walt Disney Co and Reliance Industries announced signing of binding pacts to merge their media operations in India to create a ₹70,000 crore ($8.5 billion) behemoth.

After the successful completion of the deal, it would create the biggest firm in the Indian media and entertainment sector, with over 100 channels in several languages, two leading OTT platforms and a viewer base of 750 million across the country.

Nita Ambani, wife of Reliance Industries chairman Mukesh Ambani, will chair the joint venture, while Uday Shankar will be the vice chairperson.

Reliance and its affiliates will hold 63.16% stake in the combined entity, while Disney will have the remaining 36.84% shareholding.

Meghalaya set to attract private investments worth ₹8K cr: CM

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
Tura, May 25

CHIEF MINISTER CONRAD K Sangma on Saturday said Meghalaya is set to attract private investments amounting to ₹8,000 crore in the current fiscal, attributing this to a new industrial policy aimed at transforming the state into a $10 billion economy.

"The investment in Meghalaya is an outcome of the new industrial policy that has created an ecosystem for ease of doing business," he said while addressing a workshop on the 'Human Development Leadership Programme' in Tura.

Discussing past policies that discouraged investors,

Meghalaya CM Conrad K Sangma said investment in the state is an outcome of the new industrial policy

Sangma noted, "The system was tedious and time-consuming. Our new industrial policy has provided a framework to give clearance to different statutory requirements within a specified time frame, which is facilitating investors".

He revealed that nearly ₹4,000 crore in investment has been secured in the past year alone. This includes a ₹2,500-crore thermal power plant to generate 450 megawatt of electricity, an ethanol plant, a beverage manufacturing unit, and a five-star hotel chain, he added.

On boosting IT connectivity in the state, Sangma informed that the government is engaging with Malaysian and Bangladeshi telecom companies to lay submarine cable lines. "The optical fibre connection will further boost the IT-enabled service sector," he said.

Biden to end tariff exclusions on hundreds of Chinese items

May 25

PRESIDENT JOE BIDEN will reimpose tariffs on hundreds of goods imported from China, the office of the US Trade Representative announced, as part of a broader plan to increase duties in strategic sectors and protect American manufacturing.

The US will allow tariff exclusions to expire on about half of 400 products that had been spared, USTR said. It added that 164 exclusions would be extended through May of next year. All of the exemptions, which are set to expire at the end of this month, will be extended through June 14 to allow for a transition period for those that aren't being renewed. Some of the products receiving continued exclusions through next May include types of motors and medical equipment, but the products are as varied as child safety seats, certain types of backpacks and some types of crab meat.

Among the products where exclusions are being ended are more than 100 where the administration received no public comment asking for their extension, the trade office said.

For the others, public comments failed to show that extending the exclusions would help to shift sourcing out of China, or to show that the imports are unavailable from sources other than China.

ON THE SHELF

RADHIKA ROY

IN THE 2020s, we find ourselves in a world that is grappling with technology's negative consequences. We have deepfakes; we have voice cloning; we have data breaches.

Governmental regulation and safeguards are finding it difficult to match their pace with technological development. A country that has promoted digitalisation for greater inclusivity and accessibility is dragging its legs while devising and operationalising its data protection legislation.

In his book, Fourth Industrial Revolution, World Economic Forum founder and executive chairperson Klaus Schwab observed that the changes this revolution ushers in are so profound that "there has never been a time of greater promise or potential peril". This quote comes to mind and succinctly summarises the predicament we find ourselves in; a predicament sold as growth and profit in Fusion Strategy: How Real-Time Data and AI Will Power the Industrial Future by Vijay Govindarajan and Venkat Venkatraman.

Govindarajan, or VG, as he is popularly known, is a professor at Dartmouth College's Tuck School of Business and writes primarily on management, innovation, and strategy. Venkat Venkatraman is a professor at the Boston University whose research revolves around adaptation of digital technologies by industries. Together, the two stalwarts have published a playbook for asset-heavy industries to commence their journey into leveraging real-time data and artificial intelligence (AI) to drive innovation and competitiveness in the industrial sector.

The book begins by examining the evolving landscape of the industrial sector, highlighting challenges posed by digital disruption, changing consumer preferences, and global competition. The impact of digital technologies is not confined to asset-light, high information sectors. VG and Venkatraman believe that it is time for industrials to 'fuse' their capacity to create physical products with the digitals. To illustrate this belief, case studies involving companies such as John Deere, Honeywell, and Tesla have been cited to showcase how manufacturing companies in fields such as agriculture, construction and automobiles have been ahead of the curve by tapping early into 'fusion strategy' which involves integration of real-time data and AI in every aspect of business operations, from product design and manufacturing to supply chain management and customer service. For instance, the book uses Tesla as an example to demonstrate how automobiles must be reconstructed as "cloud-connected computers on wheels".

To aid companies in pursuing this endeavour, the authors provide a step-by-step roadmap, from procuring or partnering with companies that provide AI tools to restructuring their product design from the scratch with AI embedded in it. Throughout the book, a term that is encountered by the reader is "data network effect". Data network effect refers to when the growth of the viability and value of a product is directly proportional to the usage of the product on account of the increase in data accumulation. The authors consistently emphasise how important it is to realise this data network effect by harnessing product-in-use data, and thus create datagraphs. These datagraphs allow companies to not only provide solutions to customers to address issues related to the products in itself, they also provide the course of action for customers to maximise their own profits.

A valuable handbook to transition from a physical product-oriented company to a digital-services entity

While capitalising upon data network effect has contributed to the popularity of services provided by companies such as Uber, Airbnb, and social media platforms, the authors have noted that this is yet to be mobilised by many asset-heavy industries who are still on the edge about implementing, or even recognising the benefits that AI can render. Accordingly, the book advises industry leaders to engineer data network effects with the tripartite twins. By espousing the tripartite twins strategy, the authors convey that the design, manufacture and the performance of the product must not take place in silos, and successful creation of datagraphs and digitalisation requires the linking of these functions. With a strategy in place, the authors then guide their readers to the battlegrounds where these strategies can be employed. Fusion products, fusion systems, fusion services and fusion solutions are the four battlegrounds. Initiating value production from fusion products, the authors painstakingly take one through every avenue, ending at fusion solutions. Moreover, at all these avenues, four essential steps are outlined comprehensively for an industrial leader to follow: architecture, organisation, acceleration, and monetisation. Checklists have also been devised at the end of every avenue in order to understand whether the implementation is taking place according to the plan.

The authors bring their playbook to a conclusion by enumerating a set of principles and practices that may be adopted by industrial leaders to get started on their journey into the digital era and fusion strategy, such as creation of alliances even within overlapping ecosystems, and nurturing and cultivating fusion thinking within the C-suite.

Fusion Strategy: How Real-Time Data and AI Will Power the Industrial Future

Despite the credible insight that Fusion

Strategy provides for industrial leaders, there are certain limitations afflicting the text. The persistent regurgitation of the importance of digital technologies gets monotonous after the first chapter itself. Additionally, though the book refers to consent of customers being needed to access a variety of data for improvement of services, it fails to address major ethical considerations involving one's right to privacy in the absence of an individual-centric data protection law. Further, while there is emphasis on the intertwining of work done by humans and AI, there remains no reference to the negative impact of automation, specifically the obsolescence of blue-collared jobs. The exclusion of these factors signal an unfortunate divorce of social sciences from business strategy.

From the perspective of an industrial leader whose intent is to transition from a physical product-oriented company to a digital-services entity, Fusion Strategy is a goldmine. It is comprehensive and practical, and offers invaluable understanding of the future of industrial innovation by two people who have devoted their lives to strategy and technology. It only remains to be seen if this understanding will be utilised to usher in a future of promise or potential peril.

UTTARAN DAS GUPTA

IN 1924, EXACTLY 100 years ago, German philosopher Karl Haushofer wrote about the 'Pacific Age', envisaging the economic and political rise of Japan, India and China. In his book Geopolitik des Pazifischen Ozeans, he argued that the political and economic centre of the global power was gradually shifting from Europe to the Asian giants.

Haushofer, who would later serve as a mentor to Hitler, was, in fact, drawing upon the ideas and writings of other political scientists, most notably Japanese political economist Inagaki Manjiro, who is often credited with being the first person to use the term. The meaning and use of the term have changed over the decades, depending upon the contemporary political weather, at times sparking anxiety in the colonial powers. But it has continued to be in currency, and, one might argue, proven to be true, like a self-fulfilling prophecy.

In 1988, when former Indian prime

Beyond the Great Wall

Despite strategic and economic ties, India and China are often viewed only as regional competitors minister Rajiv Gandhi met Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping, the media started using the term 'Asian Century', projecting the dominance of Asian culture, politics and economics in the 21st century, succeeding the Pax Britannica of the 19th century and the American supremacy of the last one. Though it is nearly 40 years since that event, there is "a surprising lack of well-researched Indian scholarly material on the country (China), its history and culture," writes Shyam Saran, former foreign secretary, in the foreword to the book.

Saran, who also wrote How China Sees India and the World (2022), argues that "China is the most important current challenge for India and is likely to remain so for the foreseeable future". Ramachandran's book—a collection of his writings on China from 2008 to 2022—is an attempt to address this gap. Having spent several years in the country as a journalist, working for China Daily and Global Times and then as a senior editor for China-India Dialogue, he is able to provide essential context about the culture and people of China that other, more objective works, might lack.

One pitfall of publishing a collection of one's journalistic work is losing out on contemporary relevance. Do stories from 2008, when both India and China were very different nations, have any appeal for us now? Ramachandran insures against this by painstakingly drawing parallels and continuities between current development and their origins 10-15 years ago. For instance, he writes how Prime Minister Narendra Modi launched his flagship Digital India programme on July 1, 2015, only a few weeks after visiting China's hi-tech zone in Xi'an. He also writes extensively about how cooperation with China has played a significant part in the growth of digital inclusivity in India, an achievement that was headlined by the Modi government during the G20 summit last year.

PARAGLIDER FLIGHTS

Despite not using an engine, paraglider flights can last many hours and cover many hundreds of kilometres. However, flights of one to five hours and covering some tens of kilometres are more the norm

Adventure tourism coming of age

A renewed push by the govt & stakeholders concerned to provide a safety net for tourists undertaking adventure activities is upping the game in a country with a rich natural heritage

VAISHALI DAR

IT'S HARD TO beat the adrenaline rush associated with outdoor activities like bungee jumping, trekking, mountaineering, rafting or paragliding. However, a rising number of unfortunate incidents has raised concerns over the regulation of adventure sports and tourism in India.

Recently, a 26-year-old tourist from Hyderabad died in a paragliding accident in Himachal Pradesh's Kullu district. The incident apparently happened due to 'human error' after the pilot allegedly failed to secure the safety belt of the tourist.

A couple of years ago, two more tourists died under similar circumstances in the same area near Dobhi, one of the most popular paragliding spots in Kullu.

Incidentally, Uttarakhand—not Himachal Pradesh—has the greatest proportion of mountain climbing and trekking mortality in India, accounting for 43% of all cases, as per data record of 2018-22 by Ascent Descent Adventures Team, an adventure travel company specialising in mountain training and mountain climbing. Tamil Nadu is the second-most 'deadly' state, accounting for 29% of all deaths. Maharashtra is the third state on the list, accounting for 19% of all fatalities.

In comparison to other states, Himachal Pradesh has a low number of fatalities, accounting for only 8% of total deaths. Rajasthan has the lowest proportion of mountain climbing and trekking mortality in India, accounting for approximately 1% of total fatalities.

In light of the situation, safety guidelines and implementation of protocols by certified adventure tour operators and setting up training centres for well-trained guides seem to be the need of the hour. Recently, the Adventure Tour Operators Association of India (ATOAI)—the national representative body of adventure tour operators—rolled out a certificate course to enhance the skills of adventure guides. The event was held at the Indian Mountaineering Foundation in New Delhi, in collaboration with the Hanifi Centre, an outdoor education and environmental study institution. "The training programme is not just about skill enhancement, it's about fostering a culture of professionalism and safety within the adventure tourism community," says Ajeet Bajaj, president of ATOAI.

Industry stakeholders feel guides may need training depending on the destinations and activities. "Guides in the Himalayan region may undergo specialised training in handling emergencies involving mountains and high-altitude rescue methods. Activities involving water in coastal areas may necessitate rescue and water safety training. Initiatives from the government may concentrate on integrating new safety measures, guaranteeing certifications, and standardising training curricula. Regular evaluations and modifications to training curricula can tackle new issues and guarantee that mentors are prepared to manage a wide range of circumstances in various parts of India," says Rama Mahendru, country general manager-India, Intrepid Travel, a global adventure tour operator.

Steps have also been taken by the tourism ministry, which is working on formulating a model law on adventure tourism covering the obligations, institutional framework, penalties, registration and the provisions of insurance cover needed for the sector. The draft law has been circulated to all states and union territories for feedback, as recently announced by Union tourism secretary V Vidyavathi.

As per Bajaj, adventure tourism, before the pandemic, was a burgeoning global industry valued at $683 billion, with a remarkable 21% CAGR rate since 2012. The World Bank recognises it as the largest niche market, attracting approximately 238 million travellers annually. "India, with its rich natural heritage, is uniquely positioned to be a global leader in this sector. Our diverse geographical terrains, rich biodiversity and cultural heritage make us an unparalleled destination for adventure enthusiasts. With the right strategies and initiatives, we can potentially double our inbound tourist figures in the next five years through adventure tourism alone. This will not only boost our economy but promote sustainable development in remote regions of India," adds Bajaj.

Owais Altaf Syed, director of Skyview By Empyrean, a lifestyle and adventure destination in the Sanget Valley-Patnitop region of Jammu, feels a lot has to be done to ensure standardisation in safety protocols, infrastructure development, standardised safety standards, training and certification for guides who associate with tourists interested in adventure activities. "Embracing technology is the next big leap for tourism in India. Virtual reality experiences, or mobile apps that provide information about trails, safety guidelines, and navigation are already enhancing the experience in India," he says.

● INTERVIEW: RYOO SEUNG WAN, SOUTH KOREAN FILMMAKER

'It's dangerous when art and culture are seen like politics and economy'

One of the longest applause for a premiere at the Cannes Film Festival this year was reserved for a South Korean film. The Executioner, an action thriller directed by Ryoo Seung Wan, was the sequel to the filmmaker's 2015 blockbuster Veteran, the story of a police detective who probes a powerful conglomerate in the murder of a truck driver. Veteran became the fifth largest grossing Korean film ever, establishing Wan as the 'action kid' of South Korea. Nine years later, Veteran 2—part of the Midnight Screenings section of the Cannes festival—brings detective Seo Do-cheol back to investigate a serial murder. A prolific filmmaker who uses action as a narrative to "reflect the blurred lines between good and evil," Wan began making films in the middle of '90s when South Korean cinema was undergoing a renaissance after coming out of censorship witnessed during the dictatorship in the previous two decades. His films like Crying Fist (2005), The City of Violence (2006) and The Berlin File (2011) announced the arrival of the Korean action thriller along with such successful directors as Kim Jee-woon, Na Hong-jin and Park Chan-wook. Wan, an admirer of Indian action thrillers like Rajinikanth's Enthiran (Robot) and the Hrithik Roshan-starrer Krishi, talks to Faizal Khan in Cannes about the success of Korean cinema worldwide and his philosophy of filmmaking. Excerpts from an interview:

I HAVE NEVER BEEN TO INDIA, BUT MY CHILDREN LOVED WATCHING 3 IDIOTS. PERSONALLY, I LIKED THE MOVIE ROBOT

How has using action as a narrative led to the popularity of South Korean cinema?

When I started in the movie industry, action was not mainstream in Korea. There was something common to the people who made their debut in the late '90s and the beginning of the new millennium. Until the '80s in Korea, politically we were under a dictatorship. There were a lot of art forms that were censored, especially action movies. But starting in the '90s there was democracy in Korea and censorship disappeared. You had the Busan International Film Festival that was created in 1996. So the culture of Korean cinema underwent a renaissance.

What changed for Korean cinema in the '90s?

Beginning in the middle of '90s, there was a period of great adventure or experience in Korean cinema. Even the investment in cinema became more open to something new. From the late '90s until the middle of the first decade of the new millennium, you had an explosion of new cinema in Korea. I think at that time everybody had the courage to make movies that could be failures. That was the beginning of what people now enjoy in Korean movies.

You went through a tough childhood losing both parents early and had to do odd jobs to survive. Did that drive your ambition to become the successful filmmaker that you are today?

I don't know, it is a hypothesis. But one thing I am sure about is that poverty was a gift for me.

How do you give back to society?

I do philanthropy. But I don't want to boast about it. Usually, like any other people, we have to do that kind of work. But there is nothing to boast about. I am just the average person who does charity.

Asian cinema, from India, China, Korea and Japan, has been influencing people around the world. Do you think Asia could lead the world, which is facing so many problems like war and refugee crisis, in the cultural sense?

Why do you think culture has to lead? The first thing is to stay where it is. I think the word lead is very imperialistic. I think when you like something you could just go and see, for example, a movie. The way to lead, it implicates annihilating someone's culture or imposing on another culture. The best thing is to keep each other's originality, each other's characteristics and the respect for each other. I think that is what culture really means. I think lead is a very very dangerous thing. It means culture and art are approached like politics and economy.

Do you watch Indian movies?

I have never been to India, but my children loved watching 3 Idiots. Personally, I liked the movie, Robot. I really liked it. Also, the superhero movie, Krishi. I watched it at the Busan film festival and really enjoyed the movie.

Veteran* was released in 2015. How long have you been working on a sequel?

I wrote the sequel immediately after Veteran was released, but then I changed my mind. I rewrote it and each time it was a repetition. It took me a long time to think and write the sequel. But the finished version that you see now, I would say I wrote it just when I had finished writing my previous movie, The Smugglers, which was released last year. So I would say it took three years. We shot the film in the winter of 2022 in Seoul and its surroundings.

The Escape From Mogadishu*, the political action thriller you directed in 2021, dealt with the civil war in Somalia in the '90s and the escape of Korean embassy workers stranded in the Somali capital Mogadishu.

I couldn't go to Somalia to make the movie because from Korea it is forbidden to travel to Somalia. It is illegal, but I met a lot of Somali people, people who had experienced civil war in the country. We searched different archives and documents and talked to Somali students living in Korea.

What is the release date for Veteran 2?

We will release the sequel in Korea at the end of this year, followed by the global release.

What are you working on now?

Maybe I will begin shooting a new movie this winter. It is an espionage movie taking place in Russia.

STORIES AND TRENDS FROM INDIA AND AROUND THE WORLD THAT CAUGHT OUR FANCY

Dress code

The US team's uniform for Paris Olympics is under fire. It's not the first time

VAISHALI DAR

THIS YEAR, NIKE unveiled the track and field runner uniforms for Team USA for the Paris Olympics. One female outfit has been criticised for being 'skimpy and revealing', and tagged as 'sexist' on social media. The unitard, a red, white, and blue-striped garment with a high bikini line, is being called out to be inappropriate for the sporting event.

Female professional athletes have also mocked the unitard. Former US track and field athlete Lauren Fleshman wrote in an Instagram post. "Women's kits should be in service to performance, mentally and physically. If this outfit was truly beneficial to physical performance, men would wear it. This is not an elite athletic kit for track and field. This is a costume born of patriarchal forces that are no longer welcome or needed to get eyes on women's sports."

But unlike the Tokyo Olympics in 2020, when only briefs were offered, Nike has this time provided athletes with unitard options featuring both briefs and shorts. The American track and field sprinter, Sha'Carri Richardson has even modelled a unitard in compression shorts with fuller coverage at the brand's launch event last month. However, Nike's chief innovation officer, John Hoke, clarified in The New York Times that designers created 'nearly 50 unique pieces' for the US teams, including "a dozen competition styles fine-tuned for specific events".

Not just Olympics but across sports, women athletes and their uniforms have faced unexpected backlash, and questioned on how much body they display. For instance, tennis star Serena Williams. Everything she wore on the court, a unitard at the French Open and a tutu at Flushing Meadows, was criticised. But wearing it made her "feel like a superhero", she once said.

Williams' catsuit was banned after the 2018 French Open. Bernard Giudicelli, the president of the French Tennis Federation, said, "I believe we have sometimes gone too far. Serena's outfit this year, for example, would no longer be accepted. You have to respect the game and the place," while Williams won her first match post-pregnancy when she wore the suit not for comfort but for medical reasons.

Tennis star Sania Mirza's short skirts and badminton player Jwala Gutta's on-court dressing has been trolled for inappropriate outfits.

Time and again, sports uniforms have been questioned for their design and style. LVMH and Berluti unveiled uniforms for team France's 2024 Olympic opening ceremonies. The navy blue tuxedos with silk tie-dyed lapels reflecting the colours of the country are ensembles for both male and female athletes. But women tuxedos were sleeveless, and criticised for "rewriting the rules of athlete outfits", and compared to the uniforms worn by flight attendants.

Ralph Lauren made uniforms for the opening ceremony of the 2012 US Olympic team, and the committee came under public fire for manufacturing uniforms in China, which Ralph Lauren later announced that for the next games — the 2014 Winter Games in Sochi, Russia — the uniforms will be made in the United States.

Contrastingly, Haitian-Italian designer Stella Jean, a champion of diversity and inclusivity in fashion, has made uniforms for team Haiti at the Paris Olympics this year. Jean's uniform will be worn by the 15-athlete team at the opening ceremony, highlighting Haitian painter Philippe Dodard, whose artwork titled 'Passage' will be incorporated in the uniforms. The women's version features a full skirt bearing Dodard's artworks paired with a chambray shirt, woven in Haiti as part of the country's tradition in spinning the so-called blue cotton, a heritage that is progressively dying out. Layered on top is a sleeveless blazer crafted from recycled fabric to which the Haitian Olympic emblem is pinned.

In fact, France has decided to allow the women participants of other countries to wear a hijab if they wish, but has banned its own women athletes from wearing the hijab. Athletes from other nations will be free to wear religious symbols in the Paris 2024 athletes' village as they wish.

This stance has been criticised by some international bodies like the United Nation Human Rights. Amnesty International released a statement saying that prohibiting a Muslim woman from wearing a headscarf in public places violated her rights.

Apple's headset comes in handy in health space

From bariatric surgery to even while operating on the spine, doctors across the world are trying their hands on the device for improved outcomes

SHUBHANGI SHAH

WHEN APPLE UNVEILED its Vision Pro, the extended reality headset last year, not many would have thought it would be of use in the healthcare space too. From bariatric surgery to even while operating on the spine, doctors across the world are trying their hands on the device for improved outcomes.

At a hospital in New Delhi recently, the Vision Pro was used for bariatric surgery for a first-of-a-kind surgery, which lasted for 40 minutes, on a 45-year-old patient, who weighed 155 kg and had high blood pressure and obstructive sleep apnea. Here, the device offered an immersive 3D environment allowing the team of doctors to see the complicated anatomical structures with clarity.

"The successful integration of Apple Vision Pro into bariatric surgery marks a significant milestone in our journey towards revolutionising surgical procedures," said Dr Vaibhav Kapoor, co-founder, Pristyn Care, where the surgery was performed. "The successful use of Apple Vision Pro in these complex procedures opens up new possibilities in surgical precision and patient outcomes," said Dr Mohit Bhandari, a leading bariatric surgeon, who performed the procedure, as per media reports.

At Chennai's GEM Hospital, too, surgeons have been equipped with the Apple Vision Pro for laparoscopic surgeries. "There is no delay in transmission. I had a better vision and was connected to the real world. Whatever I can see on the monitor that displays the laparoscopic surgery can be viewed on this device, too," surgical gastroenterologist and COO of GEM Hospitals Dr R Parthasarathy was quoted as saying by a media house. "In addition, if I want to view a CT scan, I can simultaneously see it in the device itself. I can enlarge the view of the patient's internal organs to the size of a wall and see them in the greatest detail," he said and further highlighted the benefits especially when it comes to seeking experts' opinion while carrying out the procedure. "We can use the device to FaceTime with experts and even teach medicine. More than anything else, we don't have to suffer from neck pain after long surgeries," the expert highlighted.

Outside India, a group of surgeons in Brazil last month, used the headset during a shoulder arthroscopy. In another significant advancement, the Vision Pro was used during a delicate spine surgery done at the Cromwell Hospital in the United Kingdom. Here, instead of the surgeon, the nurse wore the headset, offering crucial support, media houses reported. The nurse, Suvi Verho, termed the tech a "game-changer" and highlighted its ability to eliminate guesswork along with human error during the surgery, as per reports. At the same time, surgeon Syed Aftab emphasised on the assistance provided and compared the experience to that when collaborating with a seasoned professional.

In another case in Florida, USA, the headset was used in a shoulder-joint replacement procedure.

Here, the Vision Pro apps are crucial, some of which are touted as revolutionary when it comes to the medical tech space, and help in everything from mental health support to surgery planning.

For example, Stryker's myMako app, which helps with surgical planning by offering surgeons minute surgical plan details in a 3-D native form. Then there is Siemens Healthineers' human anatomy both for clinical and educational purposes.

There is also Cedars-Sinai's Xiaia, which offers AI-powered conversational mental health support along with meditation in a virtual world. "At Apple, we believe technology can play an important role in the evolution of healthcare," said Sumbul Desai, MD, Apple's vice-president of health, in an Apple release. "With the ability to transform a user's space, display 3D objects at life-size, and see all relevant data in one view, the opportunities for health developers to use Apple Vision Pro to help improve procedural planning, education, and outcomes are limitless," Desai added. Unveiled last year and priced at $3,499, the Apple headset is designed such that one can toggle between the real and digital worlds, and offers utilities spanning work, communication, entertainment, and more.

HOW EXIT POLLS HAPPEN

Voting for the 18th Lok Sabha will end on June 1. Chatters, murmurs, discussions and dialogues around the upcoming exit polls can already be heard. Several political research agencies and TV news channels are already geared up to bring the 'most accurate' predictions on vote shares, seats, parties, and candidates. Here is a look at the phenomenon of exit polls in various democracies...

India

Exit polls in India go back to 1957 when the Indian Institute of Public Opinion conducted a poll during the second Lok Sabha elections. It was in 1996 that satellite TV made exit polls popular when the state-owned broadcaster Doordarshan asked the Centre for the Study of Developing Societies to conduct nationwide exit polls. Exit polls are conducted immediately after voting ends. The manner of conducting exit polls in the country is varied, its accuracy depends on factors like structured questionnaires, in-person or telephonic interviews of random people for fairness, sample size, demographic representation, data compilation, and count method.

In India, exit polls are bound by several rules such as Section 126A of the Representation of the People Act, 1951 which says that no person is allowed to conduct any exit poll and publish or publicise the results by print and electronic media or in any other manner while voting is undergoing. Under this Act, the Election Commission of India can place a ban in the intervening period that starts from the beginning of the hours fixed for poll on the first day till 30 minutes after the closing of polls on the last day in all the phases. This is done to ensure it doesn't influence voting at places where it is yet to be done.

As popular as they are, criticism abounds the exit polls as well. Critics argue that it is increasingly becoming estimate polls predicting seats instead of real exit polls as many show only the number of seats and not vote share or methodological details. There is also criticism of unreliability, unfairness, bias, fake interviews or polls, improper sample size or data collection, dishonest answers, and being sponsored or politically motivated. The other methods of gauging public opinion in India are opinion polls and approval ratings.

United States

In the US, a consortium of American news organisations like ABC, CBS, NBC, and CNN called the National Election Pool (NEP) conducts the only national exit polls in partnership with Edison Research. They make projections for midterm, presidential primary, and presidential elections in the country. Their method includes election day exit polls at voting locations, in-person exit polls at early voting locations, multi-mode (phone and web), surveys of by-mail voters, and probability-based sampling. Other exit polls are conducted by the Associated Press, Fox News Voter Analysis (Fox News and the AP), NORC, and AP VoteCast, among others. Gallup is renowned for its comprehensive opinion polls on various issues, presidential job approval rating, and other political leaders' ratings.

Pew Research Center is known for its in-depth opinion polls on social, political, and economic issues in the US. Daily tracking of the president's approval rating conducted by Rasmussen Reports is also quite popular.

France

In France, exit polls are conducted by many private agencies on presidential elections, European parliamentary elections, as well as municipal elections. Key agencies that conduct exit and opinion polls, as well as approval ratings in the country, are Ipsos, Ifop, Harris Interactive, Elabe, and OpinionWay in collaboration with many media organisations that include France Télévisions, Radio France, Le Monde, Le Journal du Dimanche, Paris Match, BFM TV, and LCI. France has also made it illegal to disseminate any poll results including exit or opinion surveys during the 'electoral silence'. French media cannot quote candidates or publish polls during this period.

Germany

Exit polls are also quite popular in Germany for federal, state, and European parliamentary elections. Organisations that are known for conducting exit polls in the country are Forschungsgruppe Wahlen, Infratest dimap, GMS (Gesellschaft für Markt- und Sozialforschung), Ipsos Germany, Forschungsgruppe Wahlen, and Allensbach Institute with media organisations like public-service television broadcaster ZDF and ARD and private broadcasters like RTL and n-tv. For opinion polls on social and political issues as well as on media houses, agencies like Allensbach Institute and Emnid are well-known, and for approval ratings of political figures and institutions, Infratest dimap, and Forschungsgruppe Wahlen are renowned.

KUNAL DOLEY

JUST CONSIDER THESE facts and figures. Over one-third (38.6%) of Indians have fatty liver or non-alcoholic fatty liver disease (NAFLD), a condition in which fat builds up in the liver. The phenomenon is not restricted to adults alone, as it affects nearly 35% of the children as well, as per a report prepared by the All India Institute of Medical Sciences (AIIMS), New Delhi, and published in the Journal of Clinical and Experimental Hepatology in June 2022.

Globally, the prevalence of NAFLD is estimated to be 30%, and is “considerably higher than previously estimated and is continuing to increase at an alarming rate”, as per Dr Abhideep Chaudhary, vice-chairman and HOD, hepato pancreatic biliary (HPB) surgery and liver transplantation, BLK-Max Super Speciality Hospital, Delhi.

The worrying aspect is that NAFLD—or metabolic dysfunction-associated fatty liver disease (MAFLD), as it has been recently renamed as—is a silent liver disease with few or no symptoms in its initial stages and hence remains largely unrecognised and unaddressed. “It is usually picked up during a routine blood test showing abnormal liver function results or during an ultrasound examination where the sonologist reports enlarged liver with excess fat in it. As it progresses, it may show signs of an enlarged liver on examination and fatigue. And with further progression, there could be swelling of feet, water in the abdomen and jaundice, suggesting that the liver has become cirrhotic,” says Dr Gourdas Choudhuri, chairman, gastroenterology, Fortis Hospital, Gurugram.

Another worrying aspect is that while only one of five persons affected might go on to develop liver cirrhosis or liver failure, those with NAFLD seem to have shorter life spans and a four-fold increase in heart disease, adds Dr Choudhuri.

Who's at risk?

NAFLD is a spectrum of liver disorders. In simple words, it's a buildup of extra fat in liver cells that is not caused by alcohol. “It is normal for the liver to contain some fat. However if more than 7-10% of liver weight is fat, then it's called fatty liver,” says Dr Amogh Dudhwewala, consultant, gastroenterology, Yatharth Hospitals.

Accumulation of extra fat leads to oxidative stress, leading to inflammation of liver or non-alcoholic steatohepatitis (NASH), a more severe condition that NAFLD can progress to, if left unchecked. “Persistence of NASH may lead to cirrhosis and complications including cancers. There are no symptoms early on except for lethargy and fatigue in some, others being completely asymptomatic,” adds Dr Dudhwewala.

Certain disorders are said to increase your risk of NAFLD, the first being obesity. Studies have shown that up to 50% of people with obesity have NAFLD and about 13% have NASH. Insulin resistance, a condition often linked to pre-diabetes or type 2 diabetes, can also contribute to fat storage in the liver. Besides, metabolic syndrome, a cluster of conditions including high blood pressure, high blood sugar, and unhealthy cholesterol levels, can also raise your risk of having NAFLD.

“The main reason behind the surge of NAFLD in India can be the change in lifestyle probably brought about by economic prosperity. Increased consumption of high-calorie, processed foods and sugary drinks and a decrease in physical activity and more sedentary behaviour contribute to factors like obesity, insulin resistance and metabolic syndrome, all of which are major risk factors for

Sounding the alarm on a silent epidemic

Non-alcoholic fatty liver disease is a worrying health concern. While it affects close to 40% Indians and about 30% globally, it remains largely unknown & unaddressed NAFLD,” explains Dr Somnath Chattopadhyay, consultant and head of department, Kokilaben Dhirubhai Ambani Hospital, Mumbai.

It is estimated that almost 70% diabetics can have NAFLD and one third of the NAFLD population is estimated to have NASH, says Dr Chaudhary of BLK-Max Super Speciality Hospital. “It is also probable that 5% of people with NASH may develop liver cancer. In the future, NASH is expected to be the most common cause of chronic liver disease and an indication for liver transplantation,” he adds.

Care and caution

Since liver disease is often linked to obesity and diabetes, managing these conditions is crucial. Limiting or avoiding alcohol, which is a major culprit in liver damage, is key. A balanced diet rich in fruits, vegetables, and lean protein, while avoiding processed foods, creates healthy liver function. Regular exercise helps manage weight and reduces the risk of fatty liver disease. “Minimise toxin exposure and practise safe sex to prevent viral hepatitis transmission. Vaccinations for hepatitis A and B are essential. Take medications exactly as prescribed, and schedule regular check-ups to monitor your liver health. By diligently following these steps, you can improve your liver's health and overall well-being,” says Dr Hitesh Chavda, director, department of surgical gastroenterology, Sterling Hospitals.

The good news about NAFLD is that it can often be reversed, especially in its early stages. The key to reversing NAFLD is through lifestyle modifications. “Losing even 5-10% of body weight can significantly reduce liver fat and improve liver function,” says Dr Chattopadhyay of Kokilaben Dhirubhai Ambani Hospital. According to him, this can be achieved by the following measures:

Diet: A balanced diet rich in fruits, vegetables and whole grains while limiting processed foods, sugary drinks and unhealthy fats.

Exercise: Regular physical activity, aiming for at least 30 minutes of moderate-intensity exercise most days of the week.

Weight management: If overweight or obese, losing weight is crucial.

Managing underlying conditions: Addressing conditions like diabetes, high blood pressure and high cholesterol can help improve liver health.

NAFLD is reversible before too much scarring has occurred in the liver and damage to other organs have taken place, says Dr Choudhuri of Fortis Hospital, Gurugram. “The backbone of management remains a healthy lifestyle—eating less and prudently, maintaining ideal body weight (a body mass index or BMI of 19 to 23.5 for Indians) and being regular with physical exercise. Those unable to achieve targets with lifestyle changes alone, can be helped with medications,” he adds.

Dr Choudhuri offers a few tips. “Increase fibre-rich foods, start your meals with a salad or a clear soup. They fill the stomach often making you consume less calories in the subsequent courses. Eat slowly—remember that the enjoyment of eating is in the mouth on the taste buds, not in the stomach that has been filled to the full. Say ‘no’ to sugar and artificial sweeteners,” he says.

As for exercise, Dr Choudhuri suggests reducing the usage of your car and elevator and getting into the company of people who are motivated walkers. “Change the way you entertain ourselves and friends. Shifting the focus from sweets and pastries to fruits and exercises such as dancing or playing outdoor games will also help,” he adds.

Last but not the least, all is not lost yet. “Scientists are actively researching medications for NAFLD, with some promising options already available which have shown to reduce the inflammation in the liver and prevent the development of NASH,” offers Dr Chattopadhyay of Kokilaben Dhirubhai Ambani Hospital.

UNSAFE DRINKING WATER

Microbiologically contaminated drinking water can transmit diseases such as diarrhoea, cholera, dysentery, typhoid and polio and is estimated to cause approximately 505,000 diarrhoeal deaths globally each year, as per WHO

EAT WELL

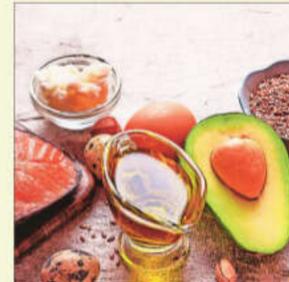

Aim for low calorie intake and a regular meal pattern

Avoid alcohol; consider diets high in antioxidants

Avoid mid-meal snacking; avoid high sugar and processed food or drinks

Replace saturated and monounsaturated fats with polyunsaturated fats

GET ACTIVE

■ Increase daily physical activity, aim for at least 10,000 steps a day; decrease sedentary time or try to break it up

■ Include a strength exercise regimen that targets major muscle groups such as biceps, triceps, quadriceps, pectorals and calves

■ Incorporate flexibility and balance exercises like yoga, tai chi or pilates to enhance overall physical function and reduce the risk of falls or injuries

■ Aim for 150 minutes of moderate aerobic exercises per week; activities like cycling, walking and swimming are effective

What nails tell you about your body

Colour and appearance of nails can be a good indicator of disease

FE FEATURES

WHAT DO THE colour of our nails tell us? Dr DM Mahajan, senior consultant, dermatology, Indraprastha Apollo Hospitals, says the colour of our nails can provide valuable insights into our overall health and well-being. Healthy nails should appear pinkish-white, with a smooth and uniform surface. Any discolouration or abnormalities may indicate underlying medical conditions or deficiencies.

For instance, pale or white nails can be a sign of anaemia or poor circulation, while yellow or greenish nails may indicate a fungal infection or respiratory issues. Blue or purple discolouration can signify problems with the heart or lungs, while dark streaks or lines can be an early warning sign of melanoma, a type of skin cancer. Additionally, brittle or ridged nails may suggest a lack of certain nutrients or hormonal imbalances. By paying attention to the colour and appearance of our nails, we can potentially detect early signs of various health issues and seek appropriate medical attention.

Does it signify disease, and how?

Yes, the colour and appearance of our nails can be an indicator of various diseases or health conditions. For instance, yellow nails with a chalky appearance may suggest a fungal infection, while brown or black streaks could be a warning sign of melanoma, a type of skin cancer. White nails can be a symptom of kidney disease, diabetes, or liver problems, while bluish nails may indicate low oxygen levels in the blood, potentially linked to respiratory or cardiovascular conditions. Brittle or spoon-shaped nails can be associated with iron deficiency anaemia or thyroid disorders. Furthermore, ridges, pitting, or horizontal lines on the nails can be caused by various factors, such as injuries, nutritional deficiencies, or certain medications. By recognising these nail changes and consulting a healthcare professional, individuals can receive timely diagnosis and appropriate treatment for the underlying condition before it progresses further.

Do striations also indicate any health condition?

Yes, striations or abnormal lines on the nails can be indicative of various underlying health conditions. Vertical ridges or striations running from the cuticle to the tip of the nail are common and often harmless, especially as we age. However, horizontal ridges or lines across the nails, known as Beau's lines, can be a sign of a more serious issue. These lines are typically caused by an interruption in the nail's growth due to a specific event or illness.

Beau's lines may indicate conditions such as diabetes, peripheral vascular disease, zinc deficiency, or severe viral infections like pneumonia or Covid-19. They can also be a result of high fever, chemotherapy, or severe malnutrition. In some cases, these lines may be the first visible sign of an underlying condition, prompting further medical evaluation and treatment. Additionally, discoloured striations or lines can suggest conditions like melanoma or other pigmentation disorders.

Can serious conditions like cancer also be indicated through nails?

Yes, changes in the appearance of nails can sometimes be an early indicator of conditions like cancer. One concerning sign is the development of dark lines or streaks running longitudinally along the nails, which can be a manifestation of subungual melanoma, a form of skin cancer that affects the nails. Additionally, unexplained clubbing of the nails, where the nails curve downward and the fingertips become bulbous, may be associated with lung cancer or other respiratory diseases. Furthermore, certain nail abnormalities can be secondary symptoms of cancers affecting other parts of the body. For instance, pale or white nails with a thin, flat appearance may indicate anaemia, which can be a consequence of cancers like leukaemia or lymphoma. Yellow or brown discolouration of the nails can sometimes be linked to kidney or liver cancers. While these nail changes are not definitive signs of cancer, they can serve as red flags prompting further medical evaluation, particularly when accompanied by other symptoms. Early detection is crucial in the management of cancer, and vigilance towards any unusual nail changes can potentially lead to timely diagnosis and treatment.

REWATI KARAN

How do you think influencers help politicians/political parties? Social media influencers are filling the gap created by TV news channels. Political parties want to tap the young audience who don't watch TV news.

Do political parties want to work with you? Has anyone approached you to create content for them? I have been approached by political parties. I won't name them but I have declined to work with them. If I had been working like those influencers, I, too, would have been invited to the creator awards.

When asked about influencers, the Congress cites 'big guys' like you sharing Rahul Gandhi's video (reply on Narendra Modi's tempo remark on Adani, Ambani issue). Is there any association with the party? AAP also shares your videos on their social media platforms. Do you think both parties are trying to appropriate you or your content in online election campaigning? I share and post videos voluntarily; nobody asks me to do anything. I have no association with the Congress or any other party. Many fan pages, unofficial accounts, and even official political party accounts share my videos. As long as they don't mislead viewers by distorting my videos or infringing upon my rights, I don't have a problem with that. BJP leaders have also shared my old videos when it suits their agenda. For example an Instagram post by Kiren Rijju sharing an old video on Congress and corruption.

How do you balance between your political inclination and your work on social media? I do have my political inclinations, but I choose to share or engage with posts by parties that I find somewhat adhering to principles like rationalism and liberty.

How different or similar are collaborations of social media influencers and political parties from collaborations with brands? What is your general overview of social media influencers and their collaboration with political parties and politicians? Do you think it is right for them to work with political parties? Social media influencers don't realise that political parties are not branded products to promote. Influencers should not be completely advertising platforms. I don't find it ethical for influencers to take money from political parties.

Do you think this kind of online canvassing will become more aggressive in the times to come? Yes, as more and more people use social media and get access to the Internet.

What standards do you follow for yourself when choosing topics for videos, especially political, and working with brands? I choose political topics to educate people as I feel democracy is in danger in India. The political content I create, I feel people should be made aware of what is going on in the country. I choose to work with brands carefully so that I am not promoting anything harmful.

Will you be willing to professionally collaborate with political parties you do not believe in? I won't be willing to collaborate with political parties I don't believe in.

What kind of responsibilities do influencers have when it comes to shaping opinions online? In short, many responsibilities such as authenticity (they should remain true to themselves), transparency, accuracy (share accurate, factual information and promote scientific temper and rationalism among people), and sensitivity (being careful of promoting anything that might be discriminatory to a certain group of people and should be respectful towards all individuals and groups).

March of the POLL-FLUENCERS

Political parties are betting on social media influencers to amplify their messages in the great Indian election season. But are these digital campaigners also capable of swinging votes?

REWATI KARAN
AT FIRST GLANCE, he may look like just another youngster—complete with a beard and a hoodie—out to have his share of fun on Instagram Reels. But start listening to the video, and you will realise that the native of Bulandshahr in Uttar Pradesh has a serious message to convey.
"On May 7, people in 12 states will stand in queues to cast their votes. Do vote, but remember that the red light that glows after you press the EVM button for BJP will also be a red alert for your mothers, daughters and sisters. Will you be able to accept it?" he asks, gesticulating and emphasising his words with voice modulation.
"In the past 10 years, the BJP government has done many things that need to be questioned," says Arpit Sharma, the creator of the video and a chartered accountant by profession working in Ireland.
The video, which was shared by the Aam Aadmi Party (AAP) on its social media platforms with a caption in Hindi that said, "Do watch this video before casting your vote," is one of several such made by influencers to criticise political parties, appeal voters to make an informed decision on their choice of candidate or party or simply highlight a pressing issue as the election season gains momentum.
The idea is to make people aware of the "wrongdoings" of the parties or to focus on their "good work," says the political influencers, or 'poll-fluencers' as they are also referred to. The political parties, in turn, are betting on them to swing votes or to amplify their message across audiences.
The reliability factor
Sharma, who earlier worked with a fact-checking website, believes influencers bring in factors such as reliability, along

Why politicians turn to influencers

IN HIS NEW book, The Deception Industry: The Art, Craft, and Science of Hacking the Electorate, published by Rupa Publications, journalist Herjinder Singh Sahni writes: "Now, many social media sites find advantages in associating with politicians. They believe that if political figures join them, their following will grow rapidly. This has also occurred. Politicians see this as a lucrative deal in many ways. For example, for interviews, such influencers are chosen who do not ask very difficult questions or raise counter-questions on any answer. Giving interviews to mainstream media journalists may pose both of these risks."
YouTuber Dhruv Rathee thinks influencers are filling the gap created by TV news channels. "Political parties want to tap the young audience who don't watch TV news," he says. This division between TV audience and social media audience has a bit of satire and quirkiness, and this makes them click with their audiences.
Like Sharma, several other influencers have made inroads into social media feeds, cutting across political lines. While those like Dhruv Rathee, The Ranting Gola and Gaurav Karan Chaudhary are often found criticising the ruling government, finding space in the social media accounts of the Congress and AAP, among others, others like badminton player PV Sindhu, author Amish Tripathi, Kotak Mahindra Bank founder Uday Kotak, journalist Dilip Mandal, JPMorgan CEO Jamie Dimon and spiritual leader Sri Sri Ravi Shankar talk about BJP and PM Narendra Modi's work.
Influencers help to present politicians in a more humanised light, feels Joyjeet Pal, a researcher and associate professor at the University of Michigan, USA, who has worked on a research paper on social media influencers in Indian politics. "In general, as citizens, we only see politicians on stage or in their political form. When we get a chance to see them talking about their food or travel preferences, it gives us a different and more relatable version of the politician. This is useful for the political brand without feeling like an explicit advertisement," he adds.
As per Ankit Lal, founder of Politique Advisors, a new-age strategic consulting agency based in Noida, each party has a set of core supporters but they are not enough to take them beyond the victory line. "That is where influencers, who have a neutral audience following, become very important. The entire fight is getting the neutral audience to talk about the issues that the party wants to talk about and eventually vote for them. It becomes important in the larger perspective," adds Lal, who earlier worked as the head of AAP's IT cell.
Influencers are like human-sized

WITH A VARIED AUDIENCE, SOCIAL MEDIA INFLUENCERS ARE LIKE HUMAN-SIZED BLOWHORNS FOR THE GOVERNMENT OR POLITICAL PARTIES TO LEVERAGE

blowhorns with a varied audience making them a perfect medium for government or political parties to leverage. For example, a youth might skip a full-page ad on a government scheme but he or she is likely to notice it is subtly talked about in a language or expression relatable to them, from someone they know on social media.
As such, even the Election Commission of India (ECI) has not been able to ignore the role of influencers during the elections. For instance, cricketer Sachin Tendulkar has been roped in to urge people to vote for the 2024 Lok Sabha polls. "Motivation of voters through influencers and brand ambassadors and other icons has been a regular activity of the voter education division from its inception in 2010. It has been effective," former chief election commissioner SY Qurashi told FE.
He, however, clarifies: "We just have to be careful that they are non-partisan."
"Non-partisan is the key word." Collaborating with brands is commercial but with political parties, their ideological thought process becomes visible," says Arpit Sharma, who refrains from working with a political party for the same reason. "We become a part of the problem that the party's ideology has. We, too, have some social responsibility," he adds.
On parties such as the AAP and Congress sharing his videos, he says, "I will gain a few more followers as their reach is far more. In the past, too, the Youth Congress shared my video but didn't give any credit." Like Sharma, Rathee and Chaudhary, too, were approached by parties but they refused to work with them. They cited reasons like being wary of their image online, political affiliation impacting their brand, and ethical concerns. "I don't want to do political associations because I will have to compromise my stand and my values. I will be judged 'anti' or 'pro' and I don't want to go into that category," says Chaudhary, a 35-year-old Faridabad-based social media creator, currently pursuing law to enhance his knowledge base for his explainer videos. "I personally believe when you are in a medium where you share information for people, there should not be conflict of interest. It is more of a moral stand. You should give a complete picture and that's a core responsibility of every creator who is creating videos on any such issue," Chaudhary says, adding: "When you associate with such a political group, you tend to ignore their cons and that is a kind of brainwashing."

Micro and regional influencers gaining traction

This gives credibility, says Dave. "It creates a lot of trust among the citizens when a third person who is an independent influencer speaks well about our schemes and their implementation," he explains, adding how most of these influencers are "admirers of PM Modi" who "make videos on their own" because they "want to do their bit in the campaign".

the Congress, on the other hand, started roping in influencers during its Bharat Jodo Yatra. Vaibhav Walia, chairman of the party's communications war room for 2024, says, "There were a lot of influencers who reached out, joined the yatra and interacted with Rahul Gandhi. Later on, we realised that it's a good effort and we continued it."
The grand old party has been mostly working with regional influencers, with an influencer management unit in place as part of its communication strategy.
Talking about how the party has been approaching the influencers, Walia claims, "If you look at the big guys, Dhruv Rathee shared Rahul Gandhi's video and Ravish Kumar has been sharing thoughts on us. They are doing it voluntarily. If they reach out to us for any content or any support, we are happy to give them but they're mostly doing it on their own."
Expanding on what the party tells the influencers who reach out to the party, he says, "We tell them about the content they can post for us, about any video that Rahul ji has done or any issue he has spoken about or we need some support for. When Bharat Jodo Yatra was going on, we would tell them we were travelling from their area and whether they could talk about it."
"We are doing all of that as part of our efforts but this is voluntary and people are coming in with their support," he claims.
Walia, however, is concerned about influencers trying to "sail in both ships."
"It becomes a little tricky and embarrassing. Ideally, we would want the influencers to stick to one side. That way, they will have more credibility, but you can't control these things," he adds.
According to Walia, the party, however, doesn't give its time or engage with extreme right-wing influencers. "So, we do some testing and background checks. If somebody is posting or trolling RG in the past or posting extreme right-wing content or hateful content, we don't engage with them," says Walia.
Walia also says that the Congress' influencer strategy is regional. "BJP, on the other hand, is doing well nationally because they have a lot of money and power. Modi did creator awards from the government. That was an influencer management show which the government organised for the party which is a clear misuse of government resources," he adds.
Meanwhile, the AAP, which came into being riding on the power of social media during the India Against Corruption movement, says that even though its strategy for social media influencers is not quite a part of the larger election campaign, they are being done in the 2024 elections on an experimental basis.
Ritik Gupta, AAP's Delhi social media coordinator, told FE that the influencers who are creating videos for the party share their ideas with them, show them the demo and they ask them to make corrections, if any, such as "offensive words".
"The influencers and our team work in coordination for approval," he says, adding: "We don't give any benefit to anyone. We just give them ideas or content."
"They come to us because of ideology, and how things are working in Delhi and Punjab. We have all kinds of influencers, even those whose follower count is average but content is good," he explains.
The AAP's strategy is only to convey its message to the public, says Gupta. "We tell them that positive campaigning should be done. We want to talk about our work."
While they are self-motivated to share information among the public, Gupta admits that they seek publicity too, and influencers are wary of their audience. "Influencers have their choice. Usually, if they are working with another party, they don't come to us because they can even be trolled," adds Gupta, who has been working with the party since the last assembly elections in Delhi.
Reel or real impact?
Experts share mixed opinions on the impact of influencers during elections. Pal of the University of Michigan says their 'influence' will differ nationally and regionally. "Influencers often operate at the national level and their fans are rarely restricted to a single geography. Therefore, the goal of the interviews with influencers is to move the direction of the narrative in a preferable direction, rather than to immediately influence votes," he explains.
So, can these interviews get converted into votes? Pal believes micro-influencers have a stronger viability as their appeal is valuable to a specific small region.
Election analyst Tiwari believes influencers don't have the potential to make any difference in terms of shaping opinion online. "When people see the programmes by influencers, they are smart enough to figure out that these are paid promotions. I don't think it has any significant impact," he says, emphasising that it's a "hygiene factor" as "one party does this, another has to also do it to counter this and neutralise this but there's no benefit."
Senior journalist Herjinder Singh Sahni, in his book The Deception Industry: The Art, Craft and Science of Hacking the Electorate, however, writes that joining election campaigns can make them be seen with the party label. "Political parties are not products, and political affiliation in an emotionally polarised society might cause future difficulties for some influencers. However, individuals developing election strategies never think about the long term," he adds.

Bryson DeChambeau tees off on the eighth hole during the final round of the PGA Championship golf tournament at Valhalla Golf Club

Power shift

Schauffele's Major win, DeChambeau's surge and more

Meraj Shah

IN KIPLING'S WORDS, "...that night we stormed Valhalla, a million years ago." Bryson DeChambeau certainly fit the part of a rampaging Norse God as he laid siege to the Valhalla Golf Club in Louisville at the 2024 PGA Championship. With his trademark booming drives, penchant for playing for the crowd, and gutsy play, the LIV Golf Tour player fought tooth and nail on the final day. They weren't in the same group — DeChambeau playing two holes ahead of Xander Schauffele — but each player knew they were up against each other in the final moments of the tournament: the roars echoed around the golf course as DeChambeau dropped another brilliant birdie on the 72nd hole to shoot 64 and tie Schauffele at 20-under. Under the gun — Schauffele, who's been in the mix so many times in Major Tournaments — delivered an incredible birdie of his own on the last to edge past DeChambeau by a stroke and win his first Major. While these two players provided the fireworks, the final day was replete with excitement with the likes of Viktor Hovland, Shane Lowry, and Collin Morikawa making runs at Schauffele's lead. It was precisely the kind of nail-biting finish we haven't seen in professional golf for a while now.

"It's hard to believe we miss Patrick Reed, but you know, that's the way it is..." quipped Padraig Harrington last week. It was a backhanded compliment: Reed was possibly the most unpopular player on the PGA Tour before he left to join the LIV Golf Tour. But Harrington was referring to the stacked field at the PGA Championship — considered to be the most competitive all year on the PGA Tour — that included a number of players from LIV. The Irishman didn't make the cut at the PGA Championship but stuck around to watch the action on the weekend. Speaking to the Golf Channel on the sidelines of the KitchenAid Senior PGA Championship Harrington was articulating a widespread sentiment — at least amongst fans — that the internecine rivalry in pro golf has made pro golf less fun to watch. "Like, Bryson was box office last week. He really, really helped that tournament, helped push Xander's win on. It was fantastic, interesting, exciting watching," Harrington added. Going by the rousing support for DeChambeau at the event, it was clear that the Louisville fans were firmly behind the LIV player: an indication that fans care very little about the LIV Golf vs PGA Tour issue. The LIV Golf players, at least the likes of DeChambeau, Jon Rahm, Louis Oosthuizen, Sergio Garcia, Phil Mickelson, Joaquin Niemann, and Dustin Johnson, are extremely popular, and to not have them in the field at PGA Tour events is a no-brainer for everyone (PGA Tour included). DeChambeau won over even more fans at the PGA Championship: after watching Schauffele drain the birdie on the final hole, DeChambeau, who was back on the range, headed straight back to the 18th green and was one of the first to congratulate the champion. Classy stuff.

It's no small testament to the quality of his game this season that when Scottie Scheffler finishes out of the top five then it almost feels like a failure. Scheffler finished tied-eighth, which, given the astonishing nature of his off-course problems, was very creditable. What happened to the top-ranked player in the world as he was driving to the Valhalla GC to tee it up on the second day of the PGA Championship was somewhat surreal. And it all began with the tragic death of a tournament worker in a pedestrian accident early that morning. Scheffler reached the golf club early with the intention of getting a workout before his tee time. There was a road closure due to the accident that led to Mills' death. What happened next is somewhat varied, depending on who you ask, but here are the verifiable facts. Scheffler's car was flagged down by an officer: something that he says he missed. Whether that was on account of the darkness or some other misunderstanding, it led to the officer arresting Scheffler and bundling him into a police car after which he was taken to a police station where his mugshot was taken and he was put in a cell. Images of Scheffler warming up in that cell have since gone viral — he was able to get released and make it back to the course before his tee time. The world number one later described it to the press as "a big misunderstanding." Whatever the details may be, at the time of writing, Scheffler is still charged with the second-degree assault of a police officer, third-degree criminal mischief, reckless driving, and disregarding signals from officers directing traffic. Cut to the chase, the fact that Scheffler managed to get his game together and finish in the Top 10 speaks volumes about the man's mental strength.

The police mugshot picture reminded me of the only other time I've seen another golfer in one was when Tiger Woods was arrested in 2017 for Driving Under Influence (that was later reduced to a reckless driving charge). Seven years back Woods' life unravelled in dramatic fashion. A series of misfortunes — personal, professional, and physical — laid the big cat low for years. Somehow, and in a way only he can, Woods has managed to put it all back together: back to cordial terms with his ex-wife, being a model dad, winning a Major, and getting back to playing competitive golf, albeit sporadically, again. Woods leads the player representation on the 'influential policy board' of the PGA Tour that's negotiating an agreement with the LIV Golf Tour. He needs to bring his tremendous heft, and will, to bear upon both sides to come up with a win-win situation for everyone. Especially the fans.

ACROSS THE AISLE

P Chidambaram

The guiding principle of the new government that will be elected in June 2024 must be 'pivot to the poor and the excluded'. Congress' manifesto acknowledged this obligation; hence it became the 'talking point' throughout the country. The BJP spent most of its lung power and money power denouncing the Congress' manifesto or, rather, the imaginary version

THESE ARE THINGS that we see but do not notice. There are things that we read but they do not register. There are things that make us flinch but we shrug them off. That is the reality of existence (we call it living) of Indians, a substantial number poor, fighting prejudice and discrimination, fiercely competitive, and driven by conflicting aspirations.

Drive down near midnight on Kolkata's Central Avenue: few will notice the number of people sleeping on the roadside or ask why these people do not have a shelter at night? Drive through any junction of roads in Delhi: the number of children who beg or sell flowers or towels or pirated books will not trigger the obvious question, why are these children not in school? Drive through the parched, dry lands in many parts of India, there is no sign of water, nothing seems to grow on the land, yet thousands of people live on the land, and few will wonder what is their source of livelihood?

Congress' manifesto LS 2024 acknowledged that, over the years, especially in the last three decades, India's economy has grown. The growth manifested itself in the burgeoning middle class, abundance of consumer goods, a mobile phone in every hand, good inter-state roads, and the spanking malls, cinemas and pubs that have become the 'town squares' of urban India. However, the picture of 'shining India', cannot hide the ugly truths that are at once a reminder of our failures and an opportunity to correct our course.

Economy mirrors society

UNDP drew the poverty line at earnings per person per month of ₹1286 (urban) and ₹1089 (rural), and estimated the number of poor persons in India at 22.8 crore. If anything, it is a gross underestimate. According to the World Inequality Lab, the bottom 50% of the people (71 crore) own 3% of the national wealth and earn 13% of the national income. The government's Household Consumption Expenditure Survey (HCSE) estimates the household consumption per month of the bottom 50% as ₹3094 (rural) and ₹2001 (urban). It does not require great mathematical skills to estimate the consumption expenditure of the bottom 20% of the people. They practically own nothing, earn little and, as a household, consume barely enough to exist on this earth. On the Global Hunger Index, India's rank is 111 out of 125 countries.

Congress leader Rahul Gandhi during an all-women election meeting for Lok Sabha polls in New Delhi

Two markers: Caste and inequality

Of the poor, according to the HCSE, the OBC are near the average level and the SC and ST are the poorest. It is no surprise that the economic hierarchy mirrors the social hierarchy that has been entrenched in the country for thousands of years, and the social hierarchy is based on caste. The very poor and the very oppressed do hard scabrous manual work at the bare minimum wage. 15.4 crore persons are active, registered workers under MGNREGA. They are given work, on average, for 50 days a year.

Meanwhile, at the other end, the top 10% of the population earn 57.7% of the national income. The share of just 9223 individuals is 2.1% and the share of just 92,234 individuals is 4.3%. Carrying a price tag per car of between ₹3.22 crore and ₹8.89 crore, 103 Lab-horginis were sold in India in 2023. The rich showed their gratitude when, apart from corporates, 362 individuals bought the infamous electoral bonds worth ₹757 crore and 'donated' the sum to political parties. All political parties are beholden to their donors.

Have achche din arrived? Has India or have Indians become Atmanirbhar? India's trade deficit with China alone (yes, the country whose troops have occupied Indian territory and barred patrolling by Indian troops) was $100 billion in 2023-24. Is this the dawn of Amrit Kaal? For how long will the people be deceived and lied to?

The two markers

Unless political parties acknowledge that the two markers of Indian polity and economy are caste and inequality, we cannot strike at the root of poverty, discrimination and oppression. Congress' manifesto drew attention to the dark side of the BJP's narrative of 'development' and made a few simple promises to key stakeholders:

- To the SC, ST & OBC
 - To conduct a nation-wide socio-economic and caste census and collect the data that will strengthen the agenda for affirmative action.
 - To lift the 50% cap on reservations for SC, ST and OBC.
 - To fill all the backlog vacancies in posts reserved for SC, ST and OBC within one year.

To the youth

- To pass a Right to Apprenticeship Act, guarantee a one-year apprenticeship and a stipend of ₹100,000 a year, and provide jobs.

- To fill the nearly 30 lakh vacancies in the central government.
- To waive outstanding education loans and unpaid interest.

To women

- To launch the Mahalakshmi scheme and provide ₹100,000 a year to the poorest families.
- To raise the minimum wage for MGNREGA work to ₹400 per day.
- To reserve 50% of central government jobs for women.

Pivot to the poor

The guiding principle of the new government that will be elected in June 2024 must be 'pivot to the poor and the excluded'. Congress' manifesto acknowledged this obligation; hence it became the 'talking point' throughout the country. The BJP spent most of its lung power and money power denouncing the Congress' manifesto or, rather, the imaginary version. As the election rolled through the seven phases, the battle was joined between those determined to protect the status quo and those determined to disrupt the status quo. Keep your fingers crossed until June 4.

Modi's dog whistles have hurt his campaign

SOMETHING THAT has been said often during this endless election campaign is that Narendra Modi's biggest asset is Rahul Gandhi. What is said less is that in this Lok Sabha campaign the opposite could also be true. When our Imperial Dynasty's heir first talked of how he had opened a shop of love in a bazaar of hatred, I dismissed it as a line that sounded as if it had been borrowed from a B-grade Bollywood film. But in recent days, as the Prime Minister's dog whistles against Muslims have become louder and more absurd, I have found myself thinking hard about how I would have voted (I did yesterday) if I were Muslim. I did not need to think too hard. I would have voted for any candidate who could defeat the BJP. The Prime Minister has made it clear that he does not need Muslims to vote for him.

The question that puzzles me is why a politician as skilled as Modi has not noticed how much this has helped the man he sneeringly describes as a prince. He deliberately uses the Urdu word Shahzada instead of the Hindi word Rajkumar, so it becomes another dog whistle. He has also said many outrageous, untrue things stooping lower than expected of a man who is Prime Minister of the world's largest democracy. He described the Congress Party manifesto as being one that the Muslim League would have produced. It is not. He said Hindu wealth would be stolen by a Congress government and distributed among "infiltrators" who had "too many children". And for no valid reason has said in more than one interview that he would dedicate his life to prevent reservations based on religion. These assertions are based on so little evidence that it is not just Muslims he has alienated but millions of Hindus who do not believe that ethnic and communal tensions will help India.

The odd thing is that in whipping up this hysteria he has distracted from the real case he can make against Rahul Gandhi. This is that his economic ideas are terrifying. As my friend, Sadanand Dhume, wrote last week, they would turn India into "Venezuela on the Ganges". In a recent speech Rahul said he was born in "the system" and knew it well. He reminded us (unnecessary reminder) that he was born and had lived most of his life in the Prime Minister's house. It was this that had taught him that "the system" is against the poor and those of low caste. He does not explain why if he knew all this, he did not persuade Granny, Daddy or Mummy to change the system.

What he outlined instead were plans for what he will do if he gets a chance to become India's leader. He will change "the system" by redistributing wealth and by reserving jobs at the highest levels of government and even in government contracts for those who come from deprived castes. It brought back for me memories of another prime minister with similar ideas. Vishwanath Pratap Singh wanted even doctors to be chosen based on their caste. Remember?

Then when he developed kidney problems, he spent long summer months in London, at taxpayers' expense, because he said that not only were doctors better but the water for his dialysis was cleaner. It was a shocking admission and never got the attention it deserved. It is to Modi's credit that he has pointed out, after Rahul's recent diatribe against "the system" that caste cannot be the basis for handing out government contracts because this would mean that bridges would be designed by those without the skills to build a bridge.

As someone who has spoken out clearly against reservations, his words had a special resonance for me. At the risk of facing fresh demands for my arrest, I shall repeat that we need less reservations, not more. What we need urgently are many more institutions that teach skills. Unemployment has emerged in this election, as it has in most elections, as the most troubling issue for young people but the real problem is not unemployment but unemployability.

Millions of our graduates are sadly people who do not find jobs, except in government through caste reservations, because their education has been so third rate that it would not be considered an education anywhere else in the world. If there is a vital problem that Modi has not addressed in this past decade, it is this. Hopefully, if he wins a third term, he will put this at the top of the agenda he has already laid out for his first hundred days. In my ever-humble opinion, a third term was a certainty when the election campaign began. If Rahul Gandhi says today that he can put down in writing that Narendra Modi will not become India's next prime minister it is because his "shop of love in the bazaar of hatred" has a definite appeal for Muslim voters.

Let me repeat that if I were Muslim I would not be voting for the BJP. Modi has said often that his idea of secularism is that his welfare schemes do not distinguish beneficiaries by their religion. Clearly there is much for him to learn about real secularism and how much it has benefited India. May I suggest a few conversations with the Khan Market gang whom he so reviles.

A new tree of flowering plants? For spring? Groundbreaking

By sequencing an enormous amount of data, a group of hundreds of researchers has gained new insights into how flowers evolved on Earth

VERONIQUE GREENWOOD

ALMOST EVERY PLANT we eat has a flower, and flowering plants populate every corner of the planet. But many questions remain about how and when this vast group emerged throughout the history of life on Earth. Now, after a heroic DNA sequencing effort, a collaboration involving hundreds of scientists has created a new family tree for flowering plants. Comparing gene sequences from more than 9,500 species — many of them dried specimens preserved in museums — scientists have sketched important branching points in the evolution of flowering plant life. In a study published in April in the journal Nature, the data they present suggests that more than 80% of major modern flowering plant lineages originated in a sudden burst of invention that began around 150 million years ago, in the late Jurassic Period.

Previous evolutionary trees of plants built by scientists often used the genome of the chloroplast, the organelle that allows plants to perform photosynthesis. These genomes could be sequenced with older methods. But scientists could not be confident that the patterns they showed were the same as what might be revealed by the plant's primary genome, stored in the cell's nucleus and more difficult to study. Then, five years ago, another scientific collaboration published detailed information about more than 1,100 plant species' nuclear genomes. That allowed the team behind the Nature paper to design new tools for sequencing nuclear genes from a huge variety of flowering plants, said William Baker, who leads the Kew Gardens Tree of Life Initiative and is an author of the new paper.

They used the tools on living plants, but the team also reached out to institutions in 48 countries with collections of dried plants to get samples of rare specimens. Four of the plants included in the analysis are already extinct, including the Guadalupe Island olive, which was sequenced using a dried sprig from 1875. In the end, the team used data from about 60% of all modern genera of plants.

A new, time-calibrated phylogenetic tree for angiosperms based on 353 nuclear genes

As they put the new evolutionary tree together, they found that it confirmed many of the relationships suggested by trees built from chloroplasts. However, there were surprises: The new data reshuffled the relationships of a number of plant groups, and some individual species were reclassified.

One finding that has surprised plant experts concerns a group of flowers that are so common, it's easy to take them for granted. Asteraceae, a family that includes daisies and sunflowers, did not fit into the new evolutionary tree in a way that the researchers expected. Depending on how the new data was used to build the tree, the daisies' links to surrounding flower families would shift, researchers found.

"In the past, when similar results were found, we used to blame the lack of data," said Alexandre Zuntini, a biologist at Kew Gardens and an author of the paper.

But now, with data less scarce than it used to be, such anomalies in the natural history of flowers cannot be easily dismissed. While no one can say what may have caused the anomaly, Dr Zuntini suggests one possibility is that swifter or messier evolution of that branch of flowers was occurring at the time.

The researchers also tried to link their evolutionary tree to known geological eras. On its own, the network of relationships shown by the DNA doesn't contain any dates. It's tricky to say, then, how many years ago a pair of species began to diverge.

But many flowering plants have been spotted in fossils, which can be dated. Using 200 fossils of flowers to add dates into the genealogy, the team pinpointed a great explosion in flowering plant diversity in the Late Jurassic and Early Cretaceous periods, when dinosaurs lived, starting around 150 million years ago. That supports estimates made in the past, Dr Baker said. Another surge in species numbers came about 40 million years ago, the new tree suggests, amid plummeting global temperatures.

The team is sharing its sequencing tools, and hopes other researchers will make use of them. They also hope to add still more species to this evolutionary genealogy in the future, Dr Baker said, as more data means a higher-resolution look at what happened in the past. Little by little, petal by petal, the history of flowering plants is coming into focus. —NYT

The itty bitsy spider inspired a microphone

If spiders use their webs like a large external eardrum, perhaps spider silk could be the basis for a listening device

JORDAN PEARSON

ENGINEERS AND SCIENTISTS have an enduring fascination with spidersilk. Similar to typical worm silk that makes for comfy bedsheets, but much tougher, the material has inspired the invention of lighter and more breathable body armour and materials that could make airplane components stronger without adding weight. Researchers are even using examples drawn from spiderwebs to design sensitive microphones that can one day be used to treat hearing loss and deafness and to improve other listening devices.

Spiders use their webs like enormous external eardrums. A team of scientists from Binghamton University and Cornell University reported in 2022 that webs allow arachnids to detect sound from 10 feet away.

When you hear a sound through your ear, what you're really experiencing are changes in air pressure that cause your eardrum to vibrate. This is how microphones work: by mimicking the human ear and vibrating in response to pressure.

Spider webs serve a similar purpose but use a different mechanism. Instead of vibrating when hit by a wave of pressure like a stick hitting a drumhead, they move with the flow of the air being displaced. Air is a fluid medium "like honey," said Ronald Miles, a professor of mechanical engineering at Binghamton. Humans navigate this environment without noticing much resistance, but silk fibres are buffeted about by the velocity of the viscous forces in air.

Dr Miles couldn't help but wonder if this principle could lead to a new kind of microphone.

"Humans are kind of arrogant animals," he said. "They make devices that work like they do." But he wondered about building a device to be more like a spider and sense "sound with the motion of the air."

He and his colleagues — including Jian Zhou, also a mechanical engineering professor at Binghamton, and Junpeng Lai, a postdoctoral researcher — designed and built a microphone inspired by the principles of natural spider silk. They presented their research on Thursday at the 186th meeting of the Acoustical Society of America in Ottawa.

The researchers' device is composed of an extremely thin cantilevered shaft (like a diving board) made of silicon that responds to minute fluctuations in air flow created by sound. To turn that into something humans can hear, a laser measures the shaft's subtle movements, like a spider decoding its web.

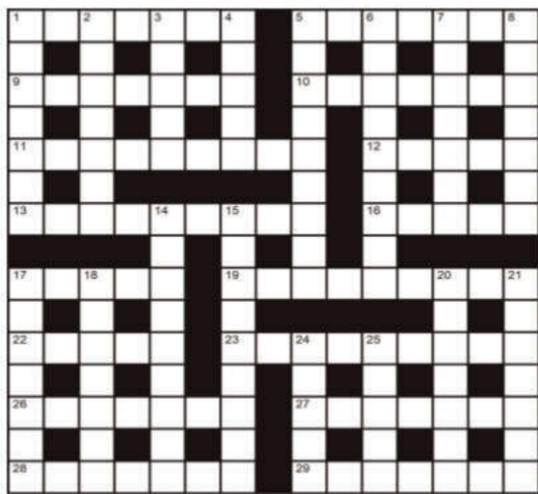

A drawback of typical microphones that sense pressure, Dr Miles said, is that making them better often means making them larger. Think of the chunky mics you see in a recording studio, compared with the spindly headsets used by a motivational speaker. With a spider-inspired microphone that responds to air flow rather than pressure, Dr Miles said, "you can make it quite a bit smaller without paying a price."

Helping people hear could be the natural next step.

Somewhat counterintuitively, our ears emit sounds when they vibrate in response to pressure. With funding from the National Institutes of Health, Dr Miles' team will develop a probe that measures these very quiet otoacoustic emissions. That could help with earlier detection of hearing problems in an infant's ear, for instance, and "then they can begin treatments for it," Dr Miles said. —NYT

In Kakuro sum puzzles, the numbers in the black squares refer to the SUMS of the digits, which you are to fill into the empty spaces directly below or to the right of the black square containing the number. No zeroes are used here, only the digits one through nine. An important point: A digit cannot appear more than once in any particular digit combination.

The Buzz Word is a substitution cipher in which one letter stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words and words using an apostrophe give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is by trial and error.

HELP PARTNER FIND RIGHT CONTINUATION

Today's deal is from a match-point event, where except for one, nobody chose the correct card to help partner find the right continuation.

W	N	E	S
-	-	pass	1C
pass	1H	3S	4C
pass	5C	All pass

Contract: 5C by south.

You lead the SA, partner plays the two and declarer follows with the seven. What do you do and why?

Dlr: East S Q J 3
Vul: None H A Q J T 6 3
D J 9
C J 5

H 9 8 7 2
D T 7 5 2
C 9 7 4 2	S

Analysis: Declarer rates to have seven cards in clubs headed by A-K-Q, and one other high card in the red suit, for him to bid at that level. Partner obviously has a seven-bagger with S-K-T-9-8-6-4-2. Partner's play of the two clearly indicates he does not want you to continue a spade. He may not know you have the stuff ace. In any case, you have to shift to a diamond. If partner has the HK, you will always get the trick as it cannot go anywhere.

How the play went: Most west shifted to the D2. East won with the ace, considered for a while, and played back a diamond. Declarer drew trumps and claimed the balance. The complete hands were:

SA	N	SKT98652
H 9 8 7 2	S 5 4
D T 7 5 2	H A Q 6 4
C 9 7 4 2	D -

S 7 4
H K
D K 8 3
CAKQT863

East played for singleton spade in declarer's hand and so decided that the defence should cash the DK in west's hand. It was not to be. Correct defence: West should switch to the D7; high denying interest and low showing the king, thereby warning partner not to play back the suit. East will get the message and cash SK to defeat the contract. Scientific, don't you think?

In Bihar, PM warns of Tejawshi arrest, says INDIA bloc can do mujra for votes

SANTOSH SINGH Patna, May 25

REITERATING HIS ALLEGATION that the INDIA bloc wanted to carve out a quota for minorities, Prime Minister Narendra Modi on Saturday said the Opposition could perform mujra or do "slavery" for its "vote bank", but he would thwart any attempt to divert the SC, ST, OBC reservation. While he did not name RJD leader Tejawshi Yadav, Modi, who addressed a series of rallies in Bihar, warned that the "countdown" for arrest had started for those behind the alleged land-for-jobs scam.

Addressing a rally in Karakat, Modi said: "Main aaj Bihar ke logon ko ek aur guarantee de raha hoon. Jinhone Bihar ke garibon ko lutkar naukri ke badle me zamin likhwayi hai, kaan kholkar sun lo, unka bhij jai jaane ka countdown shuru ho chuka hai. Yeh jaise hi helicopter me chakkar markar chakkar pura hoga, jail ka raasta tay ho jayega (Today, I am giving one more guarantee to the people of Bihar. Those who looted the poor to get land registered in lieu of jobs should listen carefully, their countdown for going to jail has started. Once he completes his rounds on the helicopter, his road to jail will be finalised)."

At another rally in Patliputra, he said: "Bihar is the land which has given a new direction to the fight for social justice... INDI alliance ko apne vote bank ki ghulamani karni hai to kare. Unko wahan jaa ke mujra karna hai to bhikare. Mein SC, ST, OBC aarakshan ke saath datakar ke khara hoon, khara rahunga. Jab tak jaa hai, ladta rahunga (The INDI alliance can do slavery for its vote bank if it wants. It can even go there and perform mujra if it wants. I am standing firmly with SC, ST, OBC quota, and will continue to do so. I will continue to fight till I am alive!)"

PM Narendra Modi in Buxar

Speaking at Buxar, Modi took a dig at three "shehzadas", referring to Tejawshi, Congress leader Rahul Gandhi and SP leader Akhilesh Yadav. "I heard the UP shehzada saying that they would win all 80 seats of UP. But his own partymen have been laughing at this," he said. He said while Rahul would be preparing to holiday abroad, Tejawshi would be engaged with securing "zamanat" (bail) and protecting his "amaanat" (inheritance). Modi also criticised the RJD for not seeking an apology from the Congress for anti-Bihar remarks made by the party's leaders in Punjab. "Lantern (RJD's poll symbol) lekar mujra kar rahe hain. Congress ke charan chum rahe hain, unse jawab nahi maang rahe hain (It is performing mujra with the lantern. It is kissing the Congress's feet, it is not seeking any answers from the Congress)," he said. He said similar anti-Bihar remarks were made by other INDIA bloc allies too. Modi claimed that the INDIA bloc has "decided that if they are voted to power, the first thing they would do is to change the Constitution so that even the court is unable to overrule their attempts to divert reservations to Muslims. I have been challenging them to refute me in writing but they have been reluctant because they have a guilty conscience."
