CAMPAIGNERS ACCUSE GOVERNME

BY RUTH SUTER

CAMPAIGNERS have accused the Scottish Government of failing to halt youth violence after the tragic death of a teenage boy.

Families of victims spoke out after Kory McCrimmon, 16, lost his life on Sunday.

He was injured in a disturbance at Greenfield Park in the east end of Glasgow on Friday and died in hospital two days later.

A boy aged 13 yesterday appeared in court in connection with the tragedy.

He made no plea at a private hearing at Glasgow Sheriff Court to a charge of murder.

The boy, who can't be named for legal reasons, was remanded in custody.

The Record launched its Our Kids... Our Future campaign in February 2023 following a series of shocking attacks involving children across the country.

We have called on the Scottish Government to invest in safe spaces for kids in every community to allow them to be guided and mentored.

Vicky Donald, who has campaigned for change since her daughter Kaylynn, 12, was battered at the back of a school bus in Fife, said she was "sickened" by the latest tragedy.

Vicky, 36, said: "It makes me feel sick to my stomach that a young boy has lost his life.

We have been warning of this for months. In fact, we have been shouting it from the rooftops and it has fallen on deaf ears.

'The Scottish Government has watched the situation with youth violence escalate for months now and they've done nothing.

"It was only a matter of time before something as devastating as this took place.

"I feel for the boy's parents. They'll never watch him grow up, go to university, or start a family of his own.

"I can't imagine how it would feel to lose a child over something that could have been prevented. Why did a child have to die as a result of a complete lack of action?"

Angela Jarvis, whose daughter, Abbie, was beaten unconscious at a skatepark in Glasgow's Drumchapel, called for the government to prioritise funding for youth facilities.

Åbbie, now 14, suffers from PTSD and has been unable to return to school.

Angela, 44, said: "To hear a boy just two years older than Abbie has lost his life is absolutely devastating.

"I couldn't sleep after hearing about Kory's death and I can't imagine what the parents are going through. This child had barely started his life. Why did he have to die? Why isn't the Scottish Government moving on this? It has

'There is a group of youngsters who are deeply damaged but also deeply dangerous. Our systems and practices have not caught up on the need to adapt and we're dining out on the good work done before.

Youth violence is polluting our schools and communities, putting people of all ages at risk. Enough is enough."

Kory's football club made an emotional plea to youngsters not to carry weapons following the death of their former player.

Easterhouse Football Academy wrote on social media: Kory played for our 2008 age group. A young person in a senseless incident. It's heartbreaking.

ARWAR ON THE ER GENDER LAWS

BY PAUL HUTCHEON and CHRIS McCALL

SCOTTISH Labour leader Anas Sarwar has told hapless Douglas Ross he should be "begging for forgiveness" for the damage caused by the Tories. Sarwar blasted the Scottish Tory leader over Partygate, Covid contracts for cronies and the disastrous Liz Truss budget during a feisty general election TV debate.

He said: "You shouldn't be pleading for votes, you should be begging for forgiveness from the Scottish people."

He also accused SNP leader John Swinney of being the "architect of austerity" during the STV standoff. The war of words took place during a Scottish leaders debate ahead of next month's election, which also included Scottish Lib Dem leader Alex Cole-Hamilton.

Polls show the SNP in line to lose key seats to Labour on July 4 and the debate was marked by clashes between Sarwar and Swinney.

In one section, Swinney tried to taunt Sarwar by claiming Labour would cut spending by tens of billions of pounds and continue austerity.

Sarwar replied: "Not at all John. Ýou are the architect of austerity in Scotland, particularly around local government.

We have already committed more money to our public services.

"I've already set out how we will get more capital investment." The two also clashed on Labour's plan for a beefedup windfall tax on oil and gas profits.

Swinney claimed the policy would hit jobs but Sarwar said: "We would do a windfall tax on the oil and gas giants to make sure we're putting more money into people's pockets, to lower their bills, as well as investing in the clean energy of the future.

"And our new deal for working people, will deliver a pay rise for 200,000 Scots who are now. That's what we would do immediately." Pushed on job losses, he said: "I can understand broken promises from the But let me be really clear, because it's important for me to give this reassurance. 'There will no cliff edge, there will be no turning off of the tap, oil and gas will play a significant role for decades to come, and that's not just to protect jobs right now."

Swinney for raising income taxes while opposing a higher windfall tax on oil profits, saying: "You support higher taxes for people earning £29,000 a year in Scotland, for example nurses, but not windfall taxes on the oil and gas giants making record profits. You're really on the side of BP and Shell, not nurses and working people across the country in the middle of a cost-ofliving crisis?

Swinney hit back: "I a strong position to say this Anas, when you're in favour of lifting the cap on bankers' bonuses, you've not got a leg to stand on."

In another section of the debate, Sarwar took aim at the Tories, saying: "If you want a plan that is good for workers, if you want a plan that's going to create more jobs, if you want to tackle the cost-of-living crisis, then the only way we can do that is to take this chance and take this opportunity to boot out a Sarwar also attacked really don't think you're in lying, corrupt, cheating

Conservative Party that has destroyed communities across this country and now wants to pretend they're going to protect them?

The debate saw broad agreement between Lib Dem leader Cole-Hamilton and Sarwar on a range of issues.

Swinney ended the debate by telling Sarwar that Labour would continue "Tory austerity' before presenter Colin Mackay wound up the event.

FACE OFF IN LIVE TV DEBATE

Sarwar launches a blistering attack on Scots Tory leader Ross over damage his party has done to the country

LEADERS DEBATE SCORECARD

The Labour leader was well drilled in the party's key election messages and made no obvious missteps, coming over as sharp and lively.

Sarwar handled himself pretty well under pressure from Swinney and Ross on the public finances and the North Sea - even if his approach, to some extent, was to bulldoze over them to eat up the time.

On Labour's controversial policies in the North Sea, his bid to reassure voters there won't be a jobs cliff-edge will have had mixed results. His love-in with Lib Dem

Alex Cole-Hamilton was a little boakinducing.

The new SNP First Minister's vow in his opening statement not to let the debate turn into 'a shouting match" somewhat fell by the wayside as the evening went on.

But his new-found persona of calm headmaster more or less survived - even in jousts with Anas Sarwar and Alex Cole-Hamilton about Labour's spending plans and Brexit. where a vein in his temple was perhaps starting to throb.

Struggled when put on the spot on whether the SNP back new oil and gas licences there remains no straight answer. North-east voters may be less than reassured.

It was a reasonable day at the office for the Lib Dem chief who - as the Lib Dems often do - had the advantage of not being any of the other guys.

He also has the advantage of having no chance of getting into government - and so could point to his party's proposed utopia of GPs for everyone all of the time and green jobs for everyone all of the time

As with his counterpart down south, Ed Davey, he's making a virtue of how much fun he's having this campaign. As he told STV's Colin Mackay, with a rictus arin: "Just look at the smile on my face.'

The Tory leader was dreary and didn't even try to defend the indefensible in the form of the Conservatives' record.

Ross's obsession with independence has long eclipsed even that of the SNP as he trotted out his tired old argument that only the Tories can stop the Nats.

In his grilling of Sarwar, he was inflexible in his attempted attacks over Labour's oil and gas policy and the Labour chief ran rings around him. His face as Sarwar reeled off Tory disasters - as he asked Ross what achievement he was most proud of - was a picture that said it all.

2 parties of government are in for a grim July 4 ANALYSIS

DAUL HUTCHEN

THE STV leaders' debate ended up as a three versus one pincer movement against John Swinney. Labour, the Tories and the Lib Dems share the same general election objective in Scotland winning seats off the SNP.

July 4 is about electing a UK government and deciding who will be prime minister but the showdown felt like a shadow debate on who should govern Holvrood in 2026. Anas Sarwar, Douglas

Ross and Alex Cole-Hamilton focused as much on Edinburgh as they did on London, with varying degrees of success. The Scottish Labour leader was the strongest of the three as he was able to glide between "17 years of broken promises" by the SNP government and the

"lying" Tories. He was able to blame the Conservative Swinney administration has a PhD for economic in blaming carnage while pivoting to an London for attack on failures Swinney's record on PAUL HUTCHEON ON SNP LEADER'S SHOWING public services. Cole-

Hamilton came across like a Sarwar impersonator who was auditioning for the role of deputy first minister in two years, asking the Labour leader softball questions on rural healthcare. He spoke about the difficulties in accessing a GP and declining school standards, both of which have nothing to do with Westminster.

Ross was his usual dismal self.

Elections should be about reaching out to undecided voters and moving into uncharted political territory. But Ross is a core vote politician who does not have the skills to reach out beyond his diminishing base.

You would think a Tory would use a leaders' debate to mount a robust defence of the government he would like to see re-elected.

He occasionally mumbled faint praise and tried to change the subject as quickly as possible to the SNP.

Voters remember Ross backed Boris Johnson and the dangerous Liz Truss. And he knows that they know.

Swinney, a hardened SNP slugger, survived the fifteen rounds of attacks by virtue of his experience.

The SNP leader has a PhD in blaming Westminster for the failures of his colleagues and he deflected criticism in his usual way. The first debate is unlikely to go down as a defining moment in the campaign but it confirmed some obvious trends. Sarwar has the momentum with voters. while Swinney is desperately trying to limit his losses to Labour. The Tories under Dismal Douglas, meanwhile, are circling the plughole.

The two parties of government should brace themselves for a difficult night next month.

Police must be able to protect us

SCOTLAND'S national constabulary has struggled from its inception.

The old regional police forces were merged into one in 2013, a time when public services were beginning to feel the strain of Conservative-imposed austerity at Westminster.

The new Police Scotland underwent a drastic round of cost-cutting that saw dozens of police stations closed and support staff roles left unfilled.

Policing had to adapt to the digital age and a new range of increasingly complex online crimes.

It has been a tough decade for frontline officers but most people understand they work hard in a difficult job and routinely put themselves at risk.

The latest survey of rank-and-file officers by the Scottish Police Federation provides a worrying glimpse into the problems they routinely face.

The SPF warns cops are quitting due to a lack of resources and heavy workloads. It believes this could cause serious problems for the recruitment of new officers and keeping experienced cops in jobs.

Many senior officers worked through the Covid years out of a sense of public duty despite being eligible to retire.

Since 2022, many older cops have jumped at the chance to get out, placing a bigger burden on those that remain.

The demands on our police force are increasing at a time when public confidence is sliding.

Policing is Holyrood's responsibility. It's up to the Scottish Government to ensure the service is properly funded.

The frontline officers are unsung heroes and deserve better support from those in charge – both at Holyrood and police HQ. CRIMINALS ARE LAUGHING AT US - PAGE 2

Oblivion awaits

SO NIGEL Farage has slithered back on to the front line of UK politics.

After a tedious will-he-won't-he routine, Farage said not only is he standing again in Clacton but he's also taking over leadership of Reform UK.

There will be few in Scotland who care about this charlatan's return - the daftie who fooled folk into believing his Brexit fantasy never had much support here.

But there is one good thing about his return to frontline politics - it's the doomsday scenario for Rishi Sunak.

With Labour in the centre ground and a Farage-led Reform hoovering up votes from Brexit true believers, the PM has been brutally outmanoeuvred.

When Sunak gambled on a summer General Election a fortnight ago he can't have imagined it would go this badly.

The Tory campaign was and is a shambles. This is just the latest disaster but it's one that could crush them into electoral oblivion - and guarantee a bumper majority for Keir Starmer.

At last Farage is doing something worthwhile - even if it is by accident.

The actor and broadcaster posted the pic on X, with caption "good cops".

Metropolitan Police said yesterday: "The officers were unaware of Mr Fox's public profile and agreed out of politeness."

Fox, who was sacked by GB News for remarks about a journalist, spoke at a protest organised by Tommy Robinson in London on Saturday.

In April, he was ordered to pay £180,000 after being sued over comments on X by drag artist Crystal and ex-Stonewall trustee Simon Blake. A photo he posted of broadcaster Narinder Kaur is being probed by cops amid upskirting claims.

renovations needed of the grand Royal Lodg

PRINCE Andrew is trying to stave off eviction from his royal mansion by having renovation work done.

The Duke of York, seen riding with a female companion yesterday, is responsible for maintaining the 30-room Royal Lodge, where he lives with ex-wife Sarah Ferguson, 64, due to a 75-year lease he signed in 2003.

But he has in recent years struggled to meet his obligations, which include repainting the outside every five years and redecorating inside every seven.

This, coupled with the loss of his status as a working royal in 2019 amid allegations of his friendship with convicted paedophile Jeffrey Epstein, led his brother the King to suggest he move to a smaller property.

Andrew, 64, has resisted pressure to move out, and scaffolding and a skip have now been seen outside the house. The Duke of York may hope having work done will persuade Charles to

The cost of renovations to Royal Lodge, where moss is visible on the walls and paint is peeling off in strips, is estimated at around £2million.

Andrew is also responsible for maintaining the property's 93 acres.

A source close to the royal said: "Andrew has made clear that he is not planning to move out, regardless of what the King says.

"He has a cast-iron lease. He is making efforts to renovate, as he has always."

Insiders say the late Queen assured Andrew he would not be forced out.

But Charles has urged his brother to downsize as he is no longer a working member of the Royal Family.

Andrew has rejected the King's offer of the nearby Frogmore Cottage, occupied by the Duke and Duchess of Sussex before their move to the US.

60 more killed including children as Israel expands Rafah offensive

BY CHRIS HUGHES

AT LEAST 60 Palestinians were killed in Gaza over the weekend and yesterday, including three children and a woman, local authorities said.

Meanwhile fierce cross-border fighting between Hezbollah and Israel sent thousands fleeing to underground shelters. Two shepherds died in the fighting in southern Lebanon.

A strike in Gaza's Bureij refugee camp late on Sunday killed four and a second on the Nuseirat camp killed seven.

Prime minister Benjamin Netanyahu's office has reacted against a three-phase peace deal suggested by the US, which Hamas had responded to positively.

The US plan includes a six-week ceasefire, withdrawal of Israeli troops from Gaza's populated areas and the release of Israeli female, elderly and sick hostages in return for hundreds of Palestinian prisoners. Phase two would lead to the release of all hostages, and Israel would withdraw its forces from Gaza. A permanent ceasefire would be in place. Phase three would involve major reconstruction beginning in Gaza. Netanyahu's office said it would not agree unless it has destroyed Hamas's military and freed all hostages "before a permanent ceasefire is put in place".

Israel is expanding its offensive in the southern city of Rafah. The invasion has largely cut off the flow of medicine and food to Palestinians, with 37 children dying of malnutrition and 3500 at risk.

Israel said the body of a hostage, Dolev Yehud, 35, was found at Kibbutz Nir Oz near the Gaza border, which Hamas attacked on October 7.

The military also confirmed the deaths of four more hostages, including three who begged for their release.

Amiram Cooper, Yoram Metzger and Haim Peri were all aged 80 or older. The fourth hostage was identified as Brit-Israeli Nadav Popplewell, 51.

Israel said the four men died in the southern Gaza city of Khan Younis.

Hamas killed about 1200 in its attack on Israel, and the Israeli offensive has killed more than 36,000 Palestinians, according to Gaza's health ministry.

Former PM Khan wins his appeal over treason case

A PAKISTAN appeals court BY MARTIN FRICKER yesterday acquitted former prime minister Imran Khan of leaking state secrets, his lawyer has said.

Khan was convicted in January of treason and sentenced to 10 years over an incident, popularly known as the cipher case.

He was accused of exposing state secrets by waving a confidential document at a demo. The government has not made the document public but it is believed to be diplomatic correspondence between the Pakistani ambassador to Washington and the foreign ministry in Islamabad.

Khan claimed the document was proof he was being threatened and that his ousting in a noconfidence vote in April 2022 was a US conspiracy, allegedly executed by the military and the government in Pakistan. US and Pakistani officials have denied the claim. Despite the ruling, the popular opposition leader will remain behind bars.

The ex-cricketer has been convicted in four cases and awaits other trials, with more than 150 lawsuits filed against him.

McGinn merch a real bum deal

A BUSINESSMAN is selling merchandise celebrating the BUM of Scotland's John McGinn.

Kevin Beresford, 72, is flogging jigsaw puzzles, drinks coasters and mugs featuring the backside of the Aston Villa midfielder in tribute to his "dynamic derriere".

Kevin said he wanted to mark the Tartan Army reaching Euro 2024 in Germany by doing something "a bit different".

So he created the wacky range of memorabilia dedicated to the player's famous buttocks, entitled: "The Wonderful World of Super John McGinn's Arse."

Former Hibs star McGinn has been nicknamed "BraveArse" by supporters due to his uncanny ability to hold off opponents using his rear end.

The tough-tackling 29-year-old previously admitted the body part has helped his career thrive, saying: "If I didn't have my backside, I'd probably be at Yeovil. I don't think anyone has a backside the size of me.'

Kevin, who is known as Britain's Dullest Man, is selling the coasters and mugs for £8.99 each, while the jigsaw puzzle costs £17.99.

Kevin, of Redditch Worcestershire, said: "I iust wanted to do something a bit different to the usual St George's and St Andrew's Cross flags you see everywhere. 'Scotland have done incredibly well to get to the Euros so I wanted to commemorate the occasion in a unique way - and I think this ticks that box.

DYNAMIC DERRIÈRE John McGinn

"I'm a Villa fan and it's fair to say he is also Scotland's most popular player, so I thought he would be perfect.

'And as any Villa or Scotland fan knows, he utilises his brilliant backside with amazing success when holding off defenders or other midfielders.

"He uses his buttocks to baffle and battle his opponents and then does his trademark John McGinn turn. I've never seen another player use their backside to their advantage like he does.

"We were having some debate about whether to use the word arse but I think it's funnier than bum or buttocks.

"Plus the Scots are well known for their colorful language so I can't see it offending them.

"Also John McGinn is a well-known joker in the dressing room, so I'm pretty sure he'll enjoy this."

Dad-of-four Kevin, a retired painter, is backing an England v Scotland final if the teams can avoid each other. Kevin, who previously sold calendars dedicated to Jack Grealish's calves, added: "I'm one of these supporters who likes to see the home nations do well at football and rugby even though it might not be reciprocated.

"I think England have a great chance of winning the whole thing but it's going to be difficult and I hope Scotland also go deep in the competition." Kevin's Euros 2024 merchandise can be purchased at: dullkev.com.

SCOTLAND fans in Germany will pay almost a third less for their pints than supporters watching the Euros in UK pubs.

Those following the action on big screens in bars and at UK fan parks can expect to fork out an average of £5.17 for a bevvy, data shows.

This compares to  $\pounds 3.58$  for an equivalent pilsner at the tournament – £1.59 cheaper.

Comparison site finder.com, which conducted the study, said: "New research has revealed that Scotland fans travelling to Germany for the Euros this year will pay 31 per cent less for their pints than they do in the UK." It found the biggest savers will be Switzerland fans who typically pay £6.02 at home.

And Denmark supporters who stream over the border will make a saving of £2.27 per brew.

At the other end of the scale, fans facing the biggest price hikes will be Georgians. Used to paying just £1.63 for a lager, they must cough up an extra £1.95 more than back home.

Those travelling from Hungary will face a pint price hike of £1.90.

Finder.com financial wellness expert Louise Bastock said: "As the Euros come around, many Scotland fans will be looking forward to cheering on their country with a cold pint in hand. "However, with the average pint price reaching £5.17 in the UK, the Euro 2024 tournament could be a costly affair."

STORMY Daniels finds it hard to believe crooked Donald Trump can still run for president even if he is jailed, and begs Americans not to vote for him.

The adult-film actress has attacked the businessman's ability to continue his battle for the White House in the November election, calling it a "disgraceful loophole".

Despite Trump being found guilty last week of 34 criminal charges, nothing in the US Constitution forbids him from running. Now Stormy, whose hush-money payment to stop her revealing details of their alleged affair led to Trump's conviction, has urged Americans to vote for his rival, Joe Biden.

She said: "If Trump is jailed, he cannot vote, but he can still be president.

a disgraceful That's loophole.

'Ît is as crazy as the law that prevents you from walking your alligator on a sidewalk on Sundays that still exists in some states. "It's been on the books forever and it's archaic. Fix it."

Asked about who she will be casting her ballot for on November 5, Stormy, who is a Republican, said she would find it hard to vote for Democrat Biden but would definitely not be backing Trump.

She said: "I would like to encourage everyone to vote.

"I understand not liking either of the candidates... but remember, NOT voting for Biden is the same as voting FOR Trump. "That's why that is important. How is it that this amazing country that we live in is full of all these amazing people, and yet Trump and Biden are all we have? Like that's it? I just don't understand."

Stormy is unambiguous about who she holds responsible for the political unrest in the States and its 'lack of civility". "It's Trump," she said.

"People have either one extreme view or another.

There is such a small percentage of people in America who are willing to admit that they were wrong, and that is part of the problem with people in general, especially the American public.

"It's 'I'm right, and it's because I said so'. "People just refuse to see the

RA Labour promises to act over jump in car insurance costs

BY GRAHAM HISCOTT

LABOUR has called for an investigation into the "out of control" cost of car insurance.

Millions of drivers have been hit by the rocketing price of motor insurance over the past two or three years.

Insurers say they are passing on a sharp rise in the cost of claims, driven by a big increase in everything from car parts to secondhand motors.

Many in the industry insist they have been making a loss on motor policies.

We will

on unfair

practices

LOUISE HAIGH SHADOW TRANSPORT SECRETARY

But Louise Haigh, the Shadow Transport Secretary, said the Financial Conduct Authority and the Competition and Markets Authority needed to probe the sector.

She said: "Car insurance is a legal requirement and an essential – not a luxury.

"Labour won't sit back and watch while drivers are punished by the out-ofcontrol cost of cover.

We will urgently call in the regulators to crack down on any unfair practices and to come clean on the causes of soaring costs for consumers."

The average quoted price of car insurance leapt by 56.4% in the year to February, Consumer Intelligence found. In February, drivers most commonly received an annual quote between £500 year to the end of November but still the third-highest annual rise recorded since it began tracking data in 2012.

Some insurers have begun to see a bounceback in profits.

Admiral, the UK's biggest motor insurer, made almost £443million last year, up 23% on the previous 12 months.

Admiral chief executive Milena Mondini de Focatiis said in March: "Over the past couple of years, the industry was hit by the worst inflation in recent history and we faced a cost of living crisis in the UK.

'We maintained pricing discipline and acted ahead of the market to adapt to these trends."

Aviva recently revealed improving profit margins in its UK insurance market.

And motor and home insurer Hastings said profits rose to £32m in the first three months of this year.

The Association of British Insurers said: "The industry is committed to taking action.

"Insurers are facing rising repair costs and other factors outside of their control, with a study from EY estimating for every £1 motor insurers received in premiums in 2023, they paid out £1.14 in claims and operating costs."

MUGGED Yves Bissouma Spurs star and girl in jewel heist BY RECORD REPORTER

TOTTENHAM star Yves Bissouma was sprayed with tear gas in an attack by two masked robbers in Cannes.

The 27-year-old had a £260,000 Richard Mille watch stolen while his girlfriend had three diamond rings pulled from her fingers, French police said. The masked robbers asked the Ivory Coast-born star to pose for a photo after he and his unidentified partner got out of a limo at 4am on Sunday.

They then attacked the pair outside a hotel in the riviera resort before fleeing in a Renault Megane.

Local police believe the robbers were part of a well-organised gang".

OSTHUMOUS APPEAL GOES AHEAD CONVICTED Husband Andrew Harper WICKED Sandra Harper, 63, died in a mystery fall

A CRUEL foster carer is continuing to torture her victims from beyond the grave with an ongoing appeal against her conviction.

Sandra Harper and her husband Andrew were convicted last year of physically and emotionally abusing five kids at their house in Cairnbulg, near Fraserburgh in Aberdeenshire.

The majority of the abuse, carried out between 1985 and 2002, was inflicted by Sandra Harper, who forced one child from the age of three to eat her own vomit, poured soap into her mouth, dragged her across a room and hit her on the head. The abuse spanned 16 years.

But now they have been told by the Crown Office that the appeal against conviction she had begun before her death would still go ahead. It is understood the appeal

"I must not allow them to ruin my adult life as they did with my childhood."

Among other charges, Sandra Harper was convicted of repeatedly refusing to let another child

She also repeatedly struck one boy on the head and body from the age of five, repeatedly rubbing his face in urine-soaked bedding and pushing him, causing him to hit his head on a wardrobe. A DISABLED OAP has been robbed of his independence after his mobility scooter was stolen.

Robert McCabe's transport was snatched from outside his home in Cumbernauld after he went back inside to get his wallet.

His son Graeme said the theft has left his 81-year-old dad anxious and fearing "someone has been watching him".

Graeme, 53, told the Record: "It's an absolute disgrace, I can't believe someone would do something like that to an old man.

"My dad is well known and he's lived on that street for 47 years so he knows everyone. So this has left him worried that someone has been watching him.

The vehicle is a lifeline for the grandfather of six, who had been trapped in his own home without it.

Robert also uses the scooter to visit his wife of 57 years, Patricia, who is housebound and has carers looking after her at a different property.

Graeme told how his dad would often travel two-and-a-half miles a day to Patricia's house to deliver shopping.

He added: "That scooter made a huge difference in my dad's life

"He has a routine, going to visit my mum every day and meeting up and socialising with folk. All that has been taken away from him in a matter of minutes."

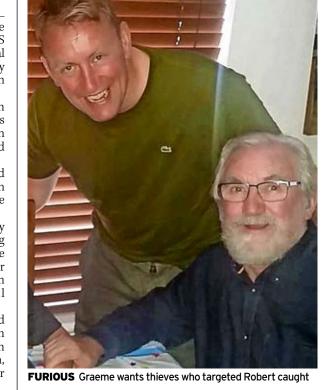

Graeme has now appealed to neighbours with video doorbells to check their footage from last Wednesday in case it caught something that will bring the heartless thieves to justice.

Police have also launched a probe for the metallic red scooter, which features a high support chair.

A Police Scotland spokesperson said: "Officers are investigating the theft of a motor scooter from outside a property in Stonylee Road, Cumbernauld, which occurred around 6pm on Wednesday, May 29.

Jennifer, 53, from Glasgow, has campaigned for justice for investors and last year published book Devil's Coin, about her fight against OneCoin boss Ruja Ignatova.

She has instructed top London law firm Mishcon de Reya to represent OneCoin investors. The firm will issue a claim at the High Court and Jennifer called for victims to join the legal action.

She said: "The time for seeking justice and to recoup what was so cruelly and fraudulently stolen from us has come.

The group action will allege OneCoin was a fraudulent scheme and many investors were deceived. Jennifer first invested in 2016 after seeing an online presentation. A cryptocurrency expert later contacted her to tell her it was a scam.

Around 70,000 people in the UK are thought to have invested in Bulgariabased OneCoin. Ignatova, known as the "missing cryptoqueen", vanished in 2017 and is on the FBI's 10 Most Wanted list.

The rights to Jennifer's book were snapped up by film studio MGM and Oscar winner Kate Winslet has been tipped to play her.

Jennifer has received death threats since exposing the fraud and was forced to cancel book signings in Scotland.

SHARKS survived a major ocean temperature spike about 93million years ago by growing longer fins.

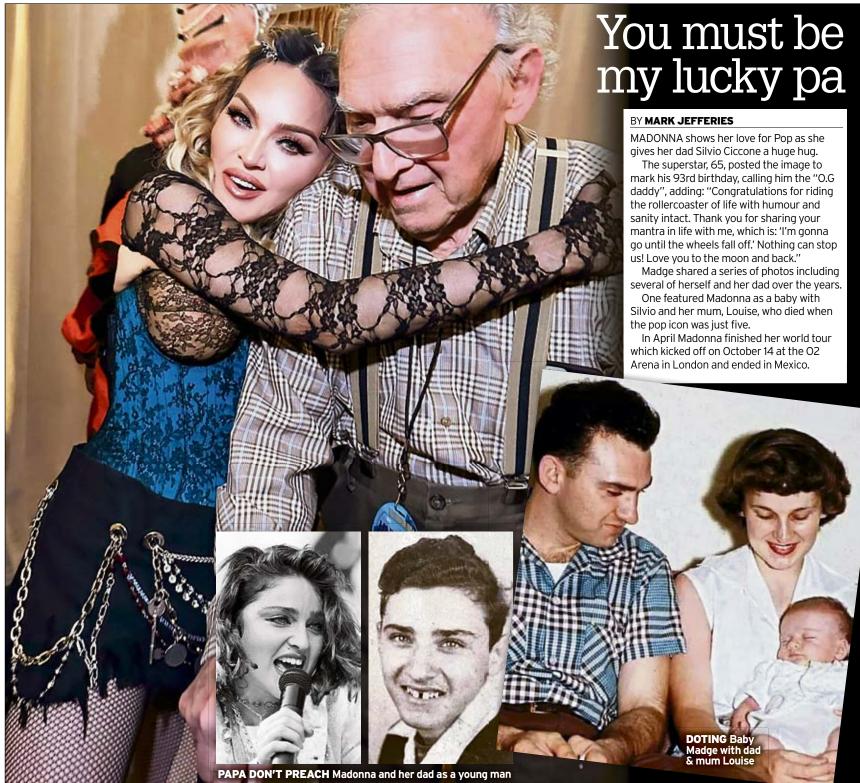

The predators of today evolved from stubbier and slower versions during a major episode of global warming, say US scientists.

Huge volumes of lava sent carbon dioxide levels soaring, heating sea surfaces to 28C over a oneor two-million year period. Modern oceans are 20C.

A study of 500 living and fossilised species found sharks responded with elongated pectoral fins.

Phillip Sternes, a biology doctoral student at University of California, Riverside, said: "The fins changed as sharks expanded from the bottom to the open ocean.

Their fins are long and narrow, to minimise the amount of energy needed."

DANCE CRAZE

BY MARK JEFFERIES

BLACK Lace star Colin Gibb, who enticed the nation to "push pineapple, shake the tree" in 1984 hit Agadoo, has died aged 70, just days before he was due to retire.

His devastated wife Sue Kelly said it was "heartbreaking" to tell fans her "dearest husband" had passed away.

She added: "I love you Colin, we spent 22 years living your Agadoo dream, we were due to retire to Spain on Thursday, you were so happy, so looking forward to our new life, now you're gone. As we used to say, always love you for ever."

Wedding reception staple Agadoo was the pop duo's biggest hit, shifting a million copies to reach No2. The song stayed in the top 75 for 30 weeks.

But the band enjoyed a run of other novelty hits in the 1980s, often centred round cheesy dance routines, including Do the Conga, Superman, Hokey Cokey and Wig-Wam Bam.

And earlier, as a four-piece, they represented the UK at the Eurovision Song Contest in 1979, coming seventh with Mary Ann.

Colin's death on Sunday was confirmed by his former bandmate Dene Michael, who wrote: "So sad to hear the passing of my singing partner with Black Lace. RIP my friend Colin Gibb. God bless. We had some great times together touring the world."

Sue urged mourners to honour her husband's colourful legacy by dressing up in bright outfits similar to the ones Black Lace wore as they led us through their famous dance routines.

She said: "Colin and I talked about our funerals and what we'd want.

"He said his was everyone wearing Agadoo shirts or 's*** shirts' as they were called, to his funeral. So please, everyone welcome, but fulfil his final dream.

"Colin didn't want flowers, he wants any donations to his love of cats. So to a cat charity please.

"Let's honour his wishes, he gave us so many memories. Thank you from his devastated wife Sue x."

EA be your best OOR sleep can make anyone feel exhausted, but the repercussions

Holding tension in your jaw? Lucy Gornall finds out why it's important to let it go

MANY of us will be familiar with the pain that comes from tight muscles and joints.

A good stretch or massage can often help alleviate the discomfort. But while your back and legs might be the obvious sore points on your body, it's also worth checking in on your jaw.

In today's busy, high-stress world, it's common to carry tension in the jaw, which can lead to further pains and problems. Charlotte Mernier, registered osteopath and director of My Osteo London, blames our sedentary lifestyles as well as increased stress and anxiety.

"The majority of people clench or grind their teeth, holding tension in their jaw without even realising it," said Charlotte. "Orthodontic treatments like braces and aligners can also trigger jaw tensions." You might not be concerned about the health of your jaw, but holding tension there can cause Temporomandibular Joint Disorders (TMD), affecting the two joints that connect your lower jaw to your skull. "TMD affects one in three, but fewer than 7 per cent of the population seek treatment," said Charlotte.

"The most common symptoms are jaw pains, tension headaches, neck and shoulder tensions and pains, limited mouth opening (less than three fingers width), clicking noise when opening the mouth, eating or yawning, earaches, tinnitus or a sensation of water in the ear." These can seriously impact daily life, quality of sleep and even

Dally grind

"You may notice symptoms in the morning after clenching your jaw or grinding your teeth during sleep.' Often, dentists will prescribe a mouthguard to be worn overnight, to avoid this grinding and clenching. Relaxing your jaw is key and there are simple ways to let go of tension. "First, reduce clenching during the day. Use daily reminders to retrain your brain like an alarm or visual cues," suggested Charlotte.

Practising stressreducing techniques is also important. Regular exercise, time away from technology and even regular breathing exercises will also help.

"Avoid bad oral habits like chewing gum, biting your nails or biting the inside of your cheeks," she added. "When eating, chew slowly on both sides or alternate sides, cut your food into small pieces, avoid hard and crunchy food and prolonged mouth opening, such as when you eat a burger or apple." If you smoke, Charlotte says it's best to quit as it can stimulate muscle activity. Sat at a desk all day? "Check your sitting position too and avoid

WORD OF MOUTH Stress can begin in the jaw and cause health problems for menopausal women might go far beyond that. Research has already shown that sleeping less than the recommended seven to eight hours a night can have an adverse effect on heart health. But findings from a new US study suggest that, for women going through the menopause, it's not just short sleep duration that can be an issue disturbed, restless sleep can also affect their risk for heart disease and stroke.

The study, led by Columbia University Medical Center in New York City found that women who reported poor sleep quality during menopause were three times more likely to have poor overall cardiovascular health scores.

That means dealing with interrupted sleep should be a priority for women in middle age.

"Studies indicate around 40 to 60 per cent of women experience sleep problems during menopause - most commonly disturbed sleep with lots of interruptions," says Dr Zoe Schaedel, menopause specialist and co-director at Myla Health (mylahealth.co.uk).

"And for some women, who might have been good sleepers before menopause, it's something that can come out of the blue. Typical issues that disturb sleep include night sweats, anxiety and sleep apnoea."

Luckily, there is plenty you can do to improve slumber.

NO TO NIGHT SWEATS

Every evening, our core body temperature needs to drop to help us fall asleep, and it needs to stay low through the night to keep us asleep.

The hormone changes of the menopause make it harder for your brain to regulate your body temperature and can result in hot flushes and night sweats, which can really impact sleep," Dr Zoe says.

"HRT (hormone replacement therapy) can cure the night sweats and can help your sleep in other ways, too. You could also try breathable, cool cotton or moisture-wicking nightwear, sheets and cooling gel mattress toppers. Keep a change of clothing by the bed so you don't wake yourself even more by having to rummage for fresh nightwear."

CHECK FOR SYMPTOMS OF SLEEP APNOEA

Sleep apnoea is a condition where the airways of the throat relax and narrow, interrupting normal breathing and disturbing sleep.

"Rates of sleep apnoea double after the menopause, possibly linked to the fact that a drop in hormones, particularly oestrogen, reduces the airway's muscle tone," says Dr Zoe. The menopause transition may also lead to weight gain, which can increase the risk of developing the condition.

"Sleep apnoea is associated with an increased risk of heart disease and stroke," adds Dr Zoe. "But lots of cases in women go undiagnosed, because they can present with more subtle symptoms than men, like loud snoring. Instead things such as morning headaches, nightmares and depression can be

Sleep apnoea can be treated with lifestyle measures like losing weight, sleeping on your side, or with a CPAP machine, a mask you wear while asleep.

The prevalence and severity of symptoms can increase during menopause, possibly due to changes in oestrogen levels, and can stop you from falling asleep and also wake you up through the night.

"Sometimes iron supplements can be helpful. It's always worth having a blood test to check your iron stores if you experience restless legs," says Dr Zoe.

"Daily stretching and moderate exercise can help, consider trying an evening walk. Using temperature will improve symptoms for some people by alternating hot and cold water on the legs. If the symptoms are persistent and are getting in the way of sleep, a number of medications can help, so do discuss with your doctor to find out about options."

"There are lots of strategies to try to calm yourself, such as slow, diaphragmatic breathing, cognitive defusion – a process whereby you try to separate from your thoughts to allow you to gain perspective and not get caught up in unhelpful negative thought cycles.

"Another relaxation strategy which is very helpful is progressive muscle relaxation where you systematically tense and relax the muscles in your body from head to toe."

DON'T CANCEL PLANS It's tempting, after a bad night, to duck out of social events, forgo exercise and stay at home to try to catch up on sleep, but that can be counter-productive.

"Generally speaking I usually suggest continuing with your daily activities regardless of how well you have slept," says Dr Maja.

hormone levels may influence neurotransmitters in the brain responsible for regulating mood, which could explain why women are more susceptible to anxiety at this time.

Feeling anxious can disrupt our sleep and lead to restless nights filled with worry. "To combat this, we need to 'retrain' our bodies and brains to know that nighttime is for rest and daytime is for thinking," says Dr Maja.

"The best way to do it is to put an alarm on your phone for a time during the evening which suits you. It's best to do it not just before you go to bed, perhaps 7pm or 8pm. Then set aside 15 to 20 minutes to write down all concerns and worries that come into your mind. Invite them in.

"Then give yourself time to make any necessary plans or action points you need, but after that, shut your book, put it away and tell yourself, 'Your worry time is over'.

"Then when any worries show up late at night you can tell yourself, 'I have already spent enough time worrying about this today, nighttime is for resting."

Dear Coleen

I AM a married woman in my 30s with two young children. Recently, I found a load of emails on a shared computer that my husband had exchanged with my best friend.

I suppose deep down I'd felt uneasy for some time that he was hiding something, which is why I looked. The emails were over-friendly, intimate in some cases and there were loads of them going back months.

I've known this friend for several years and we see her and her husband and kids all the time.

We've even been on a family camping trip with them.

I confronted my husband with what I'd found and, at first, he tried to make out I was crazy and the emails were just friendly banter.

But he's since admitted he'd become too close to her and that they'd met for coffee and dog walks, but that nothing physical had ever happened.

I also confronted my friend, who was in floods of tears, insisting nothing happened and begging for things to go back 'normal".

She said her husband was aware and also hopes we can all still be friends.

I feel so angry, hurt and betrayed (not to mention stupid) and don't see how it's possible to turn back the clock. I'd love your opinion.

D-DAY: THE UNHEARD TAPES BBC2, 9pm

MARKING the 80th anniversary of the invasion, this unique series is the story of D-Day, told by those who actually experienced it.

It relives one of the most extraordinary days in the history of modern warfare using powerful eyewitness accounts, many of which have never been heard.

The series features rare audio interviews recorded with D-Day survivors, including Royal Navy Marines James Kelly and Warwick Nield-Siddall, sourced from archives around the world. Young actors, cast to resemble the interviewees at the time of the war, lip-sync the original testimony to recall moments of bravery, fear, chaos and confusion. These memories are interwoven with fragmented documentary-style dramatic recreation and expert narration.

Together, they tell the story of the fateful Normandy invasion and the bloody battle that followed, in which more than 100,000 people lost their lives.

Once you get used to the style, with young actors fronting the real words, it's a compelling insight into that deadly day.

A south London stalwart, journalist, friend, girlfriend, daughter and granddaughter, she's also a bit of a mess when dealing with the constant trials and tribulations of life.

It starts with a hospital scene, packed at once with malady and mirth, which sets the tone for the series. Watch out for Laura Whitmore as a puzzled nurse.

There's an immediate sense of chaos. Queenie is late for work and she's had a big argument with her boyfriend. Again.

At work, where she's trying – and failing – to get ahead, her boss (Sally Phillips) isn't interested in her latest pitch.

And something was definitely wrong at her doctor's appointment.

All she has to look forward to is an awkward dinner for boyfriend Tom's mum's birthday.

The meal, complete with racist gran, lurches from one catastrophe to another. Eventually, Queenie is left shell-shocked when Tom (Jon Pointing) tells her they need a break.

"I can't always be angry. I can't take the drama. You're too much," he tells her.

In the second episode of a double bill, Queenie puts on a brave face as she moves into her new house-share, but when she realises Tom isn't coming back any time soon, she takes steps to numb her loneliness.

EXTRAORDINARY ITV2, 10.05pm

THIS fun and fresh sitcom is set in a world where everyone over the age of 18 develops a superpower. Everyone that is, except for Jen.

Breathing new life into the over-done superhero genre, this follows 25-year-old Jen (Máiréad Tyers) as she struggles to be the only adult she knows who is a completely ordinary human.

Her best friend Carrie (Sofia Oxenham) can channel spirits of the dead, while Carrie's boyfriend Kash (Bilal Hasna) can rewind time, like a slightly clunky superman. And watch out for Siobhan McSweeney as Mary, Jen's mother, who can control technology.

What makes Jen special? Absolutely nothing. Yet.

With a tongue-in-cheek sense of humour, this has a fantastical element, but also a relatable mundanity.

It begins as Jen hopes to make an impression at a job interview. But the interviewer's superpower is making everyone tell the truth. Needless to say, it doesn't go well.

Without a power of her own, Jen is feeling very left behind.

NANCE FI Fashion giant in City listing SET FOR £51bn STOC

CONTROVERSIAL fast fashion giant Shein is close to firing the starting gun on a £51billion stock market listing in London.

Reports say the company plans to file paperwork in the coming days, laying the ground-work for a blockbuster flotation.

The move by the firm, which was founded in China and is now headquartered in Singapore, would be one of the largest deals for the London Stock Exchange in a decade.

Shein's huge selection of cheap clothes - backed by campaigns with social media influencers - has turned it into one of the world's biggest fashion retailers.

However, it has faced criticism over its supply chain, including allegations around the use of forced labour. Sky News

MARKS & Spencer boss Stuart Machin's pay packet leapt £2million to £4.7m last year. Co-chief executive Katie Bickerstaffe, who leaves in July, netted £4.4m, M&S's annual report revealed.

NEARLY £7billion was wiped off the value of pharmaceuticals giant GSK yesterday after a US judge ruled 70,000 lawsuits alleging discontinued heartburn drug Zantac caused cancer could go ahead. GSK said it would immediately appeal.

reported Shein was preparing to file the necessary paperwork – an initial public offering (IPO) prospectus - with the Financial Conduct Authority regulator for approval.

The firm had been in talks MEETING with both the US and UK over Jeremy Hunt share listing plans, but has faced significant regulatory hurdles in securing a listing in New York. US legislators called for the firm to be investigated over allegations that Uyghur forced labour was used in the production of some of its clothes.

Nevertheless, the London Stock Exchange and UK ministers have pushed to get the business to float in London, with Chancellor Jeremy Hunt holding talks with Shein executive chairman Donald Tang earlier this year.

Hollywood Bowl enjoyed a striking six months to the end of March, with sales up eight per cent to almost £120million. The 10-pin bowling chain already has 71 sites in the UK and 11 in Canada, and aims to have more than 130 within a decade. Half-year profits jumped 10.5 per cent to £29.5m.

When a Heat Pump Doesn't Fit - Install an Electric Boiler EFFICIENT ELECTRIC HEATING WITHOUT THE DISRUPTION

A report published by the Energy & Utilities Alliance (EUA) has analysed 22.7 million UK homes and highlighted "limiting factors" to installing heat pumps in over half of them. A significant 12 million homes in total.

One of the most common difficulties to emerge was the lack of available space to be able to install a heat pump. This data will come as no surprise to the many thousands of homeowners who have made enquiries about installing an air source heat pump, only to be told their property is not suitable.

The large energy companies who have entered the heat pump market without the knowledge or experience of heating homes, fail to offer any alternative to the millions of homeowners who are eager to transition away from fossil fuel-based heating systems - leaving customers in limbo with no idea where to go next.

There is a solution.

If this narrative sounds familiar to you, you are not alone. The good news is that you do have alternative solutions to modernise and improve your heating systems.

Electric heating manufacturer Fischer Future Heat has forged their trusted reputation through their electric HeatCore radiators installing over 200,000 of them in UK homes.

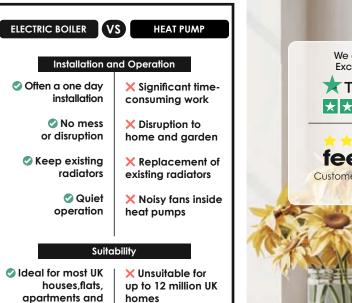

The family-run British company has expanded its product range and has spent the past 5 years manufacturing and installing their own range of electric boilers which provide an ideal alternative to air source heat pumps and gas and oil boilers.

Guaranteed for 10-years, Fischer's electric boilers are suitable for the majority of UK homes and installation is without disruption and can generally be completed within a day. It's a simple swap from polluting gas and oil boilers to heat your home, and you don't need an educational course on how to operate your heating, unlike heat pumps.

Customers can choose from the Fischer electric combi boiler which delivers both hot water and heating or a heat only boiler - which works in conjunction with Fischer's Aquafficient - a highly efficient electric water system that provides hot water on demand without the need for water storage cylinder.

Why choose Fischer Electric Boilers?

- No disruption to your home or garden
- No flue required = Zero Emissions at point of use
- Guaranteed for 10 years

terraced houses

- Suitable for most UK homes and works with Fischer's EXCLUSIVE ECO HOME 10 tariff to reduce energy bills.
- 75 years of manufacturing experience
- Rated 'Excellent' for service
- Experts on electric heating with thousands of UK installations.

SUNNY DAY FOR DAN BY GARRY OWEN

MOSTLY SUNNY (4.50) can make it a bright day for Dan Skelton in the handicap hurdle at Southwell.

The five-year-old opened his account over timber by routing Vivid Pink a fortnight ago in a Huntingdon novice.

The gelding can do damage in this sphere so should cash in on an inviting opening mark. NO REGRETS (2.45) looks set to put his rivals to the sword for Nicky Richards in  $the \, Prestige \, Chase. \, The \, gelding$ benefited from faster ground at Kelso last month when pipping Everyday Champagne.

That is excellent form so the 10-year-old ought to shrug off a 4lb penalty in another trappy handicap.

HAT TOSS (4.38) can stay ahead of the game for James Owen on the Flat at Leicester.

The four-year-old recorded a career best when second to Noodle Mission last month at Newmarket. That was a strong contest so the gelding stands to extend his yard's winning run off a nice mark.

DAMASCUS STEEL (6.15) can show his mettle for thriving Ed Dunlop at Lingfield.

The grey ran a stormer when giving Baltic most resistance on turf at Doncaster last month. That race is working out well so the gelding looks set to prevail back on the all-weather. LAOISMAN (7.15) should get the job done for Sean

Woods in the sprint handicap. The gelding was narrowly denied a four-timer by the Katev Kontent at Windsor last month and, with Rob Havlin in the saddle, is proven on the all-weather.

INVINCIBLE SPEED (7.45) stands to show his foes a clean pair of hoofs for Jason Tate.

The sprinter returned to form when edged out by the progressive Mart at Kempton a week ago and remains fairly treated. WAKE UP HARRY (6.30) can catch the opposition napping at Wolverhampton. Brian Toomey's horse had a near miss to Freetodream at Chelmsford two months ago. The gelding likes this venue so should produce off only a 1lb higher mark.

BILLY McGARRY (7.30) can keep Michael Herrington's bandwagon rolling.

The five-year-old hammered Wallaroo over track and trip last month so ought to make light of a 6lb hike.

Graham pedals on Paris BY FRASER WILSON

FIN GRAHAM has been on the fast track to success ever since his mum kicked off at a PE teacher for offering him a head start on school sports day.

The cyclist was born with two club feet and has no calf muscle on his right leg, meaning he has to wear a splint.

But the Scot has never looked for favours in the ferociously competitive world of elite level sport.

After working to the top of British cycling winning two silvers medals on his Paralympics debut in Tokyo three years ago – the 24-year-old is now gunning to go one better in Paris this summer.

Graham is set to be part of Team GB after a stunning rise has seen him claim 13 world medals, including six golds, since being thrust into the spotlight in Japan.

He will most likely go head-tohead with team-mates Jaco van Gass and Ben Watson for the C3 individual pursuit and C1-3 road race titles.

In the pursuit in Tokyo, he lost out to van Gass despite setting a new world record as his mate smashed that by 1.013 seconds moments later.

It's a remarkable tale for the Strathpeffer cyclist but to him a normal one thanks to a mindset forged by mum Dee and dad Drew.

He told Record Sport: "I don't know any different. I've been lucky that my parents have provided me with the opportunity to do this. They've always encouraged me.

There was a point in primary school where my PE teacher wanted to give me a head start in a running race. I was well up for that because I'd probably have won!

"But my mum kicked off. She said 'Absolutely not', I shouldn't get any special treatment. Looking back, that makes a difference. There's no reason why I should have got that. I've not found anything I'm unable to do, I've learned to live with it to explore options and get to a Paralympics.

<sup>t</sup>I'm coming into these Games a lot more confident, it's been a good couple of years. I'm hoping to continue and turn the silvers into golds in Paris. That'd be the pinnacle?

Graham's dream is being supported by National Lottery funding and he added: "Thousands of athletes on world class programmes are supported by the National Lottery. It helps fund training facilities, the camps, the coaches. It's massive."

• National Lottery players have helped invest more than £215million in cycling since funding began.

Willy in mix for WBO title after Saudi BOXING

WILLY HUTCHINSON is one step closer to landing a world title shot after he was ordered to face Joshua Buatsi for the WBO interim light heavyweight title.

The best performance of his career delivered a unanimous points victory over former world title challenger Craig Richards in Riyadh three days ago, taking his record to 18-1.

The 25-year-old suffered defeat - his only one as a pro - in a British and Commonwealth tilt versus Lennox Clarke in 2021 but has won five bouts in a row. Englishman Buatsi has won all 18 of his bouts. Their promoters have 10 days to get the fight signed before it goes to purse bids.

Handbrake slammed on Ocon's seat FORMULA ONE

ESTEBAN OCON is quitting Alpine - a week after his boss talked of "consequences" over a crash with his team-mate. The French driver slammed into Pierre Gasly during the Monaco Grand Prix, leaving team principal Bruno Famin furious. Now Alpine have revealed Ocon will leave at the end of the season. It was framed as a mutual decision as the team said the two parties had "agreed together" to end a five-year partnership.

The 27-year-old said: 'We've had some great moments together, some tough moments as well.

am grateful to everyone at the team for these memorable times."

NOVAK DJOKOVIC got up off the clay to stage his second unbelievable comeback at the French Open inside 42 hours.

FRENCH OPEN

The world No.1 only finished his five-set victory over Lorenzo Musetti at 3.08am local time on Sunday.

And back on Court Philippe-Chatrier at 4pm yesterday, the Serb appeared to be limping to a last-16 defeat against No.23 seed Francisco Cerundolo when he needed treatment on his right knee in the second set.

Djokovic blamed the clay court and told supervisor Wayne McKewen: "I screwed up my knee because I made a quick move. I'm sliding and FROM NEIL MCLEMAN IN PARIS slipping all the time." He pulled up in agony chasing a drop shot in the fourth set and the defending champion seemed set for his earliest exit here since 2009.

The Argentine led by two sets to one and then 4-2 in the fourth - he even had a break point to serve for the match at 5-5.

But after being only five points from defeat, superstar Djokovic somehow shook off his latest injury to win 6-1 5-7 3-6 7-5 6-3 6-3 in four hours and 39 minutes.

It was the longest match of his Boland Garros career and followed the four hours and 29 minutes he needed to beat Musetti. After raising his arms in triumph, the 37-year-old told the crowd: "I need to say a big thank you because like in my last match, this victory is yours.

"The last match I was two sets to one down and in the fourth set you gave me so much energy.

Tonight you did the same. Three or four times I was points away from losing this match. "I don't know how I found a way to win this match. The only explanation is you." Ďjokovic's victory also broke two records he had shared with Roger Federer. It was his 370th win in Grand Slam matches to reach his 59th Slam quarter-final. He is now just three wins away from a new record of 25 singles titles in the big four.

Alex de Minaur became the first Aussie man to reach the last eight at the French since his mentor Llevton Hewitt in 2004... with the help of his 14-year-old super fan Paul.

Katie Boulter's boyfriend had launched an appeal on social media to find the boy who had cheered every point during his third-round win.

And Paul had a front-row seat as the No.11 seed beat No.5 seed Daniil Medvedev 4-6 6-2 6-1 6-3.

De Minaur, 25, said: "He's managed a miracle. "I might have to get him on tour week in. week out.

RUSSIAN teenager Mirra Andreeva silenced the boos to become the youngest woman to reach the quarter-finals since 2005. The world No.38, who is 17 and 27 days, won 7-5 6-2 against Moscow-born Varvara Gracheva - the last French player in the singles. Gracheva took French nationality last June and enjoyed vocal support. Andreeva said: "In the beginning it bothered me a little bit but then I adjusted it for my advantage."

Andreeva plays Aryna Sabalenka, a 6-2 6-3 winner over Emma Navarro, Elena Rybakina beat Elina Svitolina 6-4 6-3

I GRANT YOU SHOCK WISH

GRANT BRADBURN is backing his old Scotland stars to make more history by toppling England for a second time when the sides meet in the T20 World Cup today.

Richie Berrington's side face the Auld Enemy in their tournament opener in Barbados almost six years to the day since carving out their most famous win.

And Bradburn, the man who as coach masterminded the six-run success in a one-off ODI at The Grange, believes lightning can strike twice. He said: "I absolutely think Scotland can produce something special again. T20, especially, is a format that is normally won by one or two players bringing an A-plus performance. "Scotland have many players capable of that.

'Í'm sure England will try to bully Scotland with pace and batting aggression. That aggression can also play into opponents' hands."

Bradburn, now coach of Glamorgan, remains

EYEING REPEAT Bradburn hugely proud of his time with the Saltires, especially the day they humbled the then top-ranked side in the world.

He added: "There are not many weeks that go by that I don't have proud thoughts of Scotland, the players, the staff and the wonderful family times we shared." Scotland have been handed a cash incentive as tournament chiefs said teams will get £24,371 for every win, barring the semi-final and final.

Cricket Scotland are guaranteed to rake in a minimum of £176,000 regardless of the team's performance. Their Group B action starts at 3.30pm at Kensington Oval before Namibia on Thursday.

RUGBY

NIGEL CAROLAN insists there is no need to panic ahead of Glasgow's biggest game of the season.

Warriors welcome the Stormers on Saturday for their URC quarter-final.

Franco Smith's men have wobbled in recent weeks, losing twice in South Africa before bottom side Zebre threatened a shock in last Friday's 38-26 triumph at Scotstoun.

But Carolan hopes cool heads will prevail at the business end of the season.

The attack coach said: "On the trip to South Africa and in that Zebre game we stumbled a little, which created frustration.

The unforced errors the other night were probably double what we would normally accept as minimum standard. There is also a frustration at our inability to deliver a perfect performance.

"But we're certainly not going to panic at this stage.

With a quarter-final and the Stormers coming to town, you don't need anything more than that STILL OPTIMISTIC Carolan to channel your focus again. It's about being calm and composed in every situation.

"It's a mindset as opposed to a physical or technical thing – just staying calm, relaxed, in the moment, holding your feet and you'll see some good pictures. And just look after the ball."

Warriors' injury crisis has also cleared up, with George Turner and Kyle Steyn likely to be available. Carolan added: "The only guys who are out are Sione Vailanu, Stafford McDowall and JP du Preez. "Apart from that we have a clean bill of health. The challenge is to build guys back into the team without losing cohesion."

And yet, MacIntyre revealed his dad wasn't even first choice for bagman duties. He'd had to take time off from perfecting their local course but the PGA's newest star promised Glencruitten members he'll be back in post very soon. MacIntyre added: "I just phoned

JIMMY THELIN has begun a new managerial Don at Pittodrie with his Aberdeen revolution kicking off.

Now the Swede will look to crank up the club's transfer activity to get new faces added for pre-season from June 24.

Director of football Steven Gunn and his scouting staff have been working on multiple targets, which started when Thelin was still at Elfsborg.

While their departures are still to be announced, it is looking increasingly likely he'll have big spaces to fill. Kelle Roos is likely to leave and another keeper is needed to battle with Ross Doohan.

Iceland international Hakon Valdimarsson, whom Thelin worked with at Elfsborg and is now at Brentford, is a target he would like to take on loan.

 $Rangers' Robby \, McCrorie \, is$ another the Dons are keen on. He is in the last year of his deal but wants to play to force his way into the Scotland mix.

Thelin will need another central defender too. Stefan Gartenmann spent last season on loan from Midtjylland but it is looking increasingly unlikely that will become a permanent arrangement.

Thelin is known to like big, commanding centrehalves and it is more than likely another defender in the mould of Slobodan Rubezic would come into the equation.

Financially, it might not be viable but you would assume Thelin would ask the question about Celtic's out-of-favour and Andri Baldursson, whom Elfsborg have on loan from Bologna. Could he follow?

Aberdeen are in talks with Junior Hoilett over a new deal but Thelin is known to like his wide players with pace.

It was a great strength of his team to hit on the counter attack with real speed.

Could that open the door for Shavden Morris to become a more regular contributor? His problem, under Barry Robson, was Dons played with wing-backs more than wingers. Aberdeen could even be looking to add more if clubs turn up with their cheque books for Bojan Miovski.

CAMMY DEVLIN admits he is putting in the hard graft with Hearts boss Steven Naismith to become a more complete player.

The 25-year-old has been renowned for his combative style in the middle of park since arriving from Aussie outfit Newcastle Jets three years ago.

But, having returned from an ankle injury in February,

Devlin confesses he also spent the remainder of the domestic campaign trying to hone his attributes in the final third.

That paid off as he chipped in with his first goal and assist as the Jambos sealed third place.

Devlin earned a recall to the Socceroos squad for World Cup qualifiers, which start against Bangladesh on Thursday before facing Palestine a week today.

He said: "Steven Naismith and the other coaches have been working on me getting higher up the pitch, not only trying to win the ball back for the team and doing the things I've always been good at. To make myself more complete is the other side of the game and I wasn't really getting in those positions higher up the pitch. "Now it's working a bit harder to get higher and hopefully contribute in the final third. In those last couple of months I was doing that and enjoying it." On his recall, he added: "To be back training and in this definitely missed it."

STEPHEN O'DONNELL declared his pride at extending his love affair with Motherwell after signing a new two-year contract.

The 32-year-old right-back has been a stalwart for Steelmen boss Stuart Kettlewell and made 44 appearances last season, taking his career tally to more than 500 games.

O'Donnell is regarded as a role model at Fir Park by Kettlewell and the former Kilmarnock, Luton plus Partick Thistle player said: "This club means a lot to me. I live locally and I'm very proud to represent a club that is a pillar in the community.

"Extending my contract is a delight. I've loved my time here and frankly didn't want it to end."

Kettlewell tied down Sam Nicholson on a permanent deal last week while Callum Slattery and Bevis Mugabi are mulling over offers of new contracts. But the Well boss is chuffed to secure O'Donnell and said: "Stephen is an excellent professional.

"From availability to high standards shown in training, he is a role model for young players. "Last season he was asked to play in a number of positions but applied himself impeccably.

"It's another player signed up early, which is something I've been wanting to do."

At the other end of the pitch, Kettlewell admits he takes quiet satisfaction from Well finishing as the Premiership's top scorers outside the Old Firm last season. But he knows it counts for nothing if his side are chucking them in at the other end.

Well rattled in 56 goals across 38 league games - two more than third-placed Hearts - with red-hot Theo Bair netting 15.

But having finished with a minus three goal difference, Kettlewell knows where the biggest fix is required ahead of the new campaign.

He said: "I take a lot of satisfaction from being top scorers outside the top two.

"But football works in a circle where it's not just about the goals you score, it's about the ones you concede as well.

"We've spent a lot of time trying to rectify that and make sure, when we are dominating games, that counter-attacks don't hurt us, set-plays don't hurt us."

Bernardo has made it clear his preference is to return to Scotland and he wants his parent club to strike a deal.

Celtic are also looking at a number of midfielders.

Alvyn Sanches, on the books at Lausanne-Sport in Switzerland, is one whom the Hoops' scouting team are monitoring.

He is rated at £4m but Bernardo remains the preferred target.

Celtic could also move for Sanches if they were to sell Reo Hatate, who has attracted a lot of interest in recent windows.

The club are advancing on a number of fronts, including a new keeper to replace Joe Hart following his retirement at 37.

SPINE SHIVER Morrison Caley chief going after training row

INVERNESS chairman Ross Morrison has resigned, paving the way for the club to scrap controversial plans to move their training base to Fife after relegation.

Morrison, who revealed his decision ahead of a crunch board meeting, insisted he still believes the 135-mile move to Kelty is the best way to stave off mounting costs after falling into League One.

But the proposal has caused fury among the club's fans, with calls for a boycott of season tickets.

At the helm for six years, he said: "Hearing fans saying they would prefer administration to training the first team in Kelty sent a shiver down my spine.

"Administration is a desperate thing to happen to a club and must, at all costs, not happen."

shop when you can't spend big... spend smart. Rangers' attempt at that now seems to involve spending later.

The problem with operating on the never-never, though, is if those signings don't work out, all you're doing is storing up trouble for down the line.

Philippe Clement has been frank about the need for Rangers to think outside the box as they wrestle with the financial realities that follow on from Celtic pinning down another £34million Champions League bounty.

"We know we have less money than our competition because they have more money and they have Champions League money now," he said last month.

'So we need to be more inventive, the recruitment needs to be more inventive.

"If your opponent has more money and can spend more, you have to work better.

That needs to be the challenge to make things better. We have to find better players for cheaper prices. It's not always the player that costs more who at the end has the highest value.

"It's challenging. The bigger the pool is where you can take the best fish out.

"Our pool is smaller, so you have to be sharper. We need to work better - all of us - to make the next steps."

It is with that in mind that Rangers have agreed to take Oscar Cortes back on another 12-month loan from Lens but on the strict understanding they will only pony up for the winger next summer.

They've kicked the final fee understood to be in the region of £4m - down the road after confirming an obligation to buy the 20-year-old, who will sign a four-year deal once his switch is made permanent.

It's the same strategy Clement had to employ in January after checking into Ibrox to discover Michael Beale had blown both the summer and winter kitties on last year's disastrous rebuild. Mohamed Diomande was signed from Nordsjaelland on a similar arrangement.

And while the Ivory Coast kid looks to be packed with promise, it means the Ibrox side begin yet another summer overhaul having to spend £4.5m just to stand still.

Signing Abdallah Sima could see that sum more than double without improving Rangers one jot on last season's squad.

With Diomande, it seems to be a price worth paying given the encouraging way he settled into Clement's lineup. But there are no guarantees where Cortes is concerned. There's barely even a body of evidence to draw any conclusions.

Gers must spend a hefty sum on Cortes but what if he proves to be a flash in the pan?

In his first six months in France after moving from boyhood club Millonarios, he registered just four first-team run-outs. Four.

He managed only seven more with Rangers before his season was ended early by a knee injury.

Rangers knew they were taking a punt when they got him in January. That's why they worked in an option to buy rather than the obligation clause with Diomande.

Clement is delighted to have another major part of his summer rebuild nailed down following the signing of Brazilian left-back Jefte.

Cortes was just getting going at Ibrox when injury struck during a clash at Kilmarnock in February.

He had netted his first Gers goal against Hearts just four days earlier but is now looking forward to joining up with his team-mates for pre-season early next month after successfully completing a three-month rehab. Clement said: "I am really pleased to have Oscar coming back. He was a big asset to the squad when he came to the club and showed the qualities that attracted him to us.

'Oscar suffered a setback but he has worked tirelessly during his recovery. I'm sure all of the fans are looking forward to seeing him again." Cortes, who has remained in fitness, said: "I'm delighted to be able to stay at Rangers. "It was an honour and a privilege to join the club in

'Tommy is an excellent player. He's a good finisher, strong, has a great attitude.

"If you compare that with a lot of young players, that's what you need to be ready if the opportunity comes. You could see he's in Turkey fought back to win it. But, in truth, Ipswich keeper Cieran Slicker had to produce several wonderful saves to keep the scoreline respectable before the Scots rallied at the end and came close to a late leveller.

Gemmill added: "We're not happy because we lost but there were a lot of positives.

"It was great to see the new players, a great experience against a team at a really high level. We have to put it in context. We're not happy to lose but there were some really good parts.

"Cieran's not been playing team and Killie talent David Watson was given a first start. Scotland made a bright start when Conway found an 18th-minute opener, heading Lewis Fiorini's cross back across goal to wrongfoot the keeper. But Scotland's charmed life came to an end in the 25th minute when Rennes striker

Bertug Yıldırım netted from close range.

Conway had another strike ruled out for offside when he volleyed home midway through the first period.

But right before half-time, Trabzonspor kid Enis Destan nodded in from a corner.

Blackpool's Robert Apter was handed a first cap as a sub, along with Motherwell's Lennon Miller, later on and the midfielder wasn't far from making a spectacular impact with a zipped free-kick.

Apter then threatened with nine minutes left but his low shot that was smothered by keeper Dogan Alemdar.

He came even closer with a curling effort from 25 yards that was brilliantly tipped around a post.

Scots can learn from Ukraine's resolve & discipline as our rivals stutter

EURO2024

JULIAN NAGELSMANN was told the same thing after seeking out three of his predecessors as Germany boss for advice on the eve of the Euros.

DAILY RECO

"There's no blueprint for success at major finals," came the reply from Jurgen Klinsmann, Hansi Flick and World Cup winner Joachim Low. "So go with your guts."

Maybe that's just as well for the hosts because the plan Nagelsmann has come up with is still some way off clicking.

With less than a fortnight to go before the big kick-off against Scotland in Munich, Die Nationalmannschaft had the chance to put on a show of intent against Ukraine.

Instead, in their penultimate warm-up clash, it was mostly a display of indecision in the final third which will fill Steve Clarke's heart with optimism.

It will require a flawless 90-minute display but if Scotland can match the resolve and discipline Ukraine showed while nullifying Germany, maybe they can spoil next week's big Bavarian welcome party.

Clarke was provided with a useful glimpse at what he can expect to see from the three-time winners in their Group A opener on June 14. It was pretty much a full were undermined again yesterday when national TV broadcasters ARD released the results of a survey in which 21 per cent of respondents called on Nagelsmann to pick more white players in his team.

Correctly, the 36-year-old wasn't standing for any of that nonsense as he berated the "racist" and "insane" poll. "I hope I never have to read about such a crap survey again," he said afterwards.

But the row gives an insight into a mindset of a group of fans clearly still struggling to get to grips with a lowly 16th in the FIFA rankings.

Having struggled with an uncomfortable counterattacking style under Flick, the new boss has tried to get his side back on the front foot.

But their mixture of shots from distance and crosses from deep were no problem for a Ukraine side content to sit in and defend while false nine Kai Havertz looked lost up front at times.

Dortmund's Niclas Fullkrug would give Germany a more orthodox striking option but Scotland will certainly have to beware the talents of their twin 10s Florian Wirtz and Jamal Musiala.

But there's definitely a vulnerability at the back which Ukraine very nearly exploited on the counter attack.

Now it's down to Clarke to come up with a masterplan that can get the job done.

Scotland's final Group A game with the Hungarians may be pivotal to both nations' hopes of reaching the knockout stages.

The Irish haven't scored in the two friendlies since John O'Shea took interim charge but Hungary have conceded twice in each of their last two away days.

That makes me think we could see goals tonight and McBookie price over 2.5 strikes at 5/4. Adam Idah should lead the line after his impressive loan at Celtic and he's 3/1 (bet365) for anytime scorer. Hungary's PEDRO MARTINEZ LOSA believes Scotland are ready to kick on after topping their group on Friday night.

The 4-1 win over Israel at Hampden took Scotland to the summit of Group B2, putting them firmly in the driving seat to take a Euro 2025 play-off spot. Martinez Losa urged his side to be prepared for what could be another disrupted night with the game again behind closed doors, this time in Budapest.

The Scotland boss said: "Being top gives us motivation to get stronger. "When you win, you're naturally in a good place and have the desire to keep learning, keep improving.

Friday's kick-off was delayed after a protester chained himself to a post. And Martinez Losa said: "As a group and a staff, we coped very well with those challenges.

"We responded well and kept our focus, as you could see the way we performed in the opening period. We have to be prepared but hopefully circumstances aren't quite as challenging."

Goals have been a headache at times and he added: "It was good for us to score four goals.

'These are areas we've worked on consistently. "We have Martha Thomas and Kirsty Hanson back, which has been positive, and we'll get stronger. This is about consolidating the work we've done and making sure we produce a performance as strong as we did at Hampden."

GIBRALTAR keeper Jaylan Hankins admits Che Adams screamer was too fast for him but Scotland were slower than he expected.

10 DAYS TILL TOURNAMENT

IT was the kind of friendly fixture that will have folk scratching their heads at a pub quiz in years to come.

But it was an occasion Ross McCrorie will never forget. The full-back was thrilled to make his Scotland debut in the 2-0 win against Gibraltar. And while the encounter was hardly a classic, the Bristol City star is hoping it's the starting point for his international career. McCrorie strolled through the 90 minutes in the Algarve and said: "For me, getting my debut for my national team is the highlight of my career and it is something I will never forget.

"I can only kick on from here. It felt really good, brilliant. "It's a proud moment for me and my family. "For any footballer, making your international debut is the pinnacle of your career and it is just such a proud moment for myself.

"There were a little bit of nerves there at the start but you are a footballer and you've got to relish these opportunities.

"You want to play in all the big games, you want to play for your national team. After the season I had with injury at the start, it just felt like all that hard work had come to fruition."

McCrorie has been thrust into the frame for Germany on the back of injuries to Aaron Hickey and Nathan Patterson.

The former Rangers and Aberdeen defender is gutted for his right-back rivals.

However, he is determined to make the most of his big chance as he gets set to scrap it out with close pal Anthony Ralston for the role in Germany. The 26-year-old said: "It's a

"It's obviously never nice to see injuries and the boys in qualifying were playing at a top level.

"I'm grateful to the gaffer for keeping an eye on me down at Bristol since I've been back from injury and he's had the belief in me to pick me, which feels really good.

other. We came in at the start of last week and it's been really good. "You could tell straight away this is a tight-knit group and that can only be a good thing for us." McCrorie was a happy man and there wasn't too much panic in the group – despite being made to sweat by the international whipping boys.

Scotland passed up a barrel load of chances before Ryan Christie eventually made the breakthrough almost an hour in and then Che Adams slammed in a second late on. At least it was a victory after seven without a win.

While boss Steve Clarke admitted he can't afford his side to be as wasteful in Germany, Christie is convinced the group will come good when it matters. He said: "There's a bit of relief we got the job done in the end. "We should definitely have scored a few more. "We'd have liked to be a couple ahead by half-time. I got the first one eventually, though Che then got an absolute cracker. "We're definitely going into the Finland game a lot happier. "I'm not really worried about us missing chances. "We didn't have trouble finding the net in the qualifiers and here's hoping we are saving the goals for over in Germany. "It will be a completely different game over there. "Hopefully they'll be more open, which will suit us more. "We've now got Finland before then at our home ground with conditions that suit us better. "We'll look to put in a good performance to send us on our way with a few more goals under our belt."

A kickabout against Gibraltar in the Algarve is a world away from the opening game of the Euros in Munich.

Sure enough, Christie is convinced the real deal will bring out the best in Scotland.

He said: "Right across football it's easier to raise your game when there is something to play for. International friendlies are always a weird kind of feeling – they're like pre-season games in the middle of all the competitive football. But when you're playing for something, for your fans, it's totally different. It lifts everything. "It's great now that we've met up and it's all just around the corner.

"For the final few weeks with your club, you're trying not to think about it – and there's no doubt you're scared of getting injured."

Scotland jetted back to their Glasgow HQ straight after the game and Christie is relishing the rising excitement.

He added: "To feel the buzz properly building up and trying to grow the momentum... "Being in Glasgow, in the camp

"Being in Glasgow, in the camp every day, speaking to you guys, talking to family and friends about their plans for going over, it all makes it feel real.

"There are so many requests for tickets, you're inundated. I've got so many friends and family going and you feed off their excitement."

RANGERS snapped up a second South American summer signing as Colombian winger Oscar Cortes joined Brazilian Jefte by penning another loan deal in Govan.

But one Hotline caller reckons Philippe Clement should be looking far closer to home for a striker – and it's not Lawrence Shankland.

Ian Renton, Johnstone, has been blown away by a Highlands hitman he reckons has a not-so-secret superpower. He said: "If Rangers are looking to sign more reliable strikers, they should be checking out Simon Murray, who has scored 23 goals for Ross County this season. Yes, he is 32 but I would suggest he is in the best form of his career.

"He also brings an energy to the team that means no defender can take their eyes off him.

"He has one other thing going for him - he is a ginger, meaning he will never give up."

Clement had less luck in Central America after being snubbed by Panama international Jose Cordoba who looks set for Norwich. Andrew Lamb, Fraserburgh, said: "I'm just astonished at the accusations of Rangers being skint and having no money due to the collapse of the Cordoba move.

"Most clubs structure transfer fee payments. Can I also point out that nobodies like Norwich will gain far more money than any SPFL club due to the Sky TV deal, £3million is loose change in the English top leagues."

Rangers confirmed a list of released players including John Lundstram, Borna Barisic, Ryan Jack and Kemar Roofe. Tam Williamson, Lanarkshire, said: "The Rangers failures who only last season were being classed as superstars are now flooding out

But the manager was happy with the victory after going seven games without a win in the midst of Euro qualification.

eye-watering 14 against France - and had a debut keeper in Jaylan Hankins, who plays for Bruno's Magpies.

It took until the 23rd shot on goal for Scotland to make the breakthrough, which is not a luxury Clarke's men will have in Germany, that's for sure.

The whole point of taking on these minnows was to give us some target practice but it looks like they might need some extra sessions.

It was almost silly how many sitters Scotland contrived to miss, the crazy thing being their rivals' new keeper didn't actually have to make too many saves.

Around 1000 hardy Tartan Army souls pitched up in the Estadio Algarve but by the end the only noise around the ground was coming from Bill, the groundsman's dog. No joke. As for on the pitch, Scotland had plenty of bark but not enough bite.

The Scotland boss has had to grit his teeth a bit of late. Nothing is every straightforward when it comes to our nation.

Everything was going swimmingly a few months ago but then players started dropping like flies.

A couple of right-backs went with Aaron Hickey and Nathan Patterson's injuries.

One of the best midfielders in Italy in Lewis Ferguson was ruled out. Then came the heartbreaking sight of Lyndon Dykes being stretchered out of training Back then, Clarke had to deal with the usual sore knees and achy ankles, albeit he also had to cope with a global pandemic.

Never mind ramming swabs up the beaks, the gaffer could have been forgiven for sticking pants on his napper and two pencils up his nostrils.

All that carry-on has steeled the Avrshireman, though.

He doesn't get fazed by much and likewise there was no knee jerking here. It's worth noting, Clarke's line-up is unlikely to be too close to the one walking out at the Allianz Arena a week on Friday.

It was about getting minutes on the pitch for the guys who needed it and giving others the chance to secure their seats on the plane. Clarke has to cut one from his group of 27 and it could be his decision is made for him after yet more injury heartache for Liam Cooper, with the defender limping off clutching his knee towards the end.

It was brutal for the Leeds man but it's left the manager with one big call to come whether he adds another striker to his list.

It was Lawrence Shankland who got the start but he couldn't get the goal, while main man Che Adams buried one late on.

There was no sign of Ben Doak - who can play up there and it does look a little thin on the ground for frontmen.

There's not much Clarke can do to conjure one out of thin air but we could certainly do with some more firepower.

Last night was a case in point. Clarke's troops should have been about four up before the drinks break midway through the first half. In fact, they seriously could have matched France's seven before half-time if they had the shooting boots on. Scotland had an incredible 20 digs in the opening 45 minutes... and only hit the target twice.

Sheesh. Perhaps it's best to get these sitters out of the way now rather than in Germany. But, boy, did Scotland miss some chances. Grant Hanley should have had a first-half hat-trick. He had one header saved but managed to defy the laws of physics to put another over and poke one wide with the goal gaping later on. There was a James Forrest effort into the side netting, Ryan Christie testing the goalie and blasting a volley over, Kenny McLean twice missing headers, Shankland skied a couple while there were other moments crying out for a little more quality and composure. It was all a bit ridiculous as keeper Zander Clark could have dragged out a sun lounger. It was similar after the break.

Cooper replaced Hanley, then immediately got in on the act by nutting a header over the bar and nodding another one towards Hankins.

Fear not, though. The goal mercifully arrived after 58 minutes of banging on the door.

Forrest did the spadework and Andy Robertson clipped to the back post where Shankland and Christie did a quick game of rock, paper, scissors before the latter came out on top to cut inside and smash into the net.

It was sheer relief and by the time Adams smashed in a late volley for the second, it was job done in the grand plan of lulling the Germans into a false sense of security.
