and condensate fields in the offshore Browse Basin, located approximately 425 km north of Broome, Western Australia.

Key work activities continued in support of the proposed Browse to NWS Project development, including engagements with environmental regulators on approvals and progressing commercial agreements. A CCS solution has been incorporated into the offshore design to abate a significant proportion of Browse reservoir CO₂. The Browse Joint Venture is evaluating further carbon abatement and energy efficiency opportunities to reduce and manage greenhouse gas emissions.

EXPLORATION

Woodside's exploration strategy remains focused on accessing, testing and developing low cost, lower carbon, value-adding opportunities with the characteristics and project pace to be resilient through the energy transition.

In the US Gulf of Mexico, Woodside was awarded five leases in lease sale 259 and was the highest bidder on 18 leases in lease sale 261. Woodside acquired a 44% working interest in two leases in the Green Canyon protraction area and participated in the drilling of the Spinel well (non-operated), which did not encounter hydrocarbons. Also acquired, was a 30% working interest in 11 leases in the Atwater Valley protraction area.

The Egyptian regulator approved Woodside's acquisition of a 27% interest in two non-operated blocks in the Herodotus Basin.

Woodside signed an option agreement to acquire at least a 56%

Woodside continued to optimise its exploration portfolio, exiting blocks no longer considered prospective. This included a decision to exit Block 5 in deepwater Trinidad and Tobago and completing formal exit activities in offshore Canada, Republic of Korea, Peru and Myanmar Block A-6.

Woodside assessed possible oil reserve site 'not prospective'

An assessment last year by Woodside Energy determined that the Pohang site was "no longer considered prospective."
