As filmmakers take to low ticket prices to encourage moviegoers to come to cinema halls, we weigh in on the trend

PAISA KAM, VIEWERS ZYADA

rishabh.suri@htlive.com

The fact that big films haven't been working and the smaller ones are expected to take the OTT route hasn't been great news for the big-screen business. Naturally, the industry is experimenting with a host of strategies to see what clicks with the viewers, with ticket pricing being top priority. The makers of Chandu Champion decided to cap the ticket prices on the first day of its release to ₹150. The same strategy was adopted for the horror-comedy Munjya, which has been doing well at the box office.

Munjya director Aditya Sarpotdar says, "It is a major contributor to the numbers our film has done. We saw how people rushed to the theatres to watch Mr and Mrs Mahi on Cinema Day, when the tickets were priced at ₹99. It was a clear indicator for us that people want to watch movies, but there is only a certain amount that they want to spend on tickets."

WORD OF MOUTH

Word of mouth plays a huge role in making a film work and that requires more people to hit the cinemas. Low ticket prices is a definite formula for success in that regard. "You have to believe that the audience that comes on the first Friday at a low price will help more people watch the film, even when the prices go up, because of how they talk about your movie," Sarpotdar explains.

This (low ticket prices) is a marketing strategy. You invite people and let the movie grow. Producers should only go for low-ticket prices if they are confident about the product.

DEVANG SAMPAT, MANAGING DIRECTOR, CINEPOLIS INDIA

DOES BOGO WORK?

Last year, Zara Hatke Zara Bachke (2023) had a buy one, get one (BOGO) offer on tickets to encourage people to head to cinema halls. Does that pricing strategy work? Trade analyst Taran Adarsh says, "I am strictly against BOGO. Free mein film bana rahe ho kya jo free mein dikha rahe ho? You make a film with so much effort, take a star at astronomical prices and pehle din pe hi BOGO? Star power kis kaam ki hai phir?"

You have to believe that the audience that comes on the first Friday at a low price will help more people watch the film, even when the prices go up, because of how they talk about your movie.

head of their wedding tomorrow (June 23) in Mumbai, actor-couple Sonakshi Sinha and Zaheer Iqbal had a family outing on Thursday night. The couple was accompanied by Sonakshi's parents, actor-MP Shatrughan Sinha and Poonam Sinha, and Zaheer's father, businessman-jeweller Iqbal Ratansi. The intimate gathering shut down the rumours of Sonakshi's family not being in favour of the union, as Shatrughan posed happily with his soon-to-be son-in-law.

Actor Kritika Kamra has confirmed her role as the female lead opposite actor Vijay Varma in the upcoming web series Matka King. The 35-year-old reveals that she has already filmed some portions of the series, with the "meaty parts remaining to be shot".

She shares, "My character plays a significant role in the evolution of matka in the 70s and '80s in Mumbai. Matka aka satta or betting is introduced and revolutionised in the project by Vijay's character, who is the Matka King. My character joins him in this journey and helps in shaping it."

Set in the 1960s, the show revolves around the life of Ratan Khatri, a pivotal figure in the world of Indian betting, known as the Matka King. Kamra, who will be filming from July to September in Mumbai, says she is busy preparing for the role. She has been "immersing" herself in "reading material provided by director Nagraj Manjule and writer Abhay Koranne".

This rebound romance is confused, frivolous and doesn't give any closure

ISHQ VISHK REBOUND
Cast: Rohit Saraf, Pashmina Roshan, Jibraan Khan, Naila Grrewal, Supriya Pilgaonkar
Direction: Nipun Dharmadhikari

Love triangles and complicated love stories between friends are a popular trope in Bollywood. Kuch Kuch Hota Hai (1998) is the OG, of course, followed by Ishq Vishk (2003), which launched the charming Shahid Kapoor. Two decades later, we have a spiritual sequel (whatever that means). Ishq Vishk Rebound tries really hard to stay afloat and meanders more than you can take. In fact, there's a dialogue in the film that goes, "Clarity ka raasta confusion se guzarta hai", something I wish could be said about the storyline and ending.

A "Gen Z rom-com", begins with best friends — Raghav (Rohit Saraf), Sanya (Pashmina Roshan) and Sahir (Jibraan Khan), Riya

(Naila Grrewal) joins at some point to turn the trio into a foursome. While Raghav loves books and writing scripts, Sanya and Sahir fall for each other. But what happens when they breakup and Raghav ends up as the fall-back guy, trapped between his besties?

After all the confusion, complications and complexities that the protagonists go through, there's barely any clarity for the audience. Although the characters seem to get closure, something feels amiss.

At 106 minutes, Ishq Vishk Rebound is one of the shortest releases recently, but it fails to engage its audience. Director Dharmadhikari has co-written the story with four others — Dr Vinay Chhawal, Vaishali Naik, Ketan Pedgaonkar and Akarsh Khurana — and perhaps that's why you feel like the four have written a character each. The patchy screenplay makes the storyline look disjointed at times.

Saraf as the permanent kebab mein haddi holds the film entirely on his shoulders. He has his lows, but doesn't give you a chance to complain. Roshan gets the maximum screen time but doesn't bring anything new to the table; I couldn't look past her dialogue delivery that reminded me of Kim Sharma in Mohabbatein (2000). Khan makes you swoon with his chiseled abs and despite his limited screen time, he manages to shine. Grrewal delivers the strongest performance of the lot, but was unfortunately forgotten for most of the film.

I really liked the complex yet interesting stories of their families. In fact, these narratives are more appealing than the main romance.

Is the film better than its predecessor? No. Is it bad? Not really. Simply put, it's an easy watch that's fun and frivolous. In one of the scenes, Sanya tells Raghav, "Your characters are mature, but you have a lot of growing up to do". This is exactly what I'd like to tell the whole team — the story is mature and intense, but there's still a lot that can make it clearer.

'MY SEXUALITY HASN'T STOPPED ME FROM GETTING WORK'

This Pride Month, Yuvraj Menda talks to us about being an openly gay actor in the film industry

Rishabh Suri
rishabh.suri@htlive.com

At the age of 20, Yuvraj Menda has a lot on his plate. The actor is busy juggling academics with life after his debut film, The Archies (2023).

In Pride Month, we ask Menda, who came out at 13,

I haven't come across people who view being gay as a hinderance.

YUVRAJ MENDA, Actor

whether he feels that being openly gay might affect his chances in the industry. "I can only speak for myself. I haven't felt like it has been a hindrance," he replies, adding that work has been streaming in. "Life has been great. I am auditioning, so hopefully I will be acting more. I am grateful we are at a stage where we don't think of someone's sexual orientation as an [obstacle]," Menda tells us.

Talking about The Archies, he says, "Luckily, I got to work with Zoya Akhtar (filmmaker) and it was as normal an experience as it would be for anyone," he tells us, adding, "It's what the LGBTQIA+ community wants the world to strive towards."

Menda has always been open about his identity and he credits those closest to him for it. "I told my friends first, then I told my family. Touchwood, I attribute my ability to be candid about my sexuality to them," he reveals.

While aspiring actors tend to stay in Mumbai for auditions, Menda is currently at university abroad and has chosen not to leave his studies "midway". "If I have an audition, I can do that sitting in university as well. My friends help me with my dialogues and scenes," he wraps up.

Lakshmi Manchu says dad Mohan Babu 'roadblocked' her career

Actor-producer Mohan Babu

PHOTOS: INSTAGRAM/LAKSHMI MANCHU

As the daughter of actor-producer Mohan Babu, Manchu Lakshmi Prasanna is one of the few female actors in the south who comes from a film family. Despite the fact that her brothers Manoj and Vishnu Manchu are also actors, she insists that she had to fight for the opportunities she got.

"I am a victim of the patriarchy. Men in the south aren't okay with heroes' sisters or daughters being actors," she told Free Press Journal.

The 46-year-old made her acting debut in Hollywood with Las Vegas and later Desperate Housewives before returning to Tollywood in 2011. "Prakash (Kovelamudi, director) introduced me to films with Anaganaga O Dheerudu (2011), but my dad and grandfather (Raghavendra Rao, director) tried to get this idea out of our heads," added the actor who was also part of the anthology, Pitta Kathalu (2021).

When asked if moving to Mumbai from Hyderabad for her career was difficult, Manchu replied, "There was only one roadblock, my family." She noted that while she put off the move due to her daughter Nirvana, her actor friends advised her otherwise. "I would stay at my best friend Rakul Preet Singh's (actor) house, who would insist that I move to Mumbai. Rana (Daggubati, actor) also told me I couldn't stay in Hyderabad forever," she concluded.

ON THE NEED TO COME UP WITH CONTENT TAILOR-MADE FOR OTT

I have to agree that we have a shortage of writers and directors in the Kannada industry right now. We need to create more content that is stronger because the kind of films that people watch on the web and the kind that are made for mass consumption are quite different. The Malayalam industry has fared well in this aspect. Of late, they have been making small films that are making it really big, but this did not happen overnight. It probably started somewhere in early the 2010s — the foundation was laid much earlier because they had prepared their audience for sensible movies from a very long time ago. This was there in Kannada cinema, too, at one point. As content makers, you need to gain the trust of the audience — which is what we need to do as Kannada filmmakers, on a continuous basis. We can't have one good year and then have a bad phase and then come back a year later.

'HAVE TRIED MULTIPLE TIMES BUT PLATFORMS ARE NOT READY TO PICK KANNADA CONTENT UP'

I know for a fact that the Kannada industry doesn't have good representation within OTT platforms and that they don't understand our industry. They don't know who is who. Like in the way they understand the Telugu or Tamil market, they should have somebody local who knows who is doing good work here. It's extremely heartbreaking as somebody who is a representative of the Kannada film industry. We have a population of six crore people in Karnataka. What is shocking is that when you log into this one particular OTT platform, the top 10 films that they have ranked, even today, are all dubbed films that are non-original Kannada projects! And they don't want to acquire new films. We have tried multiple times. In fact, I have tried multiple times. I have a film that is ready, but OTTs are not ready to pick it up.

Rakshit Shetty's revelation that there are "no takers" for his Kannada web series Ekam has stunned audiences and Kannada industry insiders alike. On June 17, the actor-filmmaker, who is a National Film Award recipient, wrote on X that the search for a platform has gone on for two years now. Shetty, who, in 2022 and 2023, has had blockbusters such as 777 Charlie (2022), Sapta Saagaradaache Ello (Side A & Side B), also said Ekam will now release on an independent platform.

It's a baffling disclosure, especially considering that the Kirik Party (2016) star has always been known for his content-driven films and has had success after success since his debut with Nam Areal Ond Dina (2010). Sapta Saagaradaache Ello director Hemanth Rao says, "Films in Tamil, Hindi, Telugu and Malayalam do equally good business in Karnataka. That's not the case in any other southern Indian state."

Explaining how this phenomenon has also skewed business, he notes: "The local language has taken a back-seat, unfortunately, and it is reflective in terms of business. So, when an OTT giant picks up, say, a Telugu film, they will possibly see that the subscriptions in Bangalore/Karnataka are only increasing. So, the OTT-content buying patterns have completely changed."

Vikrant Rona (2022) director Anup Bhandari attributes the OTT platforms' reluctance about Kannada content to "confusion about how some of the previous films have fared". Bhandari elaborates, "Before 2022, there was reluctance in buying Kannada content that did not have a star. But unlike 2022, 2023 wasn't such a good year for the industry, and the confidence was lost. We need to create more content that is stronger because the kind of films that people watch on the web and the kind that are made for mass consumption are quite different."

Rao points out that the lack of representation which could form a bridge between the industry and OTT platforms, is to blame, too. "Within every OTT platform, there will be somebody who is in charge of an industry, with a good know-how dictated by economics and viewing patterns. So, the onus and responsibility are on the makers, too. The stakes have got higher for the Kannada film industry. If you keep making fantastic films, no one is going to walk away because you are showing that there is business," Rao wraps up.

I am now a 'genre-doesn't-matter Jang Ki-yong,'" says South Korean actor Jang Ki-yong, back on the screen after a two-year hiatus. Talking about how his return to the screen was a time for recalibration, the 31-year-old tells us, "While I served in the military, I kept thinking about my work, and was willing to exert myself in trying new things, to showcase different aspects and sides of me to the audience."

Ki-yong, who plays a time-travelling single father in fantasy series The Atypical Family, which he has made a comeback with, says that in addition to the story, the chance to collaborate with director Jo Hyun-tak (Sky Castle) and writers Ju Hwa-mi (My Shy Boss) and creator Kang Eun-Kyung (The World of the Married) was an exciting prospect.

"There were several new and fresh elements to the script. I was charmed by the unpredictability of it all. This was my first time portraying a father on screen. I changed my hairstyle and appearance as well. It was presented as naturally as possible. I felt that in his way, he tries his hardest to find happiness back in his lacklustre life," he explains.

While I served in the military, I kept thinking about my work, and was willing to exert myself in trying new things. I'm glad I can now enjoy my work a lot more.

A model-turned-actor, Ki-yong made his screen debut with a cameo on the 2014 TV show It's Okay, That's Love. He shot to fame in 2018, with the romantic thriller Come and Hug Me, which was followed by Search: WWW (2019), My Roommate is a Gumiho (2021) and Now We Are Breaking Up (2022). The 31-year-old confesses he sees a shift in himself, especially given his attitude towards work. "In my 20s, I was kind of living life to the fullest and treating work like an assignment. But after serving in the military and entering my 30s, I see a change in perspective, and am glad that I can enjoy and appreciate my work a lot more," he tells us.

Given the popularity of Indian films such as Black (2005), 3 Idiots (2009), My Name is Khan (2010) and, of late, RRR (2022) in South Korea — and the percentage of Indians consuming Korean content rising exponentially — Jang Ki-yong says he would be more than happy to try his luck in Bollywood. "I like Bollywood films. They have such eye-catching elements. If given the chance, I would love to be a part of it anytime," he gushes.

He acknowledges it is also a thriving time for the Korean entertainment industry. "As an actor, it is really exciting and overwhelming with the diversity of genres and platforms available to us as well as viewers across the world, who are enjoying what we do. It's what makes me work harder at what I do now," Ki-yong signs off.

NET ASPIRANTS RUE THE WASTE OF THEIR HARD WORK

Aspirants voice their frustration as the UGC-NET exam gets cancelled a day after it was held on June 18

htcity@hindustantimes.com

Disappointment, distress and dismay took over more than 9 lakh UGC-NET aspirants, who got to know on Wednesday that the exam they appeared for, on June 18, was cancelled as the integrity of the paper was compromised. From protesting on the streets to venting on social media — the aspirants are raising their voice for justice.

Tarunikka Bhatia, who has an MA in Psychology, says, "It took me four months to prepare for the exam. When I heard it was cancelled, I felt distraught," says the 23-year-old resident of Faridabad.

For the outstation aspirants, who chose to appear for the test in Delhi, it's a double whammy. "I travelled from Assam to Delhi for the exam," says 26-year-old Nilakshi Phukon, who is pursuing a PhD in Psychology, adding, "I had to plan extensively for this because I want to secure a decent NET score so I can get a government teaching job."

I had taken a month off from college and put my studies and personal life on hold for something that is not considered relevant now. According to the unofficial answer keys, I was scoring well and was hopeful of getting JRF. But now I don't know what lies ahead.

Dhirendra Kumar, Political Science student, Jawaharlal Nehru University

For the past year, each day of my life was all about working on my PhD coursework, teaching at a private university in Noida and preparing for the NET exam. Whatever I built over the last 365 days has crashed in a minute. It has taken a toll on my mental health, too; I feel exhausted at the thought of reappearing.

Viral glitter shampoo:
Is it safe for your hair?

Kriti Shukla

kriti.shukla@hindustantimes.com

Social media is abuzz with a new hair trend — glitter shampoo. Scrolling through the hashtag #haircare, you’ve probably seen the eye-catching trend of shimmering, sparkly hair. But before you grab the craft glitter to jazz up your next wash, here’s a closer look at the potential damage it poses to your scalp and the environment.

SHIMMERY STRANDS OR MICROPLASTIC MENACE? Videos across TikTok and Instagram show users mixing colourful craft glitter with clear shampoo for a dazzling mane. Beauty influencer Tessa Peay’s take on the trend, for instance, has around 32 million views.

While the results are undeniably striking, dermatologists are concerned about glitter’s effect on your hair. Dermatologist Dr Amit Vij, says, “Those sparkly strands might come at a cost. Most glitter is made of plastic microplastics that can leach harmful heavy metals and can damage your hair, giving it a gritty, dry texture.”

PHOTOS: INSTAGRAM

The viral trend involves mixing craft glitter into your shampoo

materials like plant cellulose. It is a safer option that washes out after some time.” However, he cautions that eco-friendly glitter can still irritate the scalp.

SHORT-TERM SPARKLE BUT LONG-TERM RISKS Despite the allure of sparkly locks, Vij warns against long-term use. “The glitter in products like gels or sprays can melt or break down in the hair, especially when it is left over or exposed to heat.”

If you still want a shimmer effect, consider temporary hair colours or natural products made with coloured rice and oatmeal. Before reaching for glitter, opt for light reflecting products that contain mica for a natural shine.

Still have your heart set on the glitter? Test it on a small section of your hair for a short duration and wash it out immediately. Remember to maintain a regular hair care routine to prevent any dryness or damage.

When Sehwal bribed umpire Rudi!

Former India opener Virender Sehwal spilled the beans on how he bribed the late South African umpire Rudi Koertzen. Viru recalled that the umpire had approached him to ask for a pair of blue colour leg pads for himself. The batter, in his typical style, offered him his own, which Koertzen accepted with a smile. In exchange, Viru extracted a promise from the umpire that he'd not give him a dismissal on the pitch. A few months later, he recalled, the umpire refused to declare him out, despite a very strong LBW appeal. Viru himself said that he was clearly out and joked that Koertzen told him that he could not save him anymore!
