Illinois Lottery celebrates 50 years of rich history, from pingpong balls and nightly televised drawings to freshly minted folk-hero millionaires

A STREAK OF GOOD LUCK

By Robert Channick | Chicago Tribune

The Illinois Lottery is celebrating the 50th anniversary of its first drawing on Thursday, a pioneering gamble that has become an enduring cash cow for the state, and a shared fantasy for millions of players.

Plunk down a couple of bucks, stick a ticket in your wallet and, for the better part of a week, there's a chance you might become a millionaire. Just ask Michael Wittkowksi, a blue-collar guy from the Northwest Side whose life changed as a 28-year-old in 1984 when he won $40 million playing Lotto — then the largest lottery prize in U.S. history — becoming a Chicago folk hero and star of the state's nascent numbers game.

Wittkowski, a printer by trade, parlayed his newfound riches into a surprisingly normal if well-funded life, getting married and raising three sons far from the limelight in northwest suburban Inverness.

"I'm glad it happened to me," said Wittkowksi, 68, long retired and living quietly in the same house for 30 years. "It's made a huge difference in all of our lives."

While the world has changed a lot in the last half-century, the dream has lost none of its luster. The lottery is coming off a record $3.6 billion in sales in fiscal year 2023, still the most of any wagering segment in Illinois despite the advent of casinos, sports betting and thousands of video gaming terminals across the state.

The Illinois Lottery has grown exponentially since its inception in 1974, minting thousands of millionaires, generating billions in revenue and dramatically

Harris, Walz, Vance make Midwest push as sides look to secure key battleground

By Darlene Superville, Joey Cappelletti and Meg Kinnard
Associated Press

EAU CLAIRE, Wis. — Vice President Kamala Harris declared herself and her new running mate, Minnesota Gov. Tim Walz, "joyful warriors" against former President Donald Trump on Wednesday as they spent their first full day campaigning together across the Midwest. They got an unusual glimpse of how hotly contested the region will be when they overlapped on a Wisconsin tarmac with Republican vice presidential nominee JD Vance.

The Democrats visited Wisconsin and Michigan, hoping to shore up support among the younger, diverse, labor-friendly voters who were instrumental in helping President Joe Biden win the 2020 election.

Harris told the day's first rally in Eau Claire, "As Tim Walz likes to point out, we are joyful warriors." Contributing to that feeling, the Harris campaign said it had raised $36 million in the first 24 hours after she announced Walz as her running mate.

The vice president said the pair look on the future with optimism, unlike Trump whom she accused of being stuck in the past and preferring a confrontational style of politics — even as she criticized her opponent herself.

"Someone who suggests we should terminate the Constitution of the United States should never again have the chance to sit behind the seal of the United States," Harris said, her voice rising amid applause from a crowd her campaign said numbered more than 12,000.

Wednesday's campaign swing was especially important for her and Walz

For figure skating champs, gold things come to those who wait

Addison's Knierim, teammates finally receive Beijing medals

By Stacy St. Clair
Chicago Tribune

PARIS — Addison native Alexa Knierim and the 2022 U.S. figure skating team made Olympic history Wednesday, becoming the first Winter athletes to be awarded a gold medal at a Summer Games.

The 20-minute ceremony, conducted in the shadow of the Eiffel Tower, came more than 900 days after the American squad competed in Beijing. No medals were awarded for the team figure skating event in China while officials tried to sort out a doping scandal involving a Russian skater.

Knierim — who competed there in pairs skating with partner Brandon Frazier — initially had been skeptical about the Paris presentation, doubting whether it could re-create the joy Olympians feel in the moments following a gold medal performance. In the end, the ceremony didn't make up for everything they lost, Knierim said, but it gave the team something truly special.

"This is such a historic moment," she said. "I was just looking around and thinking how nothing like this has ever happened. I'm grateful for the opportunity to be in front of the Eiffel Tower, in the sunshine and just be acknowledged with my teammates."

Pritzker calls for downstate sheriff to resign over handling of Massey case

By Jeremy Gorner and Olivia Olander
Chicago Tribune

In a strongly worded public rebuke of another elected government official in Illinois, Gov. J.B. Pritzker and Lt. Gov. Juliana Stratton have called on a downstate sheriff to resign over his handling of the death of Sonya Massey, who was shot and killed by one of his deputies.

The state's Democratic leaders said Republican Sangamon County Sheriff Jack Campbell "should have taken his leadership role more seriously" in a release issued several hours after the governor said Tuesday that he was "disappointed" at the answers Campbell had given as to why the deputy who killed Massey was hired.

"The sheriff has failed," Pritzker said at an unrelated news conference Wednesday. "He has failed to explain how he ended up hiring this deputy sheriff ... and still has failed to meet with the Massey family."

While Pritzker said failing to meet with the family was not necessarily a fireable offense, he added that it "just seems outrageous to me. At a minimum, listen to them, hear them, and then, hopefully, take action."

The statement from Pritzker and Stratton said Campbell has had "ample opportunity to respond with conviction and purpose to questions" about his hiring of Deputy Sean Grayson, who was fired over the Massey killing and has been charged with murder.

Pritzker and Stratton noted that they had met with Massey's family and "made a commitment to support them in working for justice."

"We join the Massey family in calling for Sheriff Campbell's resignation immediately so the Springfield and Sangamon County community can begin to rebuild and restore trust between citizens and the sheriff's department," the statement said.

Campbell issued a lengthy response Wednesday morning reiterating his determination to stay in office and questioning the motivation behind calls for him to step down.

"Calls for my resignation are nothing more than political maneuvering during a tragic event and only hurt the good citizens of Sangamon County," Campbell said.

"I was overwhelmingly elected to lead the Sheriff's Office through both good times and bad. I am fully prepared to continue leading my office and serving the residents of Sangamon County through this difficult period, ensuring we learn from this tragedy and work toward a better future."

Campbell also said he has made four requests to meet with the Massey family through intermediaries, but those requests have been "rejected or not accepted."

Without being specific, Campbell also indicated that his office thinks the shooting was wrong. " All employees of the Sheriff's Office feel betrayed by one of their own," he said. "The one responsible is in jail and will never work in law enforcement again."

Massey's killing has led to protests in Springfield, Chicago and across the country and renewed a national conversation over the use of deadly force by police against Black people.

The Sangamon County sheriff's office was the sixth Illinois police department Grayson had worked for in less than four years. Before he went into law enforcement, Grayson had two DUIs on his record in nearby Macoupin County.

Records show before the Sangamon County sheriff's office hired Grayson last year, the office spoke with some of the law enforcement agencies that previously employed him and those agencies questioned his abilities as an officer, saying he needed more training.

Grayson was dating the daughter of one of his references, a former Sangamon County sheriff's deputy who spoke positively of him.

In statements released last week, Campbell defended the process for hiring Grayson and downplayed comments from previous employers saying Grayson "needed more training."

"This is not unusual for deputies with Grayson's experience, and is standard procedure for Sangamon County deputies," Campbell said. "Grayson was subsequently sent to a 16-week academy training, a requirement for all new and lateral transfer deputies in our office."

In his statement on Wednesday, Campbell said his office "is willing to modify our hiring practices in order to prevent an incident like this from occurring again."

"We have used a process that we believe was consistent with statewide standards. If these standards are deficient, we would advocate a change at all necessary levels," he said.

Deputies on July 6 responded to a 911 call about a possible prowler outside Massey's home in an unincorporated area outside of Springfield. When Grayson, who is white, and another deputy officer arrived, Massey, who was Black, took a few minutes to answer the door and appeared confused. Her family has said she had mental health issues.

The two officers said they didn't find anyone around her home. Inside, a conversation ensued over a pot of boiling water on Massey's stove.

According to body camera footage, Massey said, "Oh, I'll rebuke you in the name of Jesus," before Grayson angrily replied, "You better (expletive) not. I swear to God. I'll (expletive) shoot you right in your (expletive) face."

Grayson then demanded that Massey drop the pot before shooting her. The Sangamon County coroner's office said she died of a gunshot wound to the head.

Grayson was ordered held in custody about two weeks after the shooting. He has pleaded not guilty to first-degree murder, aggravated battery with a firearm and official misconduct.

In 2021, Pritzker signed into law a sweeping criminal justice reform measure, known as the SAFE-T Act, which included a provision meant to improve the state's police officer decertification process. While there's no indication the law will be changed further in light of Massey's killing, Illinois legislative leaders have indicated they're open to proposals.

On Wednesday, Pritzker praised the Illinois State Police "who did the investigation (of Massey's shooting) in a very short 10 days."

"Maybe the silver lining, if there is a silver lining in this, is that someone is being held accountable, and yet we have much more to do," he said.

blistering sun. There were outdoor ceremonies in Beijing, but those were held in frigid temperatures with the winners wearing hats, gloves and warm coats.

The team had joked about what they were going to wear, with someone kidding they should wear their old figure skating costumes or puffy coats from Beijing. The U.S. Olympic and Paralympic Committee, however, provided them with specially made, lightweight Nike tracksuits and matching shoes for the ceremony.

The figure skaters also were allowed to have their families with them, something that wouldn't have happened if the ceremony had taken place in Beijing. Foreign spectators were not allowed to attend those Games because of the pandemic.

After watching her compete on television in 2022, Knierim's parents and best friend were in Paris to see her receive the gold medal. She and her mom even got matching manicures with gold nail polish before leaving Chicago.

"Before a competition, I would never do gold nails because I wouldn't want to jinx it," she said. "But I thought it was perfect for this occasion. There's nothing to jinx anymore."

The presentation had all the trappings of a traditional medal ceremony, with flowers and medals given by representatives of figure skating's governing body and the International Olympic Committee. There were no podium or flag poles, however, so the skaters turned and watched a waving American flag on the stadium's giant screen as the national anthem played.

Nine U.S. skaters received gold medals, including Knierim, Frazier, Evan Bates, Karen Chen, Nathan Chen, Madison Chock, Madison Hubbell, Zachary Donohue and Vincent Zhou. The Japanese team received silver.

Held in Champions Park at the Trocadero, the ceremony lacked bronze medalists because Canada and Russia are currently locked in a legal battle over which country should rightfully finished third.

"I'm happy that we were able to have this moment, but nothing would have replaced the moment in Beijing, at our village, in our Olympic year, in the moment with the hype and excitement," Knierim said. "And the pain that we've endured over these two-and-a-half years will always be there."

The U.S. team finished second to Russia in the team figure skating competition in Beijing, but the results came into question after it was revealed Russian figure skater Kamila Valieva tested positive for a banned substance at a national competition shortly before the Olympics.

As Valieva, then 15, and the Russian Olympic Committee tried to hang on to the medal in Beijing, they insisted the positive test was the result of her grandfather accidentally putting his heart medication into a strawberry dessert he served her.

Amid questions about her level of culpability given her age, the IOC did not hold a medal ceremony for the team event in Beijing. Instead, organizers gave the U.S. team empty medal boxes with a promise to fill them as soon as the winner was sorted out.

It took nearly two years for the committee to declare the Americans had won the competition. That decision was then immediately appealed, leaving the U.S. skaters to wonder if they would ever receive their medal.

Still, the team was told to block off Aug. 7 for a potential medal ceremony in Paris. As the day crept closer and the appeal had not been decided, Knierim nearly gave up hope.

"I was already thinking, 'all right, well, we're not going to go to Paris. Where am I going to spend those three days that I'm not going to be there? Because I know I'm going to be sad.' "

A day prior to the 2024 opening ceremony, the Court of Arbitration for Sport rejected an appeal involving Valieva. The ruling cleared the way for the historic ceremony, even though the court is still considering a dispute as to whether the bronze should go to Canada or the Russian skaters other than Valieva.

Knierim initially said she would attend the ceremony to send a message about the importance of competing clean. She now believes that message was sent without overshadowing the moment.

"I was really just thinking about the amazing performances Brandon and I skated at the Olympic Games," she said. "And I was able to really focus on the skating portion of this medal and not so much the doping situation, which was really gratifying and fulfilling. It brought me a lot of peace."

As she walked out to receive her medal, Knierim said she thought about the programs she and Frazier performed in Beijing. She also recalled how he dropped his coffee and his gym bag so he could chase down a 5:30 a.m. shuttle to the rink because they couldn't wait to get on the Olympic ice.

The partners — who went on to win the world championships in 2022 — have retired from competitive skating and had not seen each other in six months before reuniting in Paris.

Frazier works in finance in Southern California. Knierim has joined the staff at the Park Ridge-based Oakton Edge Skating Academy, where she teaches skaters of all ages and skill levels.

Before she left for Paris, Knierim said she reminded her students that she would be gone for a few days. One of them seemed genuinely surprised when she learned Knierim was going to get her gold medal.

"'Sometimes I forget how cool you are,'" Knierim recalled the skater saying.

Stung for the briefest of seconds, Knierim quickly decided she liked the comment.

"I kind of appreciated that more because it means she doesn't take (lessons) from me because I'm an Olympic champion," Knierim said. "It's because she values me."

Road work may be DNC headache

As construction snarls Kennedy, express lanes may be used for police, motorcades

By Sarah Freishtat
Chicago Tribune

For drivers trying to reach downtown via the Kennedy Expressway, the upcoming Democratic National Convention will bring good news and bad news.

The expressway will provide a direct route by car from O'Hare International Airport to downtown just as tens of thousands visitors descend on Chicago for the convention. But the highway is in the second of a three-year construction project that has left lanes closed and traffic snarled. This year, construction has shut down the center, reversible express lanes, and left some regular lanes closed at various times.

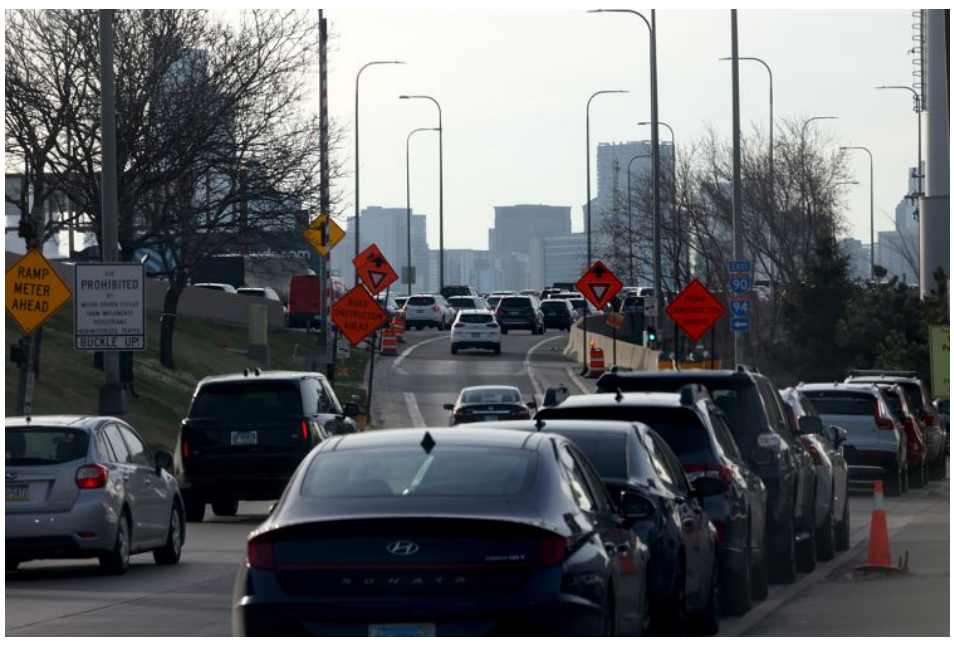
The express lanes will remain closed to general traffic during the DNC, Illinois Department of Transportation spokeswoman Maria Castaneda said. The access system that allows the flow of traffic to be reversed is being rehabilitated, and will not be finished before the convention.

But the center lanes could be used for motorcades and law enforcement and public safety vehicles, according to the Secret Service. Such use won't delay the reopening of the lanes to the general public, Secret Service spokesman Joe Biesk said. They were initially expected to reopen when the second phase of Kennedy construction wraps up in the fall.

In the meantime, at least four lanes of traffic are open in both directions for the general public, Castaneda said. A section that had been closed downtown for work on the large underpass near Hubbard Street reopened in early July, and overnight road closures will be paused during the convention unless there is an emergency, she said.

Drivers might still see construction barrels along the side of some lanes and blocking access to the express lanes, though, Castaneda said. Some remaining closures continue to affect feeder lanes and a downtown exit ramp.

"IDOT always plans and coordinates projects with communities to have the least possible impact when lane closures are required," the agency has previously said in a statement. "The DNC in Chicago will be no different. The department is working with the city evaluating needs and will coordinate its construction projects as much as possible."



Heavy traffic slows down the Kennedy Expressway between Fullerton and North avenues as the reversible lanes close for the second phase of construction on the inbound Kennedy on March 12 in Chicago. ANTONIO PEREZ/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

The timeline for the overall construction project has not changed, IDOT said.

The $150 million Kennedy project, paid through the state's capital program, is rehabbing 7.5 miles of the 10-lane highway from the I-94 split south to downtown. It includes work on 36 bridges and the highway's reversible express lane access system, the current version of which was installed in 1996. It also includes replacing overhead signs, upgrading lighting, paving and painting, and painting and installing new lighting at the Hubbard underpass between Ohio and Lake streets.

The first phase of work took place last year in the inbound, or southbound, lanes, with two closed at a time between March and December and the express lanes open only heading toward downtown.

This year work moved to the express lanes, and in spring will move to the outbound, or northbound lanes. Two will be closed at a time, and the express lanes will be open only heading north from downtown.

This summer, even as the express lanes remain closed, the city's transportation agencies and companies are preparing to move the influx of visitors to O'Hare and into the city. Chicago-based United Airlines has added 118 flights to and from Chicago this month. Metra plans to run hourly shuttle trains between O'Hare and downtown.

CTA President Dorval Carter has said the transit agency could add additional trains to and from O'Hare and Midway airports during peak travel times. Convention delegates will get virtual Ventra cards preloaded with a CTA one-day pass, paid for by the DNC host committee, that they can use to ride trains when they arrive at either of the city's two airports, CTA has said.

'An opportunity at a better life'

Boy injured in Gaza bombing arrives in Chicago for prosthetic legs, medical care

By Rebecca Johnson
Chicago Tribune

When Khalil Abu Shaban crossed the international arrival gate at O'Hare Airport on Wednesday, he was greeted with cheers, hugs and lots of presents.

The 13-year-old, who uses a wheelchair after losing both his legs in a bombing in Gaza, arrived in Chicago to receive medical care at Shriners Children's specialty hospital, including prosthetic legs that hopefully allow him to walk again one day.

After a 15-hour flight from Egypt with his mom and older sister, he was welcomed by about 50 people who clapped and chanted "Khalil," while throwing rose petals at his wheelchair. Khalil waved and smiled while accepting gifts and flowers.

"We're very glad we are here in Chicago," said Lulu Abu Shaban, Khalil's sister. "So many people love Khalil, and encourage Khalil to get his treatment. We are so lucky to be here."

Khalil has faced a long, challenging journey, according to Steve Sosebee, executive director of Heal Palestine, a nonprofit that coordinated his arrival. Khali and his family were forced to flee northern Gaza to the south, where he lived in a displacement camp, Sosebee said.

> "We're honored to be able to help him. This is really important for us to give these kids a chance to recover as much as we can."
> — Steve Sosebee, executive director of Heal Palestine

He was later injured in a bombing near a barber shop he was visiting.

Medical staff in Gaza were able to stabilize Khali, before he was transferred and hospitalized in Egypt. There, he had surgery on his head, which Sosebee said is believed to be successful. His main reason for being in Chicago is to walk again, Sosebee said.

"We're honored to be able to help him," Sosebee said. "This is really important for us to give these kids a chance to recover as much as we can considering his injuries, and give him an opportunity at a better life."

Sosebee expects Khalil's medical treatment to last months. He'll likely require surgery to lengthen the bone in his leg to fit into the prosthetic limbs, because the amputations were so high up on his legs, Sosebee said.

Heal Palestine made arrangements to bring Khalil to America for medical treatment after he lost both of his legs in a bombing in Gaza. EILEEN T. MESLAR/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

More than 39,600 people have died in Gaza and there is a mass humanitarian catastrophe, according to the Gaza Health Ministry, since the war began 10 months ago with the Hamas-led attack on Israel. Khalil is the third injured child from Gaza to come to Chicago for treatment through HEAL Palestine.

About four months ago, Leyan Albaz, 14, arrived in Chicago from Gaza after both her legs were amputated, also from a bombing. She was the first person to meet Khalil at the airport, which Sosebee said was an important moment to bring Khalil hope. Leyan is now walking with prosthetic legs and crutches.

"He's coming at the beginning of his treatment. She's at the end of her treatment," Sosebee said. "She's with the same injury that he has, same age, same country, so we wanted him to see hey, she was like me a couple months ago, I can be like her."

Speaking through an interpreter, Leyan said she is very confident that Khalil will walk again, and told him to remain strong. She said her treatment has been "excellent" and her doctors have been "kind." She still attends physical therapy regularly.

Leyan's sisters were killed in the bombing that injured her, and her brother was killed a couple months ago, Sosebee said. The rest of her family is still in Gaza, he said, but her host family is helping provide love and support.

"It is very hard," Leyan said via an interpreter. "I worry about them, but I know I'm here to get better."

During treatment, Khalil will live at Sirage Al-Tarifi's Chicago home. Al-Tarifi said he found out the family needed a place to stay about 10 days ago, and he and his wife stepped up immediately.

He said his home is well equipped since his dad was an amputee, and he also has two children, 8 and 10.

"We take it as an opportunity (to host Khalil), and a privilege really," he said, adding that it's "the least we could do."

Pritzker signs laws expanding reproductive health protections

By Olivia Olander
Chicago Tribune

Gov. J.B. Pritzker on Wednesday signed into law a trio of measures aimed at expanding protections for reproductive and gender-affirming health care.

"We can't wait around and be reactive when the latest attacks come. The pro-choice majority in this country need to be proactive," Pritzker said at a news conference Wednesday, calling the new laws "anticipatory."

Abortion rights have been a key part of Pritzker's legislative agenda in Illinois and in his role as a campaign surrogate for the Democratic ticket in the upcoming presidential election.

The latest laws add onto existing abortion rights in Illinois in three ways: protecting abortion patients from housing, workplace and other types of discrimination; shielding out-of-state patients from investigations launched beyond Illinois' borders; and protecting patients who need emergency abortion care in the event that federal protection weakens.

Officials at Wednesday's bill signing framed the package as protecting both Illinois residents and people from all Midwestern and southern states that have more restrictive abortion laws.

The event came just a day after Vice President Kamala Harris chose Democratic Gov. Tim Walz of Minnesota as her running mate, passing over Pritzker and a handful of other contenders while underscoring the political importance for Democrats of the Midwestern "blue wall." Republicans have argued the abortion protections championed by Walz and Pritzker are extreme.

The measures signed by the governor were passed this spring by the Democratic-controlled General Assembly. Democratic Rep. Dagmara Avelar of Bolingbrook said being a Midwesterner means knowing "the importance of folks being a good neighbor."

"Recently, however, it seems that leaders in some of our neighboring states ... have forgotten what it means to be a Midwesterner. Instead of helping those that need the support of the community, that needs it the most, actually, they are forcing them into the shadows," she said, referring to recently tightened abortion laws in Iowa and elsewhere.

One of the new Illinois laws is designed specifically to help patients who come to Illinois from elsewhere for reproductive health care. It shields doctors and patients who travel to Illinois for abortions and gender-affirming care by banning local jurisdictions from providing information or resources to any out-of-state investigations.

Legislation signed Wednesday also adds "reproductive health decisions" to state law protecting people from discrimination and harassment. That means it protects those who have had abortions or used birth control or IVF from being discriminated against in housing, employment or public accommodations.

For example, it would be a civil rights violation under the law for an employer to fire an employee because they used IVF, or for a landlord to refuse a renter because the renter had an abortion, according to the governor's office.

A final bill was in response to fears that the conservative Supreme Court majority could restrict emergency abortion care, according to the governor's office. The court issued a procedural ruling in a case on the issue earlier this summer, allowing providers in the state of Idaho to continue providing abortions in medical emergencies without resolving the underlying legal questions.

"Illinois is and will always be a safe haven, and I'm so grateful for the many partners who stand up here today who have helped us maintain that status in the Midwest, regardless of what happens at the federal level or decisions made by our extreme Supreme Court," Democratic House Speaker Emanuel "Chris" Welch of Hillside said, speaking alongside a group of lawmakers, doctors and advocates.

Pritzker didn't answer directly when asked whether a state constitutional amendment on abortion or other legislation might be on deck for Illinois. He has backed ballot measures to enshrine abortion rights in other states but a state constitutional amendment is not currently in line for Illinois.

Still, Pritzker said he's always trying to get ahead of possible new restrictions in states led by Republicans. The governor has been a leader on the issue both in-state and through his national political organization Think Big America.

"Every year it shocks me, the new angles from which the Republicans try to take away a woman's right to choose," Pritzker said Wednesday.

broadening its portfolio of games.

"We've had a huge growth spurt the last four years," said Harold Mays, director of the Illinois Lottery. "Everybody engages with the lottery. It's a very simple proposition."

Instant scratch tickets accounted for $2 billion or 57% of the $3.6 billion in total Illinois lottery sales last year, according to the state's annual report on wagering for fiscal year 2023.

Lotto drawings generated $111 million in sales last year, roughly half that of multistate games Powerball and Mega Millions, which have larger jackpots. Illinois was one of the founding states for Mega Millions, which started as the Big Game in 1996. Powerball rolled out in 1992, and both multistate games are offered in Illinois.

Lotteries are now played in 45 states, but when Illinois held its first weekly drawing on Aug. 8, 1974, it was kind of a big deal.

When the lottery was signed into law in late 1973 by then-Gov. Dan Walker, Illinois was one of only 10 states to offer a lottery, where a 50-cent ticket and a complicated series of drawings could make one lucky winner a millionaire.

There was the Weekly Lotto: Match all five numbers and win $5,000. Match the two three-digit numbers in the Millionaire Game box and you were entered into a separate drawing to win a million dollars — after 30 million lottery tickets were sold.

Inaugural press coverage was profuse, following every beat of the launch, right up to crowning the first "instant millionaires," Bill and Irene Halley of Franklin Park, during an elaborate drawing on Oct. 3, 1974, at the Gold Room of the Pick-Congress Hotel on South Michigan Avenue.

Many of the 158 qualifiers, culled from six weeks of lottery play, attended the first millionaire drawing. The payout was $50,000 annually over 20 years and a slice of instant fame that saw the couple feted on a tour that included a visit to the Chicago Playboy Mansion.

The Illinois Lottery has been evolving ever since — from launching televised drawings to privatizing operations — with varying degrees of success.

Initially staged at sites throughout the state, the Illinois Lottery became the first to broadcast its drawings live on local TV in May 1975, airing on WGN-TV and the WGN superstation.

Televising lottery drawings had previously been prohibited until Congress changed the law in early 1975.

The drawings bounced around on several Chicago stations before returning to WGN in 1994, making effervescent "Lottery Lady" Linda Kollmeyer something of a TV star as she announced numbered pingpong balls popping out of a machine for more than two decades.

WGN America — now known as NewsNation — dropped the drawings in 2014 as it converted from a superstation to a national cable channel. In 2015, the Illinois Lottery, which paid WGN-TV about $1 million annually to air two live broadcasts each day, pulled the plug entirely on television, opting for digital drawings.

The Illinois Lottery also became the first state to launch online ticket sales in 2012, Mays said. Online sales reached nearly $518 million in fiscal year 2023, according to state data.

Other innovations have been somewhat controversial.

In 2011, Illinois became the first state to privatize operations when it hired Northstar Lottery Group to run its games. Northstar promised to bring in $4.8 billion in profits during the first five years of the 10-contract, but fell short of its revenue goals and was terminated in 2017.

Northstar came under additional fire after a Tribune investigation found that the lottery did not award more than 40% of instant game grand prizes advertised from 2011 to 2015, creating a payout rate significantly lower than those in other states.

The investigation showed Northstar dramatically increased the number of instant tickets printed, offering bigger prizes to entice buyers. But as sales for each game eventually waned, Northstar allegedly pushed to remove the tickets from store shelves before all of the grand prizes were awarded.

That ostensibly made the games less lucrative for players, generating several class-action lawsuits alleging fraud.

British-owned Camelot Illinois took over from Northstar in 2018, promising revenue growth and instant games better designed to sell out tickets and award all prizes. Swiss-based Allwyn bought out Camelot in 2023, turning the Chicago office into its North American headquarters.

Keith Horton, who made the transition from general manager at Camelot to the same role at Allwyn, said the issues around instant game payouts have been "completely resolved" under new ownership.

"Since Allwyn came on board, we've worked closely with the Department of Lottery to ensure that there's an orderly process to close out tickets once top prizes are won, and we're very confident in that process," Horton said.

Allwyn, which operates lotteries in European countries such Austria, Italy and the United Kingdom, handles everything in Illinois from selecting the games and providing the machines at 7,000 retail locations to marketing the lottery.

Horton points to a 23% increase in annual sales since Camelot/Allwyn took over lottery operations from Northstar in 2018 as a sign of its success. At the same time, Illinois remains the only state lottery Allwyn manages.

Illinois has the 12th-largest lottery in the U.S. by sales, with Florida, California and Texas topping the list.

Last year, the $3.6 billion in Illinois Lottery sales returned $882 million to the state, with most of the proceeds going to the Common School Fund.

Winners were paid nearly $2.4 billion, or roughly two-thirds of the money spent on lottery games, while retailers collected $174 million in commissions. Lottery expenses, including Allwyn, totaled $194 million, or 5.4% of ticket sales, according to state data.

Since its inception, Illinois Lottery sales have totaled over $83 billion, with $25 billion transferred back to the state.

That total includes $40 million allocated to the Wittkowski family 40 years ago, in what may have been the biggest game-changing moment in Illinois Lottery history.

In 1983, the Lotto game was streamlined to offer instant million-dollar payouts and weekly rollovers to build jackpots. The new rules came to fruition in a big way on Sept. 1, 1984, when Wittkowski won the $40 million Lotto jackpot after three weeks of rollovers and increasingly frenzied ticket sales, claiming what was then the largest lottery prize in U.S. history.

The win was a family affair for Wittkowsi, who along with his brother, sister and father, chipped in $10 apiece to buy 40 tickets at the bygone Blatt Drugs on Irving Park Road.

When the numbers came up on the Saturday night TV drawing, he assumed there were several winners who would split the jackpot. By Sunday, Wittkowski realized he had the only winning ticket.

It was Labor Day weekend, so he planned to wait until Tuesday to stake the claim. On Monday morning, he got a little on-air nudge from Oprah Winfrey, then the new host of "A.M. Chicago" on WLS-Ch. 7, who told viewers that lottery officials were looking for the $40 million winner.

Wittkowski made the call, and a limo was dispatched to bring him in from his Albany Park home to the Chicago lottery office.

Greeted by lottery officials and then-Gov. Jim Thompson, Wittkowski was initially reluctant to sign the ticket, concerned about tax implications and insisting all four family members should be declared winners. Reassured the proceeds would be equally divided, Wittkowski relented.

"So we figured all that out, and about an hour later, I was in front of the cameras," Wittkowski said.

Despite assurances, the first installment check was made out to Michael Wittkowski alone. He refused to endorse it.

In November 1984 — two months after he was declared the $40 million winner, Wittkowski successfully petitioned the Illinois Lottery Control Board to amend the claim form to include his father, Frank; his sister, Eileen; and his brother, Daniel, as equal partners in the winnings, avoiding a hefty gift tax if he distributed the money himself.

The payout was $40 million over 20 years, which meant an annual check of $2 million for the family partnership. Divided four ways, that was $500,000 per year for Wittkowski. After taxes, he kept about half of that total.

Wittkowski also kept his $25,000-a-year job as a press operator at Deluxe Check Printing in Des Plaines — for three months — before the constant stream of curiosity seekers made it impossible to continue.

"I had to end up talking to people all the time and running a four-color web press, and if you're not paying attention, you get hurt," he said. "So I decided that I was just going to be done with it."

Winning the largest lottery prize in U.S. history brought a lot of attention — both wanted and unwanted — including bomb threats and unsolicited requests for money from around the world.

Wittkowski's lottery win made him an instant celebrity in 1984, allowing him to rub elbows with some of the rich and famous in Chicago. Topping the list was an on-air visit with Cubs announcer Harry Caray at Wrigley Field during the team's first postseason run in nearly four decades.

"Actually, I sat up in the box with Harry Caray for half an inning one time," Wittkowski said. "That was kind of nice."

He also got to meet two of his Blackhawks heroes — Stan Mikita and Bobby Hull.

In 1985, the lottery credited Wittkowski's inspiring win with doubling ticket sales to more than $10 million per week, and fueling a gold rush from out-of-state players.

Wittkowski and his fiancee, Frances, were married in 1985 and later moved to Inverness to raise their three sons. As they now approach their 40th anniversary, the marriage has proved an even more enduring win, outlasting the lottery checks by 20 years and counting.

Along the way, he invested in two businesses — a liquor store in Streamwood and a bar in Bartlett — neither of which proved profitable. Wittkowski got out of the bar business in the mid-1990s and the liquor store in 2000. After that, he conserved his capital and spent his days as a full-time stay-at-home dad.

"I sat on my money for a while and just watched the kids grow — did all the coaching and stuff when the boys were young."

The lottery checks stopped coming in 2004, and Wittkowski considers himself happily retired, spending time on the golf course among other leisure pursuits. While some of his business ventures proved less than lucrative, Wittkowski said he did not burn through his lottery winnings and is "still OK" financially.

Lottery jackpots have gotten much bigger in the 40 years since Wittkowski won $40 million. The minimum Lotto jackpot is $2 million, while Powerball and Mega Millions start at $20 million per drawing. Last year, rollovers boosted the average multistate jackpot north of $200 million.

In February 2023, Edwin Castro of California stepped forward as the biggest lottery winner in history when he claimed a record $2.04 billion Powerball jackpot.

The biggest winner in Illinois Lottery history remains anonymous.

In July 2022, the winning ticket for a $1.34 billion Mega Million jackpot was purchased at a Des Plaines Speedway gas station. The winner, who chose not to reveal their identity, claimed the record prize two months later, opting for a lump sum payment of $780.5 million, according to the Illinois Lottery.

The $1.34 billion Illinois Mega Millions windfall is only the seventh-largest lottery jackpot in U.S. history, making Wittkowski's $40 million prize seem like a drop in the bucket four decades later. Even with inflation, a $40 million jackpot in 1984 would be the equivalent of about $121 million today — half the average Mega Millions or Powerball jackpot last year.

While Wittkowski won the biggest lottery prize in history circa 1984, he still takes his chances now and then that lightning will strike again.

"If I'm around and I got 20 bucks in my pocket, I'll get a quick pick," Wittkowski said.

Council opponents of Brandon Johnson policies are the 'new Vrdolyak 29'? Please

So now aldermen who oppose various controversial initiatives of Mayor Brandon Johnson are the "new Vrdolyak 29"?

That's a reference to the rump group of aldermen who formed an intransigent opposition bloc after Harold Washington was elected Chicago's first Black mayor in 1983. The near-paralyzation of city government for much of Washington's first term due to the opposition campaign led by Edward Vrdolyak and Ed Burke was one of the bleakest political chapters in Chicago's history, reflecting the widespread racism that emboldened Washington's aldermanic foes.

Socialist Ald. Byron Sigcho-Lopez has repeatedly used that obnoxious comparison when complaining about opposition within the City Council to the mayor's desire to install him as chair of the Zoning Committee.

The 25th Ward alderman, who has made a name for himself by, among other things, inveighing against Israel's war against Hamas while standing in front of a charred American flag, repeatedly has employed this objectionable terminology to refer to colleagues who happen to think differently from he and the mayor. But this slur ought to be called out — and should no longer be used — because it is offensive.

Sigcho-Lopez's effective depiction of his opponents as racist arose again this week when the mayor's effort to schedule a special City Council meeting in order to secure Sigcho-Lopez's approval fizzled, due apparently to a combination of opposition to the move and aldermanic interest in preserving what normally is a vacation month for them, the Chicago Sun-Times reported. "There will be a block of the 'New Vrdolyak 29' that is opposing anything and everything that we try to do," Sigcho-Lopez said. Johnson and Sigcho-Lopez hope now to garner City Council approval at the next regularly scheduled meeting in September.

Sigcho-Lopez isn't helping his cause with his intemperate rhetoric.

To compare opposition to his advancement to Chicago's ugly racial politics of four decades ago is a deeply personal insult to the aldermen who've challenged the positions Johnson and his progressive allies have taken on a host of issues, including care of migrants, a publicly subsidized Chicago Bears stadium, tax policy, public safety, public transportation — we could go on.

Many of the aldermen who've publicly opposed Sigcho-Lopez as Zoning Committee chair are white, it's true. They include 13th Ward Ald. Marty Quinn, 42nd Ward Ald. Brendan Reilly and 2nd Ward Ald. Brian Hopkins. But the truth that Johnson has struggled so mightily to win council backing for Sigcho-Lopez shows there are plenty of council members of disparate ethnic backgrounds who aren't onboard, either; they're just preferring to stay out of the public fray.

Ald. Byron Sigcho-Lopez attends a long City Council meeting May 22 at City Hall. ANTONIO PEREZ/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

So if it's not some racist conspiracy that's keeping Sigcho-Lopez from easy confirmation, what's the problem?

Zoning is a particularly sensitive issue for any alderman. In recent years, aldermanic privilege — the unwritten rule aldermen enjoy effective veto power over development in their wards — has been called into question amid valid concerns about NIMBYism, so who runs the Zoning Committee if anything is even more important than it has been in the past.

For aldermen like Quinn whose wards include broad areas zoned for single-family homes, Johnson and Sigcho-Lopez's aggressive push for more "additional dwelling units" — coachhouses, granny flats and the like — is a flashpoint. This page has said more ADUs would be beneficial, but the mayor and his progressive allies haven't shown much of a willingness to negotiate on this matter with those genuinely worried about the impact on their wards.

Another Zoning Committee chair without the pugnacious reputation of Sigcho-Lopez could well help produce a compromise on that and other land-use issues. Ald. Bennett Lawson, 44th, has been handling the job admirably on an interim basis since Johnson ally Carlos Ramirez-Rosa was forced to relinquish the post last year after colleagues accused him of bullying. Johnson could do worse than to make Lawson's chairmanship permanent; many council members no doubt would be relieved.

For a mayor without the public support necessary to twist council arms effectively, the decision to go all in on Sigcho-Lopez is puzzling. Typically, mayors get significant leeway from aldermen to name their own council leaders, but not always.

During the 1980s Council Wars, the reasons for blanket opposition to Washington's appointments were nakedly racist and bent on preserving the patronage powers the white-run Democratic Machine had enjoyed. Today? These are honest policy disputes, Sigcho-Lopez's offensive accusations notwithstanding.

If the mayor really wants the polarizing alderman to oversee zoning in Chicago, he ought to advise Sigcho-Lopez to stop lobbing rhetorical bombs at his colleagues and try to convince them he'll give their honest concerns a fair hearing.

Unfortunate rhetoric from Bush as she lost her primary

Losing is no fun, whether it's a pick-up pickleball game, an Olympic final or an election for national office.

So we surely sympathize with Rep. Cori Bush, who lost her Democratic primary in Missouri's 1st Congressional District to St. Louis County Prosecutor Wesley Bell on Tuesday night.

Bush, a member of the so-called squad of radical progressives, had to run against an opponent boosted by campaign funding provided by the United Democracy Project, the super PAC of the American Israel Public Affairs Committee. That group, as is its right, spent millions of dollars on ads bashing Bush and boosting Bell. This is the same group that a few weeks ago helped take down another radical and fierce opponent of Israel, New York Rep. Jamaal Bowman.

A reasonable person would not expect Bush to be pleased by this state of affairs. Still, her concession speech (if you could call it that) was wildly off-base. "All they did is radicalize me," a fuming Bush said of AIPAC. "So they need to be afraid."

Seriously?

"AIPAC, I'm coming to tear your kingdom down," she said.

We'll assume that Bush was speaking there of her future efforts within the penumbra of democratic change and not anything more. But we'll remind her that voters were likely looking at a broader picture. Bush lost by 5.6 points, or nearly 7,000 votes, so the election was not particularly close. And Bell also claims a progressive mantle, albeit a more practical one, he said.

If voters had wanted to ignore the money in the race, they were free to do so. They chose otherwise. As is their right.

Democrats often complain (justly) about unhinged rhetoric from Donald Trump and others on the Republican side with the capacity to incite unrest. In her pique, Bush was guilty of much the same thing.

ABOUT PUTIN AND HOSTAGE-TAKING

In a complex deal brokered by the U.S. government, Russia has freed reporter Evan Gershkovich and 15 other political prisoners in exchange for the release of eight of its nationals in the West — including Vadim Krasikov, a killer especially valued by Russian President Vladimir Putin who was serving time for murder in Germany. This agreement was, as President Joe Biden said, a striking diplomatic feat and a testament to effective cooperation among the U.S. and its allies. Unfortunately, if the U.S. and its friends take no further steps, it will do nothing to deter, and might very well encourage, future hostage-taking. The regimes ruling Russia, China, Iran, North Korea and Venezuela all use opaque and corrupt legal systems to advance their interests, and they've found "hostage diplomacy" especially useful. It works because it weaponizes the value that Western democracies place on the safety of their citizens. Gershkovich's prosecution was also a direct attack on the principle of press freedom. He was arrested and charged with espionage while reporting on Putin's invasion of Ukraine, a war that has spurred a vicious crackdown on dissent.

Western governments have no good options when it comes to winning the freedom of nationals seized by hostile states. It would be inhuman not to work for their release and naive to think that refusing to negotiate would act as a credible deterrent. Still, rewarding hostage-takers puts other potential victims at greater risk — not to mention lets ruthless assassins walk free. In recent years, the U.S. has improved its institutional tools for negotiating and winning the release of its people. The successes should be celebrated, without losing sight of the fact that many others have been wrongly imprisoned or forgetting the dangers posed by rewarding evil.... The release of Gershkovich and the others is cause for great relief. Their freedom shouldn't dim the West's disgust. The U.S. and its allies must hold those responsible for these shameful imprisonments to account.

Democrats vote against auto workers and American-made electric vehicles

By Marco Rubio

It was a stunning scene. Dozens of people packed into a Senate committee room on Aug. 1 witnessed one party stand with America's auto workers and the other stand with big corporations. In years past, one would have assumed the Democrats would always be on the side of the union worker, but not that day. Not anymore. Every single one of my Republican colleagues voted with me to protect working-class interests. And every single Democrat sided with Wall Street and radical special interest groups.

The focus of the vote itself — an amendment to a government spending bill — was very straightforward. It simply answered a request the United Auto Workers has repeatedly submitted to the Biden-Harris administration to "harmonize" federal investments in electric vehicle manufacturing with common-sense made-in-America requirements.

Earlier this year, UAW told the U.S. trade office that a coherent industrial policy that truly aims to build a resilient supply chain must focus federal investment on domestic production with high-road standards. Incentives that are open to foreign-made vehicles immediately undermine the purpose of industrial policy and any gains achieved by reforms to our trade policy. UAW made the same point just a few months before.

My amendment was a direct answer to the problem. It would have extended the made-in-America requirements already integral to the federal government's biggest EV tax credit (the 30D credit) to all the other federal EV subsidy programs, which cost taxpayers tens of billions of dollars. Under this arrangement, for an EV to be entitled to generous federal subsidies, most of the vehicle's value would need to come from manufacturing activities in North America.

Such a guardrail is more important than ever as American automakers — and the millions of workers and families who rely on them — are facing an existential threat. Over the past decade, China has surged to become the largest vehicle exporter in the world. It hasn't done this by making higher-quality vehicles. Instead, China's communist government is heavily subsidizing its vehicle industry — both electric and internal combustion — which allows Chinese automakers to sell their vehicles at a loss and "buy" market share in countries around the world, putting competing automakers out of business.

But the seriousness of this threat seems lost on my Democrat colleagues. Not only did all Democrats on the committee vote unanimously to oppose my amendment, one argued that prohibiting U.S. taxpayer dollars from going to Chinese EVs would somehow help China and hurt America. It's an insulting and false argument that attempts to conceal an inconvenient truth: Americans are currently subsidizing automakers that are controlled by China's communist government and threatening to wipe out our domestic automakers.

Democrats opposing my amendment know better than their talking points suggest. Some represent states with significant auto manufacturing, such as Michigan and Illinois. Others have spoken out against China's threat to the American worker. Nevertheless, they opted for weak, non-binding "report language" that encourages the Biden-Harris administration to think about these problems, but falls short of outlining a clear solution and putting it into law. Even more ironically, by opposing my amendment, Democrats opposed current guardrails to a law they wrote and passed on a party-line vote.

Things are changing in America — with our economy, but also in our politics. It is increasingly clear that Democrats are now more concerned with catering to green-energy special interest groups than protecting the American worker. Their perspective could be summed up by one economist's callous observation that "(i)t would be cheaper just to let the Chinese cars come in. ... Yes, it would be disruptive. But EVs would get on the road in the U.S. a lot faster."

Thankfully, that hasn't happened just yet. Right now, Chinese automakers face a 102% tariff on EVs and a 27% tariff on internal combustion vehicles. This is better than nothing, but it is not enough to prevent China from putting American autoworkers out of business in the future. As Chinese automakers set up shop in Mexico, they could take advantage of our free trade agreement with Mexico and lower the tariff to zero percent. There are steps we can take to prevent that, but my Democrat colleagues seem reluctant to consider those steps as well. This shouldn't be a partisan issue. China's success will come at the expense of American auto workers in Michigan, Ohio, Indiana and beyond.

Importing cheap products may be good for some company's bottom line, but it is terrible for our country. America needs to be a nation that builds great things with well-trained and highly paid workers who can provide for their families. This is a future worth fighting for, no matter which party you represent.

Democracy dies when viewpoints are muted and voters stay home

Willie Wilson

The National Association of Black Journalists was right to invite the leading candidates for president to its annual conference for a question and answer session. It should have invited all candidates running for president, including Jill Stein, Robert F. Kennedy Jr. and Cornel West. There should be no controversy or conflict around former President Donald Trump being given a platform to answer questions regarding his vision for Black Americans.

Trump and lesser-known candidates have a viewpoint on issues concerning the Black community that should be heard. A recent study by the National Community Reinvestment Coalition found it will take Blacks more than 500 years to achieve economic equity. In American cities across the country, Black Americans are being devastated by gun violence. I look forward to hearing Vice President Kamala Harris' agenda for Black Americans' full participation in the economy, safety of citizens in their neighborhoods, reduction of inflation and closing persistent health disparities. The Black community is not monolithic in thought. The press and citizens are the guardians of democracy. A free and fair press coupled with an engaged citizenry are the cornerstones of a thriving democracy!

To deny Trump an opportunity to have dialogue with the NABJ would stifle democracy. When I ran for president of the United States in 2016, the press did not cover my campaign much or provide the public with an opportunity to hear my views on key issues. The Democratic Party refused to allow me to purchase a national voter profile database and kept me off the stage in South Carolina and other states. Democracy dies when voices are silenced, and citizens lose hope.

The late legendary civil rights leader and congressman John Lewis in one of his last essays published by The New York Times — "Together, You Can Redeem the Soul of Our Nation" — said in part, "Voting and participating in the democratic process are key. The vote is the most powerful nonviolent change agent you have in a democratic society. You must use it because it is not guaranteed. You can lose it."

According to the Tribune, the March 19 Democratic primary results from the Chicago Board of Elections show just 26% of the nearly 1.7 million registered voters cast a ballot. In the 2023 mayoral runoff election only 35% of registered voters cast ballots. A report from the University of Illinois Chicago's Great Cities Institute found that "a mere 29% of registered Black voters and just 20.5% of registered Latinos cast a ballot in the April runoff."

Why aren't citizens voting? Have citizens lost faith in democracy?

"Driving people's dissatisfaction with the way democracy is functioning is the belief that politicians are out of touch and disconnected from the lives of ordinary citizens," the Pew Research Center reported in 2024. A 2021 poll conducted by the Harvard University Kennedy School's Institute of Politics found 52% of young people in the U.S. believe that the country's democracy is either "in trouble" or is already "a failed democracy." Just 7% said that democracy in the United States is "healthy."

When citizens stay home a minority of voters determine elected representation. Elected leaders set property taxes, public safety policies, health and education policies, and drive decisions regarding contracts, jobs and board appointments. Recently, the Tribune and the Illinois Answers Project found that Cook County Assessor Fritz Kaegi's office "missed at least $444 million in value from a combined 620 properties during the 2023 tax year." This egregious oversight cost taxpayers. Too many citizens have been conditioned to believe that voting does not matter, or things will never change. However, some elections are determined by a few votes. Most people depend on the media, special interest groups and labor union endorsements to determine whom they will support.

Members of the press are not called to be activists for a political party or a specific point of view. A new survey from Associated Press and NORC Center for Public Affairs Research found that three-quarters of adults say the U.S. news media is worsening political polarization.

The following are a few recommendations to strengthen Democracy:

1. The Federal Communications Commission should ensure a free, fair and balanced press. The FCC should be granted authority to regulate social media company communications.
2. Democrats, Republicans and independents should dialogue and listen to each other more. There are more things that we agree on.
3. Gov. J.B. Pritzker should ensure a transparent process when it comes to redrawing legislative maps. Gerrymandered districts preserve power for one party.
4. Gov. Pritzker, Mayor Brandon Johnson and Cook County Board President Toni Preckwinkle should pass ethics reforms that include limiting campaign contributions from those doing business with government.
5. Gov. Pritzker, Speaker Emanuel "Chris" Welch, and Senate President Don Harmon should pass legislation that encourages citizens to vote, including considering making election day a holiday.

Americans' confidence in government, mass media and other public institutions are at all-time lows. Social media companies' censorship of certain viewpoints further erodes trust. Together we can motivate citizens to vote and preserve democracy for future generations.

I write this commentary to make those comfortable with canceling viewpoints and eroding democracy uncomfortable.

US has dominated Paris Olympic Games, but world records in the pool were hard to come by

By Sheldon H. Jacobson

The United States' performance at the 2024 Paris Olympics has been magnificent, as most people expected. Simone Biles and the entire women's team dazzled viewers with their gold medal performances in the women's team gymnastics competition. In sports with lesser followings, Lee Kiefer defeated Lauren Scruggs to capture the gold and silver medals in the women's individual foil competition.

Where the United States has historically performed well is in swimming. Though Katie Ledecky and Bobby Finke delivered record performances in their specialties — the women's and men's 1500 meters freestyle, respectively — the American swimmers did not dominate the competition as they have in prior Olympics.

The United States captured 28 medals (including eight golds), both very good numbers, and ahead of the Australians, who won 18 medals and seven golds. A total of 17 Olympic records were smashed during the Games. However, only four world records were eclipsed, with just two for individual races (Pan Zhanle of China in the Men's 100-meter freestyle and Bobby Finke of the United States in the 1,500-meter freestyle).

The 28 total medals were the lowest number for the Americans since the 2004 Athens Games. The eight golds was also the lowest tally by the American swimmers since the 1956 Melbourne Games, when they won just two golds out of 13 swimming events.

Just how dominant has the United States been in swimming?

In the 2020 Tokyo Games, the United States captured 30 medals (including 11 golds), ahead of the Australians, who won 21 medals and nine golds. A total of six world records and 26 Olympic records were shattered during the Games.

In the 2016 Rio de Janeiro Games, the United States captured 33 medals (including 16 golds), ahead of the Australians, who won 10 medals and three golds. A total of eight world records and 15 Olympic records were smashed during the Games.

In the 2012 London Games, the United States captured 31 medals (including 16 golds), ahead of the Australians, who won 10 medals and five golds. A total of nine world records and 16 Olympic records were shattered during the Games.

In the 2008 Beijing Games, the United States captured 31 medals (including 12 golds), ahead of the Australians, who won 20 medals and six golds. A total of 24 world records and 41 Olympic records were shattered during the Games.

The United States swimmers' performance can be explained by other swimmers around the world gaining on the Americans' historic superiority. Many of the best international swimmers train in the United States. For example, Léon Marchand, who won four individual golds for France, swam for Arizona State University, where he was coached by Bob Bowman, one of the current swimming coaches for France.

Clearly, training and coaching affect performance in the pool, and international swimmers have embraced such opportunities.

However, the dearth of world-record-setting performances raises the question: Did the design of the Paris pool suppress swimming times?

One issue is that the depth of the Paris pool was around 2.15 meters, less than the 2.5 to 3.0 meters used at the most recent Olympics, though well within the accepted range. The general rule is that the deeper the pool, the less turbulence in the water, which in theory should lead to faster swims and more records being set. However, other factors come into play to determine the speed of a pool.

For example, how the walls are designed, namely with the positioning of the touchpads, may also impact water turbulence, yet another factor that could slow swimmers down.

This phenomenon of playing field design affects performance in many sports. Tennis surfaces (clay versus grass versus hard) favor certain styles of play and athletes more than others. The same idea holds true with golf course design (including the width of fairways as well as the size and level of greens), which affects scores, also favoring some styles of play more than others. It is possible that the same effects can be realized from pool designs and water depth.

Most American swimmers come up through the college system, where times are fast. This means that the pools in which American swimmers train and compete are much faster than what they saw in Paris. This created a natural headwind on times, particularly if they have not been exposed to such shallower pool depth.

Independent of the speed of the Paris pool, American swimmers continued to show their dominance, though not to the same degree as in previous Olympics. International swimmers training in the United States will continue to level the playing field. In future Olympics, the pool design and specifications should also be shared with all countries well before the Games, so all participants could benefit from such information. Indeed, intense competition keeps every swimmer pushing to achieve their personal bests, showcasing excellence that is the hallmark of the Olympics.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Sox are unwatchable

We Sox fans are getting lots of reasons (excuses) for this season. But let's point something out. The Sox are hardly the first team to do a rebuild. But no team in the history of baseball has ever mismanaged a rebuild like this team.

The Sox aren't watchable. They don't even play major league baseball. They don't hit. Their fielders drop balls. Their relief staff only brings relief to the other team. So rebuild is simply not a good enough reason.

Owner Jerry Reinsdorf thought interviewing for the general manager wasn't needed because he already had what he needed. Try again. This time, bring someone into interview.

The Sox manager exhibits no control over players who can't do it and don't seem to want help. Send him back to Kansas City.

Thanks for 2005, Jerry. Now sell and go enjoy retirement.

— Laurence Siegel, Manteno, Illinois

No public funds justified

I attended my first Sox game since the pandemic, responded to a Sox survey and told them that the concessions were overpriced, the team played with no enthusiasm and the whole team was going downhill. The stated crowd was 16,501 people, but it appeared to be about half that. Even so, there were lines to the ladies room. That is the only thing wrong with the ballpark.

Location is easy to reach, parking is right there and plentiful, and concession choices are OK, so the taxpayers do not need to fund a new park for a crappy team.

If there is any justification for public funding, it may be for the Bears but with restrictions and matching private contributions.

— Dave Hubert, Yorkville, Illinois

Reinsdorf should sell

It's time for White Sox owner Jerry Reinsdorf to follow the example of President Joe Biden and announce that he will be stepping down at the end of the season.

He can be proud of the 2005 World Series, but it is time to let someone else take the reins.

— Phillip Seeberg, Naperville

Don't punish the team

Regarding the Paul Sullivan column "Don't boycott the ballparks like Veeck did in the end" (Aug. 4): Fans from any market understand that they shouldn't deprive themselves of games merely to protest a team's owner. I lived through the George Steinbrenner Yankees era, after all.

There's nothing like grabbing a game after work or sharing an afternoon at the ballpark with our youngest fans. Nor is it time to stop supporting the players (they notice the crowd size too) when one of the clubs happens to be winless in 20 games.

— Adam Silbert, New York City

Happy for NFL greats

Congratulations to Devin Hester and Steve "Mongo" McMichael on their well-deserved election to the Pro Football Hall of Fame. I've often said, some tongue in cheek, that the only two Bears highlights in my 50 years in Chicago were the 1985-86 Bears and Hester.

— Ken Kramer, Glen Ellyn

Walz a great VP choice

Congratulations to the likely next vice president of the United State, Tim Walz. Congratulations to Kamala Harris for making this crucial decision so quickly. I feel that it is the right one. All the other candidates were excellent, but there were reasons not to choose each of them.

I think the two of them present a winning team that will appeal to a broad spectrum of voters.

— Joyce Porter, Oak Park

A silly title for Emhoff

I have wondered if anyone on the planet can rationally explain why Doug Emhoff is referred to as the second gentleman. I never heard Jill Biden, or any other wife of a vice president, called the second lady. Where did this ridiculous title originate?

— Lenore Bernstein, Northbrook

Harris a poor candidate

Kamala Harris rarely gives interviews. When speaking off the teleprompter, she delivers tautological and meaningless word salads. Her reflexive laughing is a coping mechanism.

Furthermore, Harris' record as vice president is a dismal failure. What has she accomplished?

Major administration decisions include abandoning Afghanistan's Bagram Airfield, with Americans still in Afghanistan; encouraging Vladimir Putin in Ukraine; ignoring the southern border mayhem; canceling the Keystone Pipeline by revoking a key permit; and discouraging fracking and oil and natural gas exploration.

Moreover, the administration waived Donald Trump's oil sanctions against Iran. Iran has sold oil to China, among others, to the tune of hundreds of billions of dollars. Iran uses that money to fund, train and weaponize its proxies Hamas, Hezbollah and the Houthis against Israel, the U.S. and others in the Red Sea.

— David N. Simon, Chicago

Impressed by Harris

I am a lifelong Republican and voted for the GOP's presidential candidate from the 1970s until 2016. Since 2017, I have been embarrassed and enraged by the unprofessional, childish and criminal behavior of the GOP's current presidential candidate and many of his unthinking MAGA supporters. My earlier alternative candidate was unacceptable but for different reasons.

Thankfully, the Democrats' candidate, Kamala Harris, is now running. She is well-spoken, professional, law-aiding, experienced, polite and diplomatic, yet forceful when needed. She does not seem at all prone to unprofessional bickering, name-calling or making up facts, unlike her opponent.

I do not agree with all Harris' political positions, but I certainly am impressed by her integrity, and I respect her good character. Those are my critical criteria. Finally, a candidate I can and will vote for — and donate to.

I feel so much better.

— Robert B. Hamilton, Wauconda

Not a good comparison

Regarding the op-ed "Joe Biden, Richard Nixon and 2 turbulent political summers" (Aug. 4): I am old enough to recall the Watergate hearings and President Richard Nixon's resignation. I believe there is a huge and dangerous difference between then and now. Back then, everyone, including Nixon, had respect for the law, norms and the good of the country. Back then, Republicans clearly respected the rule of law and delivered the message to Nixon that he had lost support and would not survive an impeachment trial in the Senate.

Today, we have a situation in which Donald Trump claims any election he loses, including primaries, was rigged and his loss was because of cheating. We have a U.S. Supreme Court that has ruled the president has kinglike powers. We have a Republican Party that fully understands its leader is a liar, fraud, con artist and convicted felon, yet it continues to firmly support him and dispense with any shred of integrity or honor in fear of the MAGA base that has become a Trump personality cult.

Given the reality of politics today, I believe the Republican Party will fully support Trump, the implementation of Project 2025 and installation of the authoritarian regime that represents.

We have greater reason to fear loss of democracy than any time in our history.

— Douglas Nyhus, Frankfort

Justice not independent

If it weren't so scary, U.S. Supreme Court Neil Gorsuch's comments about the "independence" of the Supreme Court would be funny. Here is a man who but for U.S. Sen. Mitch McConnell stonewalling then-President Barack Obama's selection wouldn't be on the court. And he talks about independence when he has joined in opinions that ignore years of precedent, that twist legal reasoning to support indefensible positions and that have granted immunity to criminal acts by a president.

Gorsuch worries that people are over-regulated, so he rejects efforts to clean the environment or combat climate change.

Gorsuch is not independent — he, along with Justices Clarence Thomas and Samuel Alito, is pursuing how he thinks laws should be written and how the government should be run, regardless of what voters have elected their representatives to enact.

Police make 21st gun-related arrest in Topgolf parking lot since August 2023

By Tess Kenny
Naperville Sun

Naperville police have made another firearm-related arrest in the Naperville Topgolf parking lot, their 21st in almost exactly a year.

Ivann Mitchell Altman-McCray, 31, of Chicago, was arrested Friday night outside the 3211 Odyssey Court business on three misdemeanor charges, including violating the state's Firearm Concealed Carry Act, carrying a concealed firearm while under the influence of alcohol and unlawful use of a weapon, according to police and DuPage County Circuit Court records.

Altman-McCray was taken into custody Friday after an officer patrolling the business' lot spotted a gun in plain view inside his vehicle, according to Naperville police spokeswoman Kelley Munch. The officer spotted a "black-colored handgun sticking out from underneath a seat inside a vehicle," Munch said.

Officers approached Altman-McCray and another person after they retuned to the vehicle and found that while Altman-McCray possessed a valid Firearm Owner's Identification card and Concealed Carry License, he had improperly stowed the weapon and was in possession of the firearm while allegedly intoxicated, Munch said.

Altman-McCray's arrest comes just a few days after Camarion Jai Cobbins, 19 of Huntsville, Alabama, was arrested July 28 at the Topgolf parking lot on one charge of aggravated unlawful use of a weapon.

Altman-McCray's arrest brings the number of firearm-related arrests outside the venue to 21 over the past 12 months.

Naperville police also have been making arrests on drug-related charges outside the facility in recent weeks.

Most recently, officers took Dante Rashad Walker, 32, of South Holland, into custody Saturday on felony charges of manufacture/delivery of cannabis and possession of 500 to 2,000 grams of cannabis.

Officers made the arrest after detecting a strong odor of cannabis coming from a parked vehicle while walking through the lot and detaining Walker when he returned to the car, Munch said. Investigators later found a large amount of allegedly illegal cannabis and cash in the vehicle, she said.

Late last month, Jeremy Boykins, 36 of East Chicago, Indiana, was arrested in the Topgolf lot for possession of a controlled substance, police and court records show.

Campaigns

since Biden's winning coalition from four years ago has showed signs of fraying over the summer — particularly in Michigan, which has emerged as a focal point of Democratic divisions over Biden's handling of the Israel-Hamas conflict.

With Biden now out of the race, leaders of the Arab American community and key unions say they are encouraged by the running mate choice. Walz's addition to the ticket has soothed some tensions, signaling to some leaders that Harris had heard concerns about another leading contender for the vice presidential slot, Gov. Josh Shapiro of Pennsylvania, who they felt had gone too far in his support for Israel.

"The party is recognizing that there's a coalition they have to rebuild," said Abdullah Hammoud, the mayor of Dearborn, Michigan. "Picking Walz is another sign of good faith."

Trump, too, has put emphasis on appealing to voters in Midwestern states with his choice of Vance, an Ohio Republican senator, as his running mate. Vance even bracketed the Harris-Walz ticket with Michigan and Wisconsin appearances of his own on Wednesday.

The dueling schedules overlapped enough that while Harris was still greeting a group of Girl Scouts who came to see her arrive at Chippewa Valley Regional Airport in Wisconsin, Vance's campaign plane landed nearby and was taxiing in the distance.

Harris posed for a group picture with the girls around the same time Vance was deplaning, and he began walking over to Air Force Two, trailed by his security detail.

The vice president eventually climbed into her motorcade, and it pulled away before they could interact. Still, that the pair came so close to doing so on a tarmac was unusual given the carefully scripted nature of campaign schedules.

"I just wanted to check out my future plane," Vance later told reporters, meaning that he'd travel on Air Force Two should he and Trump be elected in November. He also criticized Harris for not taking questions from reporters, though she sometimes answers shouted questions while boarding or leaving her plane for campaign stops.

Vance later told the crowd at his Eau Claire event, "We actually just saw the vice president's plane" and then joked of reporters traveling with him, "I figured they must be lonely because Kamala Harris doesn't take any questions."

"If those people want to call me weird I call it a badge of honor," Vance said, responding to a moniker Walz used to describe him that made the Minnesota governor notable online in the days before Harris tapped him as her running mate.

Addressing the Democrats' Wisconsin rally ahead of Harris, Walz had some critical words for Vance but trained most of his sharpest words on Trump, saying the former president "mocks our laws, he sows chaos and division amongst the people and that's to say nothing of the job he did as president."

Republicans are trying to portray Harris and Walz as too liberal for the Midwest.

But Democratic enthusiasm has surged since Harris announced her candidacy and picked Walz as her running mate.

"We love Joe. Joe has been an incredible president, but he just isn't the same messenger. And sometimes you need a better messenger," said Dan Miller, from Pelican Lake, Wisconsin, who attended the Walz-Harris rally. "And that's Kamala."

The momentum could be pivotal in Detroit, which is nearly 80% Black, where leaders for months had warned administration officials that voter apathy could cost them in a city that's typically a stronghold for their party.

The Rev. Wendell Anthony, president of the NAACP Detroit branch, said the excitement in the city now is "mind-blowing." He likened it to Barack Obama's first run for president in 2008, when voters waited in long lines to help elect the nation's first Black president.

CDPH IMMUNIZATION EDUCATION SERVICES FOR HEALTHCARE PROVIDERS
RFP Purpose
Aligned with Healthy Chicago (HC) 2025, this Request for Proposals (RFP) supports multiple HC 2025 principles, focusing on (1) transforming policies and processes to foster anti-racist, multicultural systems, (2) strengthening community capacity, and (3) improving systems of care for populations most affected by inequities.

Name and description of program/initiative/project/etc.
The Chicago Department of Public Health's (CDPH) Coordinating Community Immunization Education for Healthcare Providers RFP seeks an organization to offer immunization education services to providers as a means of developing and implementing effective immunization education strategies to increase vaccine confidence throughout Chicago (e.g., medical office managers, nurses, medical assistants, pharmacists, physicians, nurse practitioners, and physician assistants). These activities include, but are not limited to, development and coordination of immunization education programs through in-office peer education, internet-based applications, and/or hospital-based grand rounds and other large group training activities.

Prospective supplier requirements

ASK abc7

Phil Schwarz

QUESTION: This morning, clouds were moving east to west instead of the usual west to east. What weather phenomenon causes this?

Loren B.

ANSWER: While we typically see a west to east component to the wind, it's not uncommon to have a wind blowing from the east. This is why it is frequently cooler by the lake in the spring and early summer. The past two days, we have seen a brisk east to northeast breeze. This was caused by the counterclockwise wind flow around a storm system that passed nearly overhead and then off to the east.

Mayo tries to reduce stigma

Breast cancer clinic to serve people who identify as LGBTQ

By Sean Baker
Minneapolis Star Tribune

ROCHESTER, Minn. — People who identify as LGBTQ can face major disparities and stigma when it comes to cancer care, often resulting in later-stage diagnoses and poorer outcomes than other patients.

Dr. Elizabeth Cathcart-Rake, an oncologist at Mayo Clinic in Rochester, is determined to change that.

This summer, Cathcart-Rake and a team at Mayo launched Rainbows, a cancer clinic tailored to meeting the needs of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, queer, gender-diverse and intersex patients. Rainbows will initially focus on supporting patients with breast cancer, with the goal of eventually expanding to include other types of tumors already treated at Mayo.

"This is embedded within our oncology clinic, which is a real plus because that means folks have the same access to multidisciplinary teams that they would in our general clinic," Cathcart-Rake said.

Cathcart-Rake said the idea for starting Rainbows is not only the right thing to do — it's personal. Her close friend, a transgender man, endured "unbelievable discrimination and stigma" in the health care setting, she said. The experience prompted her to consider how she could improve results for her friend, who has a family history of breast cancer.

"Our job is to serve the patient in front of us and to really help people, and it just felt like this is not right," Cathcart-Rake said. "There really should be a safe space for folks seeking care regardless of their background, regardless of their sexual orientation or gender identity."

In addition to stigma, Cathcart-Rake pointed to other areas of concern. LGBTQ patients, for instance, are less likely to be offered fertility preservation before cancer treatment, she said.

There is also evidence suggesting that LGBTQ people are less likely to seek early care, leading to cancers being diagnosed at more advanced stages.

In one recent study by the American Cancer Society, researchers found that only 70% of medical students would feel comfortable caring for transgender patients.

The same study showed that discrimination in health care has led to 18% of LGBTQ adults avoiding necessary care.

"If you don't feel comfortable seeking medical care, then you are likely going to delay care," said Tyler Kratzer, a researcher with the American Cancer Society and lead author on the study.

As Rainbows works to create a welcoming environment for LGBTQ patients, it will also double as a research clinic.

Even with more attention being drawn to the issues of disparities, additional research is needed to understand how providers can better serve the LGBTQ community, said Cathcart-Rake.

"There's such an absence of data out there to help guide decision-making that it's a real opportunity for us to better understand disparities," Cathcart-Rake said.

Rainbows will operate on a referral basis, meaning patients can "opt in" to seek care through the clinic, Cathcart-Rake said. The team also includes another oncologist, a nurse practitioner, a social worker and a registered nurse.

ORLAND PARK

Revamp closer to reality

Developer hopes to break ground this year for massive downtown project

By Mike Nolan
Daily Southtown

Plans for Orland Park's downtown development are advancing, with a mix of retail, restaurants and entertainment and shepherded by a firm that hopes to break ground this fall.

More steps have to happen first, including establishment of a revised tax increment financing district.

The Village Board approved a special use permit Monday for the planned development northwest of La Grange Road and 143rd Street. The village owns seven properties spread over nine acres.

Edwards Realty, based in Orland Park, is proposing more than 140,000 square feet of commercial and office space and a larger park in the center of the site.

The development would be situated around the Ninety7Fifty on the Park apartments, University of Chicago Medicine Center for Advanced Care, a parking garage and the 143rd Street Metra station.

It's often referred to as the Main Street Triangle because of the larger 27-acre property's shape.

The village hired Edwards in March 2021 to consult on potential uses for the village-owned land, and Orland Park, in May 2022, approved a conceptual master development plan with Edwards.

The term triangle comes from the site's northern border of the Metra SouthWest Service line and Southwest Highway, eastern border of La Grange Road and southern border of 143rd Street.

"This is a well thought out project for the remaining land," Mayor Keith Pekau said Monday as plans were discussed.

"We're doing something with this to make it a very unique space, I think different than the rest of Orland Park," he said.

Trustee Sean Kampas noted the review of the project so far has taken time to ensure it's a good fit for the site. Officials said Edwards' plans do not include any residential development as part.

Edwards anticipates a total project cost of $80.5 million, and could be reimbursed for up to $33 million in costs through tax increment and other sources.

Plans propose reconfiguring Crescent Park Circle, which wraps around Crescent Park, and leave Jefferson Avenue north of 142nd closed to vehicles and serve as a pedestrian strip.

Plans from Edwards propose 37,000 square feet of mixed office space, 84,000 square feet of retail and other commercial and 26,000 square feet of entertainment space.

An expansion of Crescent Park, to be renamed Heroes Park, is included, and what is now a stormwater detention pond in the northeast corner of the triangle would

A 'FRESH' TAKE

Online platform launched by group of Barrington High School students connects younger demographic to the farmers market experience in effort to fight food waste

By Shanzeh Ahmad | Chicago Tribune

A group of high schoolers from Barrington are working to grow an online platform they've launched, Fresh Cornucopia, which brings farmers market vendors from different communities together for customers from all over to find.

The idea was first sparked in Barrington High School's "Business INCubator" course, which teaches students entrepreneurship through the development of a legitimate product or service. Dylan DeLeon, 17, is one of the four students who came up with Fresh Cornucopia.

Students in the class take on the responsibilities of running a business, like managing financials, marketing and customer acquisition, and maintaining the front and back ends of the website.

Fresh Cornucopia currently operates as a for-profit model, but the group has "played with the idea of becoming a nonprofit," DeLeon said.

"Our main purpose is really just to bring together communities," he said.

At the beginning of the project, DeLeon said the group of students wasn't exactly sure how they would go about achieving that purpose, but they knew they wanted to get the idea off the ground as soon as possible.

The idea for Fresh Cornucopia came about when the student group was tasked in class to identify a problem that needed solving.

"What we all saw in our community is that there's a lot of food waste both coming from leftover vegetables or fruit or other produce as well as the fact that there's not really a lot of communal interaction," DeLeon said.

This led them to farmers markets, which deal with food waste and communal interaction. DeLeon said the group wanted to do more, like helping draw in more people to local farmers markets while also reducing food waste in the process.

It was important to the students to have an online presence through the Fresh Cornucopia website to connect the digital generation to farmers markets, DeLeon said.

"We thought it would be a good idea to engage the younger demographic, those who are more online, by allowing them to order their goods through a website as opposed to having to go in person and sort of finding their own way," DeLeon said. "It's a better means of getting them to come to these local events."

The website also makes it easier for the vendors as they can see how many orders are coming in ahead of time and can better plan how much of their product to bring to the market the day of, said Sreehitha Nara,16, another member of the Fresh Cornucopia team.

Fresh Cornucopia now has over 20 vendors since the team began testing its product in February, and the website has generated over $500 in revenue for the vendors who use the platform. With the help of the incubator course's summer program, the team recently registered Fresh Cornucopia as an LLC in Illinois.

Christine Rausch is the owner of Mama Bear Macs, a business she started in August 2022 during the COVID-19 pandemic where she bakes and sells French macarons. Her first goal was to start selling at a farmers market in Crystal Lake.

"I felt that was the best exposure for me for what I was selling," Rausch said.

She was approached by the Fresh Cornucopia team in the winter and has since seen the kind of new business she can get through the service.

"It's definitely helped me because I've gotten some sales from people that are a little bit out of my immediate area that probably wouldn't have found me otherwise," Rausch said.

Advances in AI may make judge's Google ruling moot

California firm plans appeal in search engine monopoly case

By Michael Liedtke
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — A federal judge has branded Google as a ruthless monopolist bent on suffocating its competitors. But how do you go about creating alternatives to a search engine that's synonymous with internet exploration?

It's a process that may take years to unfold as Google appeals the landmark decision issued Monday by U.S. District Judge Amit Mehta.

And with that kind of time frame looming, the forces of technological upheaval may make the exercise moot.

The rise of artificial intelligence may reshape the landscape more quickly and profoundly than any judge ever could. The way consumers navigate the internet is more likely to be affected by advances in AI products — such as OpenAI's ChatGPT and Google's own Gemini — before a nearly 4-year-old case brought by the U.S. Justice Department is finally resolved.

Even so, Mehta's 277-page ruling Monday creates challenges for Google that company founders Larry Page and Sergey Brin probably didn't envision when they set out to revolutionize internet search while attending Stanford University as graduate students. They eventually dropped out to start a Silicon Valley company in 1998 that adopted "Don't Be Evil" as a motto that also was meant to serve as its corporate conscience.

Page and Brin, the controlling shareholders of Google's corporate parent Alphabet Inc., also cast their startup as a crusader for technology that would be far better than the products coming out of Microsoft, the industry's reigning kingpin at the time. Microsoft's dominance of personal computer software and anticompetitive tactics during the 1990s spurred another Justice Department case that ended up hobbling Microsoft and helped make it easier for Google to build its lead in search and then expand into maps, cloud computing, email (Gmail), web browsers (Chrome) and video (YouTube).

Now, the script has been flipped, with Google facing potential legal constraints, while a resurgent Microsoft has been making headway in AI with a major helping hand from its investment in OpenAI.

It will be left to Google CEO Sundar Pichai, who took over the company's leadership from Page in 2015, to minimize the distractions caused by the legal skirmishing still to come and remain focused on an industrywide pivot to AI technology that's expected to be as revolutionary as the mobile computing shift by Apple's introduction of the iPhone in 2007.

The debate about how Google should be overhauled will begin Sept. 6 with a hearing scheduled in Washington, D.C.

Google also will be pursing an appeal, based on its long-held contention that it has done nothing wrong but build and maintain a search engine that has been far superior to anything else for more than 20 years. The Mountain View, California, company also maintains that competition is just a few clicks away, with consumers still free to go to other options, such as Microsoft's Bing, DuckDuckGo and, more recently, AI-powered alternatives such as Perplexity and ChatGPT.

Rx for drugstores: Change

Shoppers may see locations close, smaller stores, more clinics as competition grows

By Tom Murphy
Associated Press

America's drugstores are testing smaller locations and more ways to offer care as price-sensitive shoppers look elsewhere.

Customers may see Walgreens stores that are one-fourth the size of a regular location or CVS drugstores with entire primary clinics stuffed inside. If these experiments succeed, the new stores might improve access to care and create a more lasting connection with customers, analysts say.

"Everyone looks at health care and says, 'Oh yeah, it's a market that's ripe for disruption,'" said Neil Saunders, managing director of consulting and data analysis firm GlobalData. "But it isn't easy to disrupt."

Walgreens CEO Tim Wentworth said recently that his company could close a "significant portion" of underperforming stores in the next few years. CVS Health is going through a round of closings. Rite Aid has filed for bankruptcy. Thousands of independent drugstores have closed over the past five years.

The closings can leave gaps: An Associated Press analysis published in June found that urban neighborhoods that are majority Black and Latino have fewer pharmacies per capita than white majority neighborhoods. There are still more than 30,000 drugstores scattered around the country, but even Walgreens executives admit that the market is overbuilt.

The stores have struggled with increased competition from Amazon and lower-price options like Walmart or Dollar Tree. They're also dealing with theft, growing costs and thinner prescription reimbursement.

Some are responding with new looks.

Walgreens is testing a store in Chicago that has digital kiosks where customers place orders. A separate desk offers pickup of items ordered at the kiosks or online.

The company also has opened about 100 mini-drugstores focused on health and wellness and featuring store-brand merchandise. Walgreens started testing these stores in 2019 and plans to add more this year.

Saunders notes these stores are less expensive to run and allow the company to serve areas without enough people to support a bigger store.

At one of these locations in Indianapolis, only four short aisles separate the front door and the pharmacy counter in the back. Healthy snacks, vitamins, first aid supplies, and the usual mix of antacids and Advil fill its shelves. But there are no magazines and only small selections of greeting cards and beauty products at the store, which is closed on Sundays and sits about a half-mile from a vacant Walgreens.

Leonard King, 67, of Indianapolis, has visited several times. He says his prescriptions are ready on time, and the store seems to have decent supplies. "Being a diabetic, sometimes medicines are hard to get," he said.

The selection of retail items also is smaller at some CVS Health stores that include Oak Street Health primary care clinics. The company plans to open about 25 of these combinations this year and 11 more next year, with either full-size or smaller clinics in the stores.

The clinics can have primary care doctors, social workers and people to help with insurance coverage.

CVS Health says it is targeting cities like Chicago, Dallas and New York with its initial rollout.

EPA bans use of weed killer harmful to fetuses

By Hiroko Tabuchi
The New York Times

In a move not seen for almost 40 years, the Environmental Protection Agency on Tuesday issued an emergency order suspending all uses of a weed killer linked to serious health risks for unborn babies.

The herbicide dimethyl tetrachloroterephthalate, also known as DCPA or Dacthal, is used on crops such as broccoli, Brussels sprouts, cabbage and onions. Fetuses exposed to it could suffer from low birth weight, impaired brain development, decreased IQ and impaired motor skills later in life, the EPA said.

"In this case, pregnant women who may never even know they were exposed could give birth to babies that experience irreversible lifelong health problems," Michal Freedhoff, EPA assistant administrator for the Office of Chemical Safety, said in statement.

California-based AMVAC Chemical Corp., the sole manufacturer of the pesticide, didn't immediately respond to a request for comment.

Tuesday's order followed several years of "unprecedented efforts" by the Environmental Protection Agency to get AMVAC to submit its own data on the pesticide and its health risks, the agency said.

Mily Treviño Sauceda, executive director of Alianza Nacional de Campesinas, also known as the National Farmworkers Women's Alliance, called the EPA's decision "historic."

The chemical has been prohibited for use on crops in the European Union since 2009.

Some advocacy groups criticized the agency for not acting earlier. "The EPA's decision to finally suspend DCPA is welcome news, but it's long overdue," said Alexis Temkin, senior toxicologist at the Environmental Working Group, a nonprofit advocacy organization.

Some farms have voiced opposition to banning the pesticide.

It was "an essential tool for controlling yield-robbing grasses and broadleaf weeds," a representative of Griffin Ranches, which grows onions, broccoli and cauliflower in Yuma, Arizona, wrote in a 2022 letter opposing any move toward a ban.

Conspiracy alleged as X advertisers' group sued

Associated Press

WICHITA FALLS, Texas — Elon Musk's social media platform X has sued a group of advertisers, alleging that a "massive advertiser boycott" deprived the company of billions of dollars in revenue and violated antitrust laws.

The company formerly known as Twitter filed the lawsuit Tuesday in a federal court in Texas against the World Federation of Advertisers and member companies Unilever, Mars, CVS Health and Orsted.

It accused the advertising group's brand safety initiative, called the Global Alliance for Responsible Media, of helping to coordinate a pause in advertising after Musk bought Twitter for $44 billion in late 2022 and overhauled its staff and policies.

Musk posted about the lawsuit on X, saying Tuesday that "now it is war" after two years of "getting nothing but empty words."

X CEO Linda Yaccarino said in a video announcement that the lawsuit stemmed in part from evidence uncovered by the U.S. House Judiciary Committee, which she said showed a "group of companies organized a systematic illegal boycott" against X.

The Republican-led committee had a hearing last month looking at whether current laws are "sufficient to deter anticompetitive collusion in online advertising."

The lawsuit's allegations center on the early days of Musk's Twitter takeover and not a more recent dispute with advertisers that came a year later.

In November 2023, about a year after Musk bought the company, a number of advertisers began fleeing X over concerns about their ads showing up next to pro-Nazi content and hate speech on the site in general, with Musk inflaming tensions with his own posts endorsing an antisemitic conspiracy theory.

BUSINESS BRIEFING

Dubai sees record 44.9M air travelers

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates — Dubai International Airport saw a record 44.9 million travelers pass through its terminals in the first half of this year, putting the world's busiest airport for international travel back on track to beat its all-time record, as aviation booms after the coronavirus pandemic.

The results, released Wednesday, follow a record-breaking annual profit for the long-haul carrier Emirates that calls the airport — known as DXB — its home. The results come as Dubai plans to move operations to a nearly $35 billion new airfield in the next decade.

The airport had 89.1 million passengers in 2018, its busiest year ever before the pandemic. Sixty-six million passengers passed through in 2022 and 86.9 million passengers in 2023. — Associated Press

Upgrades cut Kia, Hyundai car thefts

Anti-theft software upgrades provided for Hyundai and Kia vehicles regularly targeted by thieves has cut theft rates by more than half, according to new research from the Highway Loss Data Institute.

Theft rates of the affected automobiles soared after thieves discovered that certain car models lacked engine immobilizers, an anti-theft technology that has long been standard in other vehicles. Thieves used a technique popularized on TikTok and other social media platforms to take the vehicles.

The software upgrade started in February 2023 after numerous theft claims that began during the COVID-19 pandemic.

For vehicles that have the new software, the automobile will only start if the owner's key or an identical duplicate is in the ignition. — Associated Press

website with descriptions, pricing, pictures and more, Nara said. Customers can peruse the products on the website and filter by location using their ZIP code. Once a customer fills out an order form on the website for the product they want, the order will either be delivered or available for pickup from the given farmers market, depending on the vendor.

Nara said Fresh Cornucopia is free to use, meaning vendors don't have to pay to post on the website and customers don't have to pay to look around.

"For the new generation like mine, which shops online a lot of the time, this is another tool," Nara said. "I hope we can all learn not to always shop from larger brands but to also online shop to support small businesses and shift to shopping more locally and more cleanly."

The student group takes a 15% commission on all orders through its website, but it doesn't pocket the money. DeLeon said all of the money they make "goes back into the business," but they'd like to be able to pay themselves in the future as Fresh Cornucopia grows.

"I think what we're doing for the community will have a really big impact," he said. "We really need a way to modernize farmers markets. There's a disconnect from what I've seen, and I think Fresh Cornucopia acts as that bridge."

Hagop Soulakian, who has been teaching entrepreneurship at Barrington High School for over a decade, said the incubator course offers students dual credit for both high school and college. The class takes students through the process of starting a business from scratch, he said.

"Fresh Cornucopia's a very committed bunch," he said. "They're committed to the process, and my hope is that when all is said and done, in their eyes, they'll be successful."

As a teacher, Soulakian said, his mission is to prepare his students for the next chapters in their lives.

Fresh Cornucopia started with not just a focus on Barrington, but surrounding suburbs like Palatine, Crystal Lake, Schaumburg and Buffalo Grove. Since the beginning of summer break, the group has been scaling to even more communities.

Younger shoppers are just one target demographic for the business, DeLeon said. The team hopes to bring in all kinds of customers and especially wants to showcase vendors from farmers markets that some people may not have seen otherwise because they stick to their own communities.

While Fresh Cornucopia highlights produce and perishable food mostly, DeLeon said the group "would love to expand" into more categories like textiles and other farmers market goods.

A newer faction of Fresh Cornucopia is connecting high school students with farmers market vendors to help run the vendors' stands. Fresh Cornucopia has already placed five students with vendors for part-time work and has several more students who have applied for the program and are waiting for an opening.

As a rising senior at Barrington High School, DeLeon said he "100%" could see himself continuing work on Fresh Cornucopia after high school.

"We, as a team, are really connected, and we're really in sync with each other," he said. "I think we all know what we plan to do as a whole on this business, and I think that maybe even going off to college in different places could be more beneficial for us as we can expand and help not only our local communities but other communities as well."

be enhanced with fountains.

A walkway would overlook the pond, and archways defining a central pedestrian promenade between the pond and 142nd Street and dividing two commercial buildings with rooftop restaurants, according to plans.

A traffic study submitted indicated streets inside the triangle would be able to handle traffic, and a total of 1,456 parking spaces would be available, although the goal is to encourage walking through most of the planned development.

That parking figure includes the existing 574-space elevated parking garage and Metra parking.

Parking in the Metra lots is free on weekends and after 3 p.m. weekdays, and while some of the spaces in the garage are reserved for the hospital clinic, that is largely available in the evenings, according to the village.

Multiple phases would take place, and the Village Board could approve individual phases without the need for further Plan Commission review, according to the proposal.

The Village Board could, however, at its sole discretion, send any phases of development back to the Plan Commission.

Some of the money to pay for the project would come from a 1% increase on the sales and hotel tax imposed on businesses within the district, with the tax in place for up to 23 years.

That would be on top of the village's home rule sales tax of 1.25%.

A special service area would be created within the development and use property tax money to pay for things such as road maintenance, stormwater infrastructure, maintenance of common space and park areas and seasonal decorations for common areas.

In a TIF district, property taxes for all government bodies are frozen at levels at the time the TIF is created and any increase due to higher property values, the increment, is used to pay for improvements or incentives. TIF districts typically expire after 23 years but can be extended to up to 35 years.

The triangle's TIF first tax year was 2003, and the thinking by village officials is by the time much of the development is completed, the TIF will have expired or have just a few years of life left. A revised TIF would be created and need approval from village officials and other affected taxing bodies, such as school districts.

French importing of Russia's liquefied natural gas draws ire

By Ed Davey
Associated Press

Shipments of Russian liquefied natural gas to France more than doubled the first half of this year, according to new analyses of trade data, at a time when Europe has tried to pull back from energy purchases that help finance the Kremlin's invasion of Ukraine.

Europe has restricted oil imports from Russia, but natural gas is still allowed. And while companies in France are importing the most, one analysis found EU countries overall imported 7% more Russian LNG, natural gas that has been chilled and liquefied for easier ocean transport, in the first half of this year compared to the same period a year ago.

Oleh Savytskyi, a founding member of nonprofit Razom We Stand, which campaigns for tougher sanctions on Russian fossil fuels, said the EU's goal of phasing out all Russian fossil fuels by 2027 was "appallingly off track." He said countries buying Russian LNG are sabotaging the continent's energy transition and adding billions to Russia's war effort.

European governments have said banning Russian gas imports entirely would send energy and heating bills skyrocketing and industrial users of gas would suffer, too.

The analysis first came from the Institute for Energy Economics and Financial Analysis, a U.S. nonprofit with a goal of speeding the world's transition to more sustainable energy. IEEFA examined data from Kpler, a shipping tracker, and ICIS, a commodity data provider, both of which also provided their own analysis.

The institute said companies imported almost 4.4 billion cubic meters of Russian LNG to France in the first half of this year, compared to more than 2 billion cubic meters in the same period a year ago. The next biggest importers, Spain and Belgium, saw a 1% rise and a 16% decline respectively, IEEFA said.

TotalEnergies, the French energy giant that accounted for the largest share of the imports in a list of cargoes between January and June seen by The Associated Press, said it was bound by contracts signed before Russia's Ukraine invasion. And France's Finance and Economy Ministry told the AP that Houthi rebel attacks on ships moving through the Suez Canal have forced a reshaping of LNG imports — gas from the Middle East can no longer get easily to Europe, while Russia's route from the Arctic has been unaffected.

The ministry noted that France is one of Europe's main entry points for LNG. France and Spain, with seven each, have the most LNG terminals in Europe.

At the same time France was importing more Russian LNG, it was importing less from other suppliers, including the United States, Angola, Cameroon, Egypt and Nigeria — an amount approaching the jump in Russian LNG, according to the analysis. None of those other countries' LNG exports were affected by Red Sea attacks.

Pricing data for Russian LNG isn't public. It typically sells for a small discount because some buyers don't want it, said Jason Feer, of energy consultants Poten and Partners.

Trump floats range of tax cut ideas

Notions carry great political appeal, but lack backing policies

By Andrew Duehren
The New York Times

Former President Donald Trump takes the stage July 31 at a rally in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania. DOUG MILLS/THE NEW YORK TIMES

First it was a tax cut for hotel and restaurant workers in Nevada, a swing state where former President Donald Trump proposed exempting tips from taxes. Then, in front of powerful chief executives gathered in Washington, Trump floated cutting the corporate tax rate, helping to ease concerns in the business community about his candidacy.

Now Trump is calling for an end to taxing Social Security benefits, which could be a boon for retirees, one of the most politically important groups in the United States.

Repeatedly during the campaign, Trump and Republicans have embraced new, sometimes novel tax cuts in an attempt to shore up support with major constituencies. In social media posts, at political rallies and without formal policy proposals, Trump has casually suggested reducing federal revenue by trillions of dollars.

While policy experts have taken issue with the ideas, Trump's pronouncements have real political appeal, at times putting Democrats on their back foot. Nevada's two Democratic senators and its powerful culinary union have endorsed ending taxes on tips. The AARP supports tax relief for seniors receiving Social Security benefits, though it has not taken a position on Trump's proposal.

"You do have to scratch your head a little bit when someone's going around offering free lunches everywhere," said Jesse Lee, a Democratic consultant and former Biden White House official. "We're all for people having their lunch, but we have to raise taxes on the wealthy to pay for it."

The most recent and most expensive of Trump's plans is ending income taxes on Social Security benefits, which could cost the federal government as much as $1.8 trillion in revenue over a decade, according to the Committee for a Responsible Federal Budget. That would burn through the program's financial reserves more quickly and hasten the moment when the government is no longer able to pay out Social Security benefits in full under current law.

It would also provide tax relief to millions of Americans. Congress started taxing Social Security benefits in the 1980s to help prop up the program's finances, and now about 40% of people who receive Social Security payments owe taxes on the benefits, according to the Social Security Administration.

To determine whether someone's benefits are taxed, the government uses a formula that counts half of Social Security payments as income. Households making between roughly $60,000 and $200,000 would receive the largest comparative boost under the proposal, according to an analysis by the Tax Policy Center, a think tank.

Romina Boccia, director of budget and entitlement policy at the libertarian Cato Institute, said ending taxes on Social Security would shift more of the burden for paying for the benefits onto younger workers.

"I can see the political calculations behind this proposal, but from a tax fairness perspective and a generation fairness perspective, it is a very bad proposal," she said.

Still, there is bipartisan support for the concept. Some House Democrats introduced legislation this year that would stop taxing Social Security benefits while also raising payroll taxes on higher-income Americans to fund the program.

As governor of Minnesota, Tim Walz, whom Vice President Kamala Harris selected as her 2024 running mate, signed legislation that exempted Social Security payments from state taxes for many seniors. Bill Sweeney, senior vice president for government affairs at AARP, said any changes to Social Security should protect the program's finances. He added that his group's members were not shy about their distaste for taxes on Social Security. "I know they're calling members of Congress and complaining about this," he said.

In an interview on Fox Business last week, Trump brushed aside concerns about the cost of the idea. He said that accelerating the deadline for addressing Social Security's finances would prompt Congress to fix the program.

Beyond his new ideas, Trump is also seeking to extend many of the tax cuts he signed into law in 2017. Harris has also effectively promised to extend many of those tax cuts beyond 2025, when they are currently set to expire. She's adopted a pledge not to raise taxes on any household making less than $400,000 a year.

Even as they prepare to defend much of Trump's signature tax law, many Democrats believe they have a better political hand on tax policy. For years, they have pummeled Republican tax plans, arguing that they primarily benefit large companies and wealthy Americans. In addition to supporting tax cuts for low-income and middle-class Americans, Democrats are seeking to raise taxes on wealthy Americans and large corporations.

To try to blunt Democratic attacks, some Republicans have sought to emphasize tax cuts for working-class Americans and small businesses. They hope Trump focuses on ideas like exempting Social Security from income taxes, rather than further slashing the corporate tax from 21% to 15%, as he has suggested.

"This feels like an answer to Democratic attacks that Trump is protecting corporate America," said Ron Bonjean, a Republican consultant. "If there is another debate, he can pull these out of his back pocket to say he's fighting for seniors and he's fighting for workers who count on tips every day. It does help politically."

Project 2025 head delays book launch till after vote

VP pick Vance wrote foreword; Democrats blast Heritage plans

By Lisa Mascaro
Associated Press

Kevin Roberts took over Project 2025 as part of a leadership shake-up. His new book, "Dawn's Early Light," was due out in September but has been postponed. J. SCOTT APPLEWHITE/AP 2023

WASHINGTON — As Project 2025 hits turmoil, the head of the influential, far-right Heritage Foundation is postponing the release of his potentially fiery new book until after the November presidential election.

Kevin Roberts, who took over Project 2025 as part of a leadership shake-up amid blowback over its recommendations for a potential Donald Trump White House, said Wednesday that he is focused on defeating the Democratic nominee Vice President Kamala Harris. Trump running mate Sen. JD Vance wrote the foreword to Roberts' book.

"There's a time for writing, reading, and book tours — and a time to put down the books and go fight ... to take back our country," said a statement from Roberts, also president of the lobbying arm Heritage Action who has been mentioned as a potential chief of staff in a Trump White House.

"That's why I've chosen to move my book's publication and promotion to after the election," he said.

Orchestrated by Heritage, Project 2025 is an ultra-conservative blueprint for the next Republican White House, with startling proposals that include firing large swaths of the federal government workforce and disassembling or altering long-standing agencies, including the Justice Department.

Trump has said the outside group doesn't speak for his campaign, but many of his most trusted former White House officials are architects of the plan and are preparing for a second Trump administration. Even before Harris emerged to replace President Joe Biden atop the party ticket, Democrats campaigned vigorously against Project 2025, portraying it as a buzzword for GOP extremism.

Roberts' new book, "Dawn's Early Light," was due out next month. It outlines what its publisher calls "a peaceful 'Second American Revolution.'"

The publisher's description says the book identifies institutions that conservatives need to build or to take back, adding that some are "too corrupt to save." Among those it lists are Ivy League colleges, the FBI, the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, the Department of Education, and the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation.

Vance, in the forward, quotes Roberts as saying that when twilight descends and a person hears wolves, "You've got to circle the wagons and load the muskets."

"We are now all realizing that it's time to circle the wagons and load the muskets," Vance adds. "In the fights that lay ahead, these ideas are an essential weapon."

A Vance spokesperson has said the forward has nothing to do with Project 2025 and that the senator has no involvement and "plenty of disagreements with what they're calling for."

The book's delay comes the day after Harris selected Minnesota Gov. Tim Walz as her running mate, invigorating a campaign that has roused Democrats in the weeks since Biden stepped aside. Walz has transformed the political conversation by simply declaring Republicans "weird."

Harris for President spokesperson Sarafina Chitika said, "Trump, Vance and their Project 2025 allies can try and hide the ball from the American people, but voters know where they stand — and that they're trying desperately to drag us backward."

At the same time, House Democrats who launched a Project 2025 task force are asking Roberts to meet with members of Congress as they more deeply probe the proposal.

Rep. Jared Huffman of California and Rep. Ayanna Pressley of Massachusetts said in a letter this week that it's "time to stop hiding the ball on what we are concerned could very well be the most radical, extreme, and dangerous parts of Project 2025."

While the Democrats, as the minority in the House have no authority to compel Roberts to come forward, they are using their perch to raise awareness of the project, and particularly its so-called fourth pillar — a 180-day action plan for the next administration that Project 2025 has drafted but not yet released.

"Allow the American people to see it and scrutinize it," the lawmakers wrote.

Heritage has not said whether Roberts will respond to the House lawmakers' request.

Roberts, in his statement Wednesday, said Democrats are "more radical than ever" with Harris' agenda. He said conservatives are "fully committed to focusing our efforts on helping defeat the left at the ballot box."

Last week, Project 2025 underwent its own shake-up as its director, Paul Dans, exited amid the Trump campaign's efforts to distance itself from the group and its proposals.

Roberts said he was taking over Project 2025 and assured its work would continue.

Tropical Storm Debby churns up East Coast

By Russ Bynum, Jeffrey Collins and John Minchillo

CHARLESTON, S.C. — Tropical Storm Debby pushed bad weather up the East Coast on Wednesday, colliding with other systems and bringing no respite to residents as far away as the Great Lakes and New Jersey, where heavy rain flooded highways and streets and stranded motorists.

Debby has already drenched Southern states for days as it churned slowly across Florida, Georgia and South Carolina.

But on Tuesday evening, the moisture from Debby strengthened another storm system, which caused strong thunderstorms across the Great Lakes and in Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey, according to National Weather Service meteorologist Scott Kleebauer.

"We had a multi-round period of showers and thunderstorms that kind of scooted from Michigan eastward," Kleebauer said.

As much as 6 inches of rain fell in parts of New Jersey in less than four hours.

Emergency officials warned of potential flash flooding, flying drones with loudspeakers in some New York City neighborhoods to tell people in basement apartments to be ready to flee.

Yet still, the most rain from Debby has fallen in the South.

At least six people have died due to the storm, five of them in traffic accidents or from fallen trees.

Debby is forecast to pick up speed Thursday before weakening inland as the weather moves north over North Carolina and Virginia into the Washington, D.C., area by Saturday.

Maryland Gov. Wes Moore signed a state-of-preparedness declaration that coordinates preparations for the storm without declaring a state of emergency.

Alaska preschool beloved but closed

Head Start center aided not only kids, but also parents

WASILLA, Alaska — She was a teenager, and the mother of a 2-year-old, when a knock came on the door of her trailer. Two women were there to tell her about a federally funded preschool program called Head Start that was opening near her home in Chugiak. Would she be interested in enrolling her daughter?

Kristine Bayne signed up. She hoped it would make a difference for her daughter. What Bayne didn't know: It would shift the trajectory of her own life too.

Bayne, who finished high school through correspondence after she got pregnant at 16, would go on to take a job with her child's Head Start. Her confidence buoyed, she returned to school to earn a bachelor's degree.

"I learned so much," says Bayne, now 65. "How to take care of my children, how to advocate for them, how to have a voice for myself. ... They help you move forward to become a better person."

In this part of Alaska, countless parents tell stories like Bayne's. Head Start has helped them earn degrees that put them on track for better jobs. It has helped parents in recovery from drug addiction and educated children who have ended up in foster care. And it has readied youngsters for kindergarten.

Which is why it was so wrenching when CCS Early Learning closed the Chugiak Head Start, where Bayne sent her children. In January, it announced it was shuttering another center — this time in Meadow Lakes, where Bayne's granddaughter Makayla, who is now in her care, was enrolled.

The impending closure is not for lack of need. The nonprofit's Head Start program has a waiting list. It can — and did — fill Meadow Lakes' three classrooms.

The problem is with the grownups.

Specifically, there are not enough of them who want to work at a Head Start. Not when they can make more money working at the nearby Target, which hiked its pay during the pandemic. And not when, with the same credentials, they can get a better-paying job at the local school district.

In 2022, nearly a quarter of Head Start teachers left their jobs, some retiring early and others lured away by higher-paying work in retail or at school districts.

Without those teachers, the preschools cannot serve as many students. It means fewer options for parents who cannot afford child care, and fewer early learning opportunities for children from needy families. Between 2013 and 2022, Head Start enrollment fell by nearly 350,000, according to the Annie E. Casey Foundation, in part because of staff shortages.

In Wasilla, the regional Head Start group decided to raise employee pay to retain staff. To do that, it had to close one center.

"It's just tragic," says Mark Lackey, executive director of CCS Early Learning. "There's so many more kids we could be serving."

Meadow Lakes' Head Start was tucked into a strip mall, sandwiched between a charter school and a laundromat that offered showers. The kids who arrived there were sometimes smiling, sometimes crying, often carrying tiny backpacks.

Their caregivers included teen parents daunted by the responsibility of raising children, and grandparents who had unexpectedly taken in grandchildren.

Head Start was there to help all of them.

Its pioneering, multigenerational approach sought to build healthy environments for the children it served — and that meant supporting the adults in their lives too. Many of the parents who sent their kids to Meadow Lakes attended Head Start themselves.

Kendra Mitchell, whose mother had her at 16, also went to Head Start, and sent her son Wayne to the Meadow Lakes school. He'll head to kindergarten next year, but she said she has seen how it has shaped his life — and hers.

Wayne's childhood has been marked by instability as Mitchell struggled with addiction and sent him to live with relatives. Wayne returned to live with her when she started recovery. When she enrolled him in Head Start, she said the staff embraced her without judgment. She was living in a cabin without running water; they got her a voucher so she could take Wayne to the laundromat for showers and laundry.

"They weren't just lifting our son up. They were lifting us up as well," Mitchell says.

In May, the Meadow Lakes children came and went for the last time. Class started with routines that had become familiar. The children sang a song to learn the days of the week. They talked about the rainy weather, then washed their hands. Every activity was loaded with lessons. As they talked about the calendar — it was May 6 — they practiced saying "sixth." Teacher Lisa Benson-Nuyen also taught them that the last day of school could bring a mix of emotions.

"For some people, that's a happy face. For other people ... that's a sad face," Benson-Nuyen said.

At breakfast, the children learned blueberries do not belong in their ears.

That last week, there were small signs things were coming to a close. The classroom walls, still brightly decorated, were no longer draped with student art. On the final day, staff tried to keep things cheerful and celebratory, even as they struggled to maintain composure.

On the playground that day, some students released butterflies they had been watching for weeks in class as they emerged from cocoons. They flew away in the crisp spring air.

NEWS BRIEFING

Swift's Vienna concerts canceled over fears of planned attack in area

From news services

VIENNA — Organizers of three Taylor Swift concerts in Vienna this week called them off Wednesday after officials announced arrests over an apparent plot to launch an attack on an event in the Vienna area, such as the concerts.

Swift was scheduled to play Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the Austrian capital's Ernst Happel Stadium as part of her Eras Tour.

Event organizer Barracuda Music said in a post on its Instagram channel late Wednesday that "we have no choice but to cancel the three scheduled shows for everyone's safety."

Earlier Wednesday, authorities said they had arrested two suspected extremists. The 19-year-old main suspect was arrested in Ternitz, south of Vienna, and the second person in the Austrian capital.

Franz Ruf, public security director at Austria's interior ministry, said authorities were aware of "preparatory actions" for a possible attack "and also that there is a focus by the 19-year-old perpetrator on the Taylor Swift concerts in Vienna," the Austria Press Agency reported.

Ruf said the 19-year-old man, an Austrian citizen, had pledged an oath of allegiance to the Islamic State group. He is believed to have become radicalized on the internet. Ruf said chemical substances were secured and were being evaluated.

Barracuda Music said that "all tickets will be automatically refunded within the next 10 business days."

The same wording was posted under the Vienna dates on Swift's official website.

The Vienna stadium had been sold out for the planned concerts, APA reported, with an estimated 170,000 fans expected for the concerts in Austria.

In 2017, an attack at an Ariana Grande concert in Manchester, England, killed 22 people.

Titan sub lawsuit: The family of a French explorer who died in a submersible implosion has filed a more than $50 million lawsuit, saying the crew experienced "terror and mental anguish" before the disaster and accusing the sub's operator of gross negligence.

Paul-Henri Nargeolet was among five people who died when the Titan submersible imploded during a voyage to the famed Titanic wreck site in the North Atlantic in June 2023. No one survived the trip aboard the experimental submersible owned by OceanGate, a company in Washington state that has since suspended operations.

Attorneys for his estate said in an emailed statement that the "doomed submersible" had a "troubled history" and that OceanGate failed to disclose key facts about the vessel and its durability.

A spokesperson for OceanGate declined to comment on the lawsuit, which was filed Tuesday in King County, Washington.

The Titan made its last dive June 18, 2023, and lost contact with its support vessel about two hours later. After a search and rescue mission that drew attention around the world, the wreckage of the Titan was found on the ocean floor about 985 feet off the bow of the Titanic, about 435 miles south of St. John's, Newfoundland.

OceanGate CEO and cofounder Stockton Rush was operating the Titan when it imploded. In addition to Rush and Nargeolet, the implosion killed British adventurer Hamish Harding and two members of a prominent Pakistani family, Shahzada Dawood and son Suleman Dawood.

Great Barrier Reef: Ocean temperatures in the Great Barrier Reef hit their highest level in 400 years over the past decade, according to researchers who warned that the reef likely won't survive if planetary warming isn't stopped.

During that time, between 2016 and 2024, the Great Barrier Reef, the world's largest coral reef ecosystem and one of the most biodiverse, suffered mass coral bleaching events. That's when water temperatures get too hot and coral expel the algae that provide them with color and food, and sometimes die.

Earlier this year, aerial surveys of over 300 reefs in the system off Australia's northeast coast found bleaching in shallow water areas spanning two-thirds of the reef, according to Great Barrier Reef Marine Park Authority.

Gitmo 9/11 hearings: Military-run hearings for Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, accused of being the Sept. 11 mastermind, and two co-defendants at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, were in upheaval Wednesday following Defense Secretary Lloyd Austin's decision to throw out a plea agreement.

Defense attorneys contend the plea deal still stands and suspended participation in the pre-trial hearings while challenges to Austin's action play out. Prosecutors also raised the prospect that the pre-trial hearings might have to be frozen as lawyers look for explanations in Austin's order and work through the issues raised by it.

The judge overseeing the case, Air Force Col. Matthew McCall, acknowledged concerns over outside pressure on the case. The plea agreement, which would have spared the defendants the risk of the death penalty, and Austin's subsequent order, issued late Friday, have generated strong feelings, including among the families of Sept. 11 victims.

Under the plea agreement, Mohammed, Mustafa al-Hawsawi and fellow defendant Walid bin Attash would have entered guilty pleas in exchange for the government not seeking the death penalty against them.

Assassination plot: A Pakistani man alleged to have ties to Iran has been charged in a plot to carry out political assassinations on U.S. soil, including potentially of former President Donald Trump.

The Justice Department disclosed the case Tuesday.

The suspect, Asif Merchant, traveled to New York in June for the purpose of meeting with men he thought he was recruiting to carry out the killings, paying a $5,000 advance to two would-be assassins who were undercover law enforcement officers, federal officials said.

He was arrested in July as he prepared to leave the United States, after having told the men that he would provide further instructions, including the names of the intended targets, after he returned to Pakistan.

'Squad' member out: St. Louis County Prosecuting Attorney Wesley Bell has defeated U.S. Rep. Cori Bush in a Democratic primary Tuesday in St. Louis, marking the second time this year that one of the party's incumbents has been ousted in a contest that reflected deep divisions over the war in Gaza.

Bush, a member of the progressive congressional group known as the "Squad," was seeking a third term in Missouri's 1st Congressional District, which includes St. Louis and part of St. Louis County. Bell is heavily favored to carry the overwhelmingly Democratic district in November.

In June, another Squad member, Rep. Jamaal Bowman, lost to George Latimer in New York. Pro-Israel super PACs helped Bell and Latimer.

Release betrayal to Russian in swap

Dissident preferred to stay jailed to keep pressure on Putin

COLOGNE, Germany — Escaping the brutal Russian penal system would seem like blessed deliverance to most inmates. But not to Ilya Yashin, who stunned the world last week when he angrily condemned his inclusion in a sweeping prisoner swap that freed him and a handful of other opposition figures in Russia.

Instead, he portrayed it as an act of duplicity rather than a benevolent humanitarian gesture.

"What happened on Aug. 1, I don't view as a prisoner swap," he said Friday at a news conference in Bonn, Germany, seemingly blinking back tears, "but as my illegal expulsion from Russia against my will. And I say sincerely, more than anything I want now to go back home."

To those who have followed Yashin's career, his stance should not have been so surprising. He has spent the past two decades in Russia working against Vladimir Putin's authoritarian rule, knowing that doing so would land him in jail and even preparing for it.

In an interview Saturday night 48 hours after his release, Yashin said the fact that Russia was willing to free him confirmed "that I was actually a problem for them behind bars."

Since his detention in June 2022, Yashin, 41, had managed to publish essays, letters and statements against Putin and his invasion of Ukraine.

He was willing to serve his 8 ½-year sentence and had communicated clearly and repeatedly that he did not want to be included in any prisoner exchange. Others who were older or more infirm deserved priority, he said. He did not see his exchange as a concession by the Kremlin, but rather an attempt to deprive him of his moral authority.

"I was well-aware that while in Russia, even behind bars — especially behind bars — I could tell the truth and the weight of my words would be quite high," he said in the interview, a few hours after buying new clothes, sneakers and a simple black watch. "Because when I stay in Russia and take those risks, I'm actually responsible for my words. People hear you much better when you're there. And the fact that I was expelled from Russia proves that I was right."

At Friday's news conference, he said, "More than anything, I want to return home." But he said he was told by the Russian security service representative who was accompanying him that if he did so, he would meet the same fate as Alexei Navalny, the late opposition leader. Navalny returned to Russia in 2021 after being poisoned, was immediately arrested and died this year in an Arctic penal colony.

Yashin said he was also told that returning to Russia would render the exchange of other political prisoners impossible.

Now that Yashin has traded his black prison uniform for civilian clothes, it remains to be seen whether he can make a much harder transition: preaching his anti-Kremlin message to Russians from the relatively comfortable position of freedom in the West.

"Time will tell whether I will be able to remain a problem for them abroad," he continued. "I don't really understand how to be a Russian politician in exile. I don't know how to do it, but I'll try to learn it and try to be effective here too."

For several decades, as Putin eroded political freedom in Russia — a crackdown that intensified after the full-scale invasion of Ukraine in February 2022 — many Russian dissidents went into exile. Yashin instead went to the dentist; he was sure he would eventually be arrested for speaking his mind, and he wanted his teeth to be in decent shape in jail, where dental care is notoriously lacking.

As authorities effectively criminalized protest and made it illegal to even call the invasion a war, Yashin, who was serving as a municipal deputy in Moscow, used every opportunity to condemn it.

He knew, he said, that if he wanted to encourage Russians to stand up to Putin, he would have to lead by example, even if it meant going to prison.

In April 2022, as Russia's military withdrew from the suburbs around Kyiv, Ukraine's capital, Yashin appeared on his YouTube channel to condemn the brutal treatment of civilians in Bucha and the emerging accusations of war crimes done by the Russian army. Several months later, Yashin was arrested and charged with "discrediting" the Russian armed forces.

"I acted not only for reasons of my own conscience, but also for pragmatic reasons and politics," he said in the interview. "I wanted to be heard by Russian society, and I understood that I had to be behind bars to do this."

Many Ukrainians expressed anger after Friday's news conference, at which Yashin appeared with two other opposition figures who had been traded, Vladimir Kara-Murza and Andrei Pivovarov. These critics of the dissidents believe Russian citizens bear collective guilt, and were distressed by their assertions that the majority of Russians do not support the war, and that Western sanctions should target the elite that supports Putin, rather than society as a whole.

One of the main pillars of his actions in exile, Yashin said, would be "anti-war education for Russian citizens."

"The key task of the free world and the Western world now is to save Ukraine," he said, underscoring that this was his central message to Chancellor Olaf Scholz of Germany, who greeted the freed prisoners upon their exchange. "Because the front between the good and evil of freedom and tyranny, bigotry and progress, runs through Ukraine. If Putin is allowed to devour Ukraine, he will keep going."

His other key focus, he said, would be advocacy for political prisoners remaining in Russia. The rights group OVD-Info has counted 2,702 people who are being "politically persecuted right now" in Russia, almost 1,300 of whom are in prison or pretrial detention. Ten have died in custody, including a pianist last week who had gone on a hunger strike in a penal colony.

The pianist, Pavel Kushner, was charged with "inciting terrorism" because he posted anti-government videos on his YouTube channel. The channel had five subscribers.

Yashin has a much broader audience, and 1.6 million subscribers on YouTube. He addressed them on Sunday, starting his first stream since he was freed by talking about Kushner's death, and advocating that a wide-ranging amnesty for political prisoners be included in any peace deal with Ukraine.

For now, he is adjusting to his new life, one he said he never imagined.

"I need to understand how to exercise this freedom," he said. "I've never lived in exile. I didn't want to live abroad. I never thought about it."

Choice of new Hamas leader darkens cease-fire deal hopes

By Matthew Mpoke Bigg
The New York Times

Hamas' decision to name Yahya Sinwar, its hard-line leader in the Gaza Strip and a key planner of the Oct. 7 attacks, to head its political wing could complicate prospects for a cease-fire deal by further empowering him in the troubled negotiations, political analysts said Wednesday.

It could also make Hamas more impervious to pressure from nations like Qatar that have helped mediate the talks, given that Sinwar, unlike other leaders of the group, has remained in Gaza since the war started 10 months ago, the analysts said.

Israel and Hamas have for months been negotiating a cease-fire deal that would involve the release of hostages taken to Gaza on Oct. 7. The deal would also involve the release of Palestinian prisoners held in Israeli detention and an increase in the amount of aid to the enclave, and in a later phase is intended to lead to an end to the war.

U.S. and Israeli officials have accused Hamas of intransigence over the deal, and they say Sinwar has always had the power to veto any proposal, given his leadership of the group in Gaza. U.S. Secretary of State Antony Blinken said the announcement Tuesday would reinforce that role.

The choice of Sinwar "only underscores the fact that it is really on him to decide whether to move forward with a cease-fire," Blinken said at a news conference in Annapolis, Maryland, late Tuesday, shortly after the appointment was announced.

At the same time, Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu of Israel has taken a hard line, saying last week that he wanted to put more military pressure on Hamas to squeeze more concessions from the group. Families of hostages taken to Gaza on Oct. 7 have accused Netanyahu of doing too little to secure their release.

Around 115 of the people seized as hostages Oct. 7 remain in Gaza. That number includes the bodies of those who have died or been killed in captivity.

Hamas named Sinwar to replace Ismail Haniyeh, the group's previous political leader and a key liaison in the indirect cease-fire talks with Israel. Haniyeh, who had been living in Qatar, was killed in an explosion in Iran last week that has been widely attributed to Israel.

Sinwar is a major target of Israel's military, which has vowed to eliminate him. He has made no public appearances since the start of the war and communicates through intermediaries.

In effect, the naming of Sinwar to the position amounts to a new phase in the cease-fire talks because it binds Hamas to the leader most identified with the war, one who has previously adopted an inflexible approach, according to Mkhaimar Abusada, a professor of political science from Gaza City now based in Cairo.

He said Sinwar was also more closely aligned with Iran than others in the group's top leadership. Iran backs Hamas and has threatened retaliation for the assassination of Haniyeh.

"He isn't going to make any more concessions. He knows more than anyone else that the hostages are the only card he has," Abusada said.

WAR IN UKRAINE

Ukraine unit rolls into Russia in surprise attack, officials say

KYIV, Ukraine — Ukraine has launched a surprise ground assault into Russia with troops and armored vehicles, Russian officials and independent military analysts said Wednesday, in what could be one of the largest Ukrainian incursions onto Russian soil in more than two years of war.

The assault, which began Tuesday in the Kursk region of western Russia, has resulted in heavy fighting, according to images from the battlefield verified by independent military analysts and Russian statements.

Videos verified by The New York Times showed armored vehicles being struck several miles inside Russia, and Moscow said it had rushed troops and fighter jets to respond.

Gen. Valery Gerasimov, commander of Russian forces fighting in Ukraine, said the advance of Ukrainian troops had been halted Wednesday evening, while pro-Kremlin military bloggers said Ukrainian forces had captured several settlements near the border.

"Alarming news is coming from the Kursk region for the second day," Igor Artamonov, the governor of the Russian region of Lipetsk, which borders the Kursk region, said Wednesday. "The Kyiv regime is attacking our borders."

By Wednesday evening, Ukrainian troops appeared to have advanced several miles into Russian territory, one analyst said, and Russian officials said the fighting was continuing.

The various reports could not be independently verified, and Ukrainian authorities have not commented on the assault.

This is not the first time that Ukraine has staged ground attacks across the border into Russia.

But while previous assaults were carried out by armed groups of Russian exiles backed by Ukraine's army, the attack Tuesday appeared to have directly involved Ukrainian troops, according to Pasi Paroinen of the Black Bird Group, which analyzes footage from the battlefield.

Paroinen said a few hundred Ukrainian troops, supported by armored vehicles, had most likely crossed the border on the first day of the attack, and that more soldiers had arrived on the second day.

Gerasimov said that up to 1,000 Ukrainian troops took part in the cross-border attack, a figure that could not be confirmed.

Military analysts said the attack could be an attempt to divert Russian units from the front lines, thus relieving the pressure on Ukrainian troops struggling to contain Russian advances. But they added that the Russian army had ample reserves of troops to commit to the fight and that the attack risked further stretching Ukraine's already outnumbered forces.

"Operationally and strategically, this attack makes absolutely zero sense," Paroinen said. "This seems like a gross waste of men and resources badly needed elsewhere."

Russia's Defense Ministry said the attack started around 8 a.m. Tuesday with Ukraine's 22nd Mechanized Brigade attacking border units in the Kursk region, backed by some 30 tanks and armored fighting vehicles.

Paroinen reported "multiple sightings" of Stryker armored fighting vehicles, which the United States sent to Ukraine last year.

Russian President Vladimir Putin met with his top defense and security officials to discuss what he called the "indiscriminate shelling of civilian buildings, residential houses, ambulances with different types of weapons."

He instructed the Cabinet to coordinate assistance to the Kursk region.

The fighting is about 320 miles from Moscow.

Gerasimov told Putin at the meeting via video link that about 100 Ukrainian soldiers had been killed in the battle and more than 200 wounded, Russian news agencies reported.

Alexei Smirnov, the acting governor of the Kursk region, said thousands of residents had evacuated the area.

Associated Press contributed.

Lee McColgan's career in finance was probably doomed as soon as he started visiting historic house museums. The first one he toured was the Fairbanks House, in Dedham, Massachusetts, the oldest surviving timber-frame home in America, built in 1637.

It was 2014, and McColgan was living in Omaha, Nebraska, where he worked as a sales representative for a large investment company. Despite a rural childhood in Vermont and an interest in visual arts and building, he had spent much of his adulthood working in a cubicle: five years of "jacking in" at a call center outside Boston, followed by several more as a Midwestern "external wholesaler" pitching mutual funds to financial advisers.

In quiet desperation, McColgan took up woodworking as a creative outlet, building an oak chest in his garage. That

Understanding scale in decorating

By Cathy Hobbs
Tribune News Service

Whether your ceilings are low or high, your space is small or spacious, it is important to select and choose furniture that is the appropriate size and scale.

When it comes to furnishing a space, so often one is focused on style and color. But other important aspects needed for a successful space such as size and scale should also play a role.

Why are size and scale important? Often, furniture is selected for aesthetic reasons as opposed to considering the critical aspect of how the furniture will "feel" in the space.

In spaces that are cavernous, oversized pieces will likely be successful as large selections are essentially needed to help "fill" the room. In general, choose pieces that are heavier in nature to help add weight to the room. Selections such as wood and upholstered furniture will be more inviting than transparent surfaces like glass.

Conversely, if you have a small space, you will need to add a sense of spaciousness. You will not want the space to feel closed in. Look for furniture that is smaller in scale so that the space doesn't feel overstuffed.

When looking to select furniture of the appropriate size and scale, here are some tips.

Select furniture that is low in profile if you have low ceilings. Tall pieces will make the ceilings feel even lower.

Select the proper number of items for your space. Often buying the "set" is not successful; for many people it is simply too much furniture.

Select furniture and accessories that are timeless as opposed to trendy.

Use a cohesive color scheme. Tying pieces together using color can help a space feel cohesive as opposed to disjointed.

Use light colors versus darker tones in small spaces as lighter colors open a space.

Rooms can be unsuccessful if they are overstuffed. COURTESY

Brunson sets sights on comedy film

From news services

After lighting up the silver screen, "Abbott Elementary" creator and Emmy winner Quinta Brunson is looking to make a splash on the big screen. The entertainer has signed on to star in a new Universal Pictures comedy with actor Stephanie Hsu.

Hsu and Brunson are on board for a feature titled "Par for the Course," which Brunson will also produce and co-write with "Abbott Elementary" director Justin Tan. This will be Tan's feature film debut as a director.

In a statement about the project, Brunson said she's "thrilled" to work with Tan, a "long-term comedy partner and collaborator," and Hsu ("Everything Everywhere All at Once"). "I can't wait to see what we can do together on screen."

While the plot for the feature film is still under wraps, the film is based on an "original idea from Brunson," according to Deadline.

"This is a comedy close to my heart, and who better to do it with than some of the best producers in the game," Brunson said.

K-pop star Suga fined: Suga, a member of K-pop sensation BTS, apologized Wednesday for driving an electric vehicle while intoxicated.

His label, Big Hit Music, said Min Yoon-gi, famously known as Suga, was driving an "electric kickboard" Tuesday night when he fell while parking it. A police officer spotted him and administered a breathalyzer test which Suga failed, leading to his license being revoked and a fine, the label added.

An electric kickboard refers to a type of vehicle without a seat. However, police said Suga's vehicle had a seat and resembled an electric scooter under traffic law. Yongsan Police Station in Seoul reportedly booked him for violating the Road Traffic Act.

The K-pop star issued an apology on Weverse, an online fan platform, saying he was driving after consuming alcohol at dinner.

"I come to you with a very heavy heart and deep apologies for disappointing you with this regrettable incident," Suga wrote on Weverse. "I thought complacently that it was a short distance, not realizing I was not allowed to ride the electric scooter while intoxicated, breaking the road traffic act."

Cyrus divorce finalized: Billy Ray Cyrus and Firerose are now divorced. The dissolution of their seven-month marriage was finalized Monday by a Williamson County judge in Tennessee three months after Cyrus filed.

Cyrus, 62, cited irreconcilable differences and "inappropriate marital conduct" when he filed for divorce from the 36-year-old, whose legal name is Johanna Rose Hodges.

In a statement, Cyrus' lawyers, Rose Palermo and Jason Talley said he and Hodges reached a settlement Friday.

"I'm just very relieved ... and giving thanks today to breathe a sigh of relief," Cyrus said in a statement. "It's unfortunate ... it played out this way." "It was a matter of the heart. Love is blind ... that's for sure. B.R.C."

Well-off friend fears offering financial help will hurt pride

R. Eric Thomas
Asking Eric

Dear Eric: I grew up in a degree of poverty. Most of my friends have done OK financially.

All of us but one is now retired, and she is hoping to retire soon at 73. She's continued to work as she's worried about not having sufficient funds during retirement. The other two have to pinch pennies, and many decisions are made based upon cost.

I made different choices than the others and have been fortunate financially. As a result, I'm significantly better off than the others and have excess income and assets.

I'd like to make their lives easier by helping them out financially. Even $10,000 would allow the still-working one to pay off her car loan and thereby retire with a higher level of security and allow another to reduce her mortgage.

I've been trying to figure out a way to help them without offending their pride and making them feel the financial chasm between us. I've been unable to come up with a winning method. Do you have suggestions?

— Wanting to Be Generous

Dear Generous: First of all, would you like to be my friend, as well? My pride can certainly withstand a $10,000 gift.

Your friends' pride can, too. They've already shared enough of their financial realities with you that you're aware of some of the worries and needs. They see you as someone safe and trustworthy.

And they already know that you are in a more secure financial position. Speaking to the reality of the financial chasm isn't going to make it any more real.

Ask them directly. "I would like to pay off your car loan; would you allow me to do that?" Or "Is there an amount of money that would make your life easier? I don't want to offend you, but I want to show you love as a friend."

Often, we avoid discussing money with friends out of politeness or pride. But the truths of our financial situations impact every part of our friendships, from what we can do socially to how safe we feel in the world. Acknowledging reality and possibility with your friends may be awkward, but it can make everything else easier.

Dear Eric: My daughter recently gave birth in California to her second child one month earlier than expected. We have a good relationship and get along very well.

She notified me via text that she was in labor and on the way to the hospital. In that same text, she informed me that her mother-in-law was flying out to California that same day from New York.

I also live in New York and was not asked if I could come out the day she went into labor. I am guessing that my son-in-law contacted his mother first.

My husband and I had previously made plans to go to California two weeks before my daughter's due date, per her request. We never expected the baby to come a month early.

I am hurt that the mother-in-law was notified instead of me.

I have not asked my daughter about this because I do not want to upset her since she is overly emotional right now with possible postpartum depression. My immediate family thinks I am being overly sensitive.

— Slighted Mother

Dear Mother: You're talking about a matter of minutes between texts, if that. I feel like I'm staring at a conspiracy board covered in screenshots of text messages and flight maps. But what I don't see — respectfully — is a slight.

Here's my theory: Your daughter went into labor unexpectedly; this is surprising, scary even. Her husband texted his mother. Maybe he's dashing down the hall for the go bag while he does it. Maybe there's chaos. Meanwhile, your daughter is trying to do a lot of things at once, including texting you and being in labor.

His mother wrote back that she was going to come. Your daughter gave you this information so that you wouldn't feel slighted or surprised to find out that — hours later — the mother-in-law was taxiing up to the gate.

You were capable of booking a same-day flight at that time. It's fine that you didn't, but stop placing blame on your daughter.

Let go of the hurt you've been nursing. Your daughter needs you. She has two children and is experiencing postpartum depression. This is not the moment to be caught up in one-upmanship with an in-law.

You'll regret it if your feelings about these texts get in the way of offering her love, support and understanding as she navigates this emotionally complicated time.

New bathroom tile can quickly improve the luxury of your home. DREAMSTIME

HOME REMEDIES

Elevate your home's luxury

By Angie Hicks
Ask Angi

An elevated, put-together home is all in the details. When it comes to making your house feel more luxurious, it's really about small, intentional decisions. Here are some of my favorite tips to elevate your home.

Crown molding

Wall paneling, wainscotting or even crown molding can add intricate details to your home. These decorations help frame your living space, create a unique flair, and draw a distinct line between walls and ceilings. Most crown molding is made from wood or plaster, but polyurethane, medium-density fiberboard and PVC offer other options. When done well, this can really enhance the look of your home. I would encourage you to hire a pro to do the job right.

Upgrade your cabinets

If you're looking for an easy swap, consider installing new hardware. Changing out the hardware on your cabinets and drawers is the quickest way to give your home an upgraded look. If you're ready to spend more money but not to replace everything, you can reface your cabinets for a fraction of the cost of replacing them. Refacing can make your cabinets look brand-new.

Improve window treatments

Adding curtains or drapes is a great way to elevate your house. Just make sure you're choosing curtains that are the right size and texture for the space. If you really want to spruce up your place, consider hiring an interior designer to walk you through various options.

Hire an organizer

You might be a bit surprised to see this on a luxury list, but an organizer's skills go beyond just figuring out where to put your stuff. A good organizer adds a natural flow to your home that subtly guides you from one element to another in the right order. Sometimes, things in your home that might otherwise be placed in storage can make exciting wall displays that double as storage.

Add some greenery

Depending on the approach you're going for with your home, a few plants can really improve a space. The pots and stands you use provide another opportunity to vary heights and designs to add variety and a splash of color to the area.

Play around with extra areas

You might give a lot of thought to the design in your kitchen, living room and bedrooms, but don't overlook the smaller areas that don't often get the spotlight, such as laundry rooms and mudrooms. They're a great place to use playful patterns and colors and spread your wings a bit. Wallpaper, stick-on tiles and shelving can add flair to these often-bland spaces.

Update your bathroom

Bathroom renovations are among the more expensive home projects, but they can pay off greatly with improved aesthetics, utility and potential buyer appeal. Whether you're constructing a wet room that adds an open look or installing a soaking tub, consider talking to a bathroom designer about the options available.

Restoration

experience, and the visits he made to historic houses whenever he was back in New England, inspired him to reassess his life and envision a different future, working with his hands.

He especially appreciated the solidity of early Colonial-era building: the big, hefty beams that can last hundreds of years, so long as bugs and moisture don't get them; the dry-stone foundations that won't weaken as long as the roof is kept in good repair. He was obsessed with quality and hated "cheap stuff."

In 2017, McColgan finally quit his finance job and began a fledgling new career as a contractor specializing in the preservation of historic homes and buildings. To teach himself the trade, he did something impractical and possibly ill advised: He bought a very old New England Colonial in rough shape and set out to restore it using period techniques.

Not only that, but McColgan and his wife, Elizabeth Bailey, decided to live in the house while it was a work zone and laboratory.

"No kids and a supportive spouse," McColgan, 43, said recently, explaining how he was able to embark on such a quixotic pursuit.

He was sitting in a high-backed armchair in the front hall of the antique home he bought and restored: the Loring House, built in 1702 for Thomas Loring III, in the town of Pembroke, Massachusetts. Dressed in jeans, a tight black T-shirt and sneakers, he looked incongruously modern in the early American interior, with its low ceilings, brick hearth and spartan Colonial-style furniture. The house had a shadowy coolness typical of homes of the period — premodern air-conditioning.

As prospective buyers, McColgan and Bailey, 37, a director of development at the Archaeological Institute of America, had toured the Loring House "with childlike wonder," he writes in his book, "A House Restored: The Tragedies and Triumphs of Saving a New England Colonial," marveling at the unexpected elegance of the fluted, carved pilasters on the front doorway and the hidden closets and secret rooms. They imagined themselves stabling horses on the 13-acre property that sits along a country road dotted with farms.

The couple bought the house for $550,000, from a woman in her 90s. They weren't blind to its issues, including a sagging roofline, but McColgan thought, "Light cosmetic work. Nothing more."

That changed quickly once they moved in and he got to work.

In the book, McColgan describes floorboards that "pitched and rolled, tossing me around as though a ship in rough seas." An exaggeration for dramatic effect, one assumed, until he got up and led the way into the dining room. There, the wide pine floors sloped. An antique oak dining table straddled the gulf in the middle.

In the kitchen, McColgan encountered a bigger problem. "I tear this wall panel off, and a section of the frame is just dust," he recalled, describing how one corner of the timber frame had completely rotted. "This is Week 1. I thought, 'How is this standing?' "

Elsewhere, he discovered a punctured foundation, frozen pipes, deteriorating bricks in the seven fireplaces and shattered windows.

"I realized I can't do this on my own," he said.

So he reached out to local experts in the niche world of historic preservation, including Michael Burrey, who teaches preservation carpentry and owns a restoration business. For one summer, McColgan served as Burrey's apprentice.

In his quest to learn how to work with the basic materials of the early 18th century — wood, lime, iron, stone, glass and brick — McColgan tagged along with a plasterer on Nantucket and took a dry-stone walling course in West Rutland, Vermont.

McColgan also hired himself out as a laborer to a man who specialized in refurbishing windows. Through that job, he got to work on Louisa May Alcott's Orchard House, in Concord, Massachusetts, and Old North Church in Boston, two landmarks of early 18th-century architecture.

Slowly, McColgan gained a footing in his new career — and under his own roof. He started a business, Helve Historic Trades, and now primarily works on historic museum properties. (One recent job was restoring the woodwork on the cupola of the Mayflower Society House, in Plymouth, Massachusetts.) And he continued to bring the skills he learned on job sites back home.

There is a divergence of opinion in the world of old houses, a conflict between preservationists who are sticklers for historical accuracy and those who prefer a certain level of modern comfort. McColgan sought to preserve the historic details, leaving them largely untouched, while doing repairs necessary to make the structure sound and livable.

Thus, the floors still pitch and roll in many rooms, and the wall paint with its gloomy shades of gray and mustard yellow is positively ancient. But he replaced the rotted kitchen beam with a new "in kind" piece and shored up a 2-foot-long fracture running through the brick fireplace in the living room.

The plumbing and heating had been updated in recent years, so McColgan did no modern construction, which is how he prefers it. "I want to be doing the framing and the brickwork and the blacksmithing," he said. "That's the stuff I'm interested in."

Heat waves leaving impact on gardens

Take these steps to alleviate abuse from weather conditions

By Jessica Damiano
Associated Press

A nearly 6-foot-tall tomato plant grows in Jessica Damiano's garden July 9 on Long Island, N.Y. JESSICA DAMIANO/AP PHOTOS

A zucchini plant, left, encroaches on a deck, an earwig attaches to a nasturtium flower, center, and a hydrangea plant blooms.

With much of the U.S. sweltering through heat waves, gardeners are seeing some dramatic changes.

I've noticed them in my suburban New York garden, where the temperature recently was exceeding 90 degrees Fahrenheit, with a "feels like" rating of nearly 10 degrees hotter, thanks to humidity. It started in June this year, and we don't usually experience such heat waves so early in the season.

Weather, of course, is one of the primary determinants of gardening success. And as luck would have it, it's completely out of our control.

But, although there isn't anything we can do about the amount of sunlight that beats down on our plants or how many inches of rainfall (or lack thereof) they drink, there are some steps gardeners can take to alleviate the abuse when the elements are at their harshest.

A thick layer of mulch spread over roots, for instance, will help keep them cool and retain precious soil moisture. When watering, provide fewer good, deep soaks rather than daily sprinkles. If the sun is unrelenting, I'm not above balancing an open rain umbrella on the ground to protect tender plants.

Good news first ...

Many heat-loving plants are thriving right now. My Big Boy tomato vines have never been taller at this point in the season, and the zucchini is already threatening to overtake the back deck.

Cabbage, onion and corn maggots, which prefer cool temperatures, struggle in extreme heat, as do cutworms, so the hope is that susceptible plants will have banner years, as well.

Many of my perennials started blooming two weeks earlier than usual. I'm planning to plant a few extra late-season bloomers as insurance, should they call it quits sooner than expected.

And my hydrangeas have never been lovelier. Each of my 12 plants of different species is absolutely bursting with blooms, and many other gardeners in my region are reporting the same. That's not as much due to the current temperature as it is a nod to last year's weather: Abundant late-summer and fall rain bolstered plump bud formation, and our unusually mild winter ensured that most, if not all, of those buds (and the stems that hold them) survived.

But on the darker side ...

Some of my impatiens plants are languishing, despite the protection their partly shady corner of the garden provides.

Mosquitoes, which are typically more active at sunrise and sunset, have been feasting at the Jessica Buffet under the noonday sun.

Although heat theoretically slows the ankle biters' activity, their metabolic and food requirements increase as the mercury rises. And as just another animal in the food chain, my role has become painfully clear.

Ticks can be more problematic after a mild winter and also thrive in heat and humidity, so many areas are experiencing a parasitic double whammy this summer.

In addition, ticks previously had been found primarily in the eastern half of the country and along the Pacific coast. Now, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency reports that "climate change has contributed to the expanded range of ticks, increasing the potential risk of Lyme disease, such as in areas of Canada where the ticks were previously unable to survive." Protect yourself.

Earwigs, which revel in heat and humidity, are living their best lives right now, and many of my plants have the holes in their leaves to prove it.

The good news is the so-called "pincher bugs" devour aphids, which are also out in higher-than-usual numbers. Thrips and spider mites thrive and multiply best in this heat, too.

And the slugs! We can thank above-average spring rainfall for them.

If your plants are under attack, there's no need to reach for synthetic pesticides. A shot of soapy water, sprayed directly on soft-bodied insects like aphids, spider mites, thrips and whiteflies, serves as an excellent control method.

Slugs can be lured to a drowning death by sinking beer-filled tuna cans into the soil around affected plants. The same treatment works against earwigs, if warranted, when the beer is replaced with fish oil, bacon grease or equal parts of olive oil and soy sauce.

As for mosquitoes, eliminating standing water and adding Bti granules to bird baths and fish ponds to prevent mosquito eggs from hatching is the best defense. Running a fan outdoors will shoo them and other flying insects away, reducing or even eliminating blood donations from the patio.

The weather might be making for a buggy summer, but my glass is half full: I'm focusing on my hydrangeas.

GARDEN Q&A

Don't let yellow jackets be a buzzkill in your yard

By Tim Johnson
For the Chicago Tribune

Q: I had problems with yellow jackets in my backyard last year, which made eating outside challenging at times. Is there something I can do to prevent problems again this year? I have a large garden with many different plants.

— Reese Pollack, Oak Park

RJ CARLSON/CHICAGO BOTANIC GARDEN

A: It certainly is annoying to battle yellow jackets as you are eating. Even keeping them out of open soda cans can make outdoor dining tricky. Populations of yellow jackets build up in summer. These yellow-bodied social wasps are considered beneficial insects that pollinate flowers and prey on grubs and beetles. They prefer sugary foods and nectar from flowers, but will eat meat, garbage, and picnic food that's left outside. The yellow jackets' wide diet attracts them to urban areas because a lot of what we eat and throw away is food to them. They are particularly attracted to sweet things like soda and dessert. They may crawl into your soda can in between sips if you do not pay attention. Yellow jackets will continue to return to a site once they find a good source of food, so the best way to reduce this pest problem is through good sanitation to attract fewer to your dining area. Be sure to thoroughly clean up food and drink residue when you are finished eating and dispose of it in a covered trash can. There are traps that you can buy for yellow jackets, but since they use a pheromone to attract the insects, you may end up drawing even more of them to your eating area rather than controlling them. You will get the best results by keeping the area clean.

I have not yet seen many yellow jackets in home gardens, but it is getting to be the time of year to watch more carefully for yellow jacket nests in the garden. The first hard frost will kill most of the yellow jackets. Queens do not use the same nest in the following year but may use a site close by if it is favorable. Yellow jackets are especially active on warm sunny days in late summer and fall. The best way to spot them is as they fly in and out of the nest. Yellow jackets tend to nest in more secluded places like brush piles, ground cover beds, rotted logs, cracks or holes in the ground or pavement, under steps or porches on a house, in house walls and foundations and at the base of trees and shrubs. Just because they are present during your meals does not necessarily mean there is a nest in your garden. They will aggressively sting if you happen to disturb their nest with typical gardening tasks such as planting, pruning, raking or weeding. Vibrations of a mower adjacent to or over a nest or the impact of a wayward basketball can also disturb them enough to swarm and attack a person close by. Their stingers are smooth, which means they can sting more than once, and the stings are painful. There is no need to treat a nest though unless it happens to be in an area that poses a hazard to pets or people. Simply avoid the nest as you work in the garden. I currently have a nest located under an evergreen next to the front steps of my house. I plan to leave it alone as it can easily be avoided. Walking by this nest to the front door does not pose a problem.

Bald-faced hornets construct large paper nests in trees at head height and above, so you should also watch out for them as you are working in the garden. Garden staff found the first one last week at head level. You will be most likely to disturb them by pruning a tree or bumping into a nest with a piece of equipment. Bald-faced hornets are black and white wasps and are aggressive if disturbed. Bald-faced hornet nests that are high up in trees pose very little danger. Paper wasps build nests under eaves, signs, benches and fence railings and will sting if disturbed. These are beneficial insects, so control them only if they pose a safety hazard. Unfortunately, the response of most people is to destroy any nest that is discovered.

If you find a nest that poses a danger to your family, use an aerosol insecticide formulated for wasps and bees to thoroughly soak the nest. Spray the nests from a distance to reduce the chance of being stung. It is best to treat the nest at dusk or early in the morning when there are more wasps in the nest and they are less active. Stay away from the area for a day or so as the treatment will agitate them. Check the nest the next day and treat it again if necessary. Whenever possible, I avoid killing a nest.

Permission to be a lazy gardener as summer wanes

By Beth Botts
For the Chicago Tribune

By the time August comes with its heat and humidity, many gardeners are ready for a break and so are many plants.

"The growing season is starting to wind down," said Sharon Yiesla, plant knowledge specialist in the Plant Clinic at The Morton Arboretum in Lisle. "You still need to do some things for your plants, but there are other tasks you can let go." Here are some tips for somewhat lazier late-summer gardening.

Stop pruning. "Pruning stimulates new growth on trees and shrubs," she said. If you prune them now, the twigs and bark that sprout in response will be too young and tender to survive the coming cold, dry winter weather. Do prune a branch that is broken or blocking the sidewalk, but save serious pruning for the dormant season, after plants have dropped their leaves, from November through March. Stop shearing yews and other evergreens too.

Keep watering. "Plants will need a water supply until they go dormant," she said. Regularly water trees and shrubs as well as perennials, vegetables, annuals, and container plants. In hot weather you may need to water containers and annuals every day, because the plants have grown so large that they will use water up fast. To determine whether you need to water plants in the ground, check for soil moisture by digging down 3 to 4 inches with a trowel and feeling to see if the soil is moist. "Be sure to check even if it's rained," she said. "Sometimes it can seem like there was a big downpour, but if you dig, you find the soil is moist only at the surface and bone-dry further down where the plant's roots are."

Tidy up. Remove plants that have died and the top growth of spring perennials that have gone dormant, such as bleeding heart. Spruce up perennials: "Just snipping off hosta leaves or other foliage that has gotten tattered or sun-scorched can really freshen up the look of a garden," she said.

Deadhead. Cut off the spent blooms of annuals and perennials. "Many plants, such as perennial geraniums, salvia, petunias, and marigolds, will respond with new flowers," Yiesla said. If you deadhead them promptly to keep them from forming seeds, you can often extend their bloom. Be careful not to remove too much foliage with the flowers — the plants need their leaves — but don't leave awkward-looking bare stems.

Harvest crops. Pick tomatoes, squash and other vegetables as soon as they're ripe so the plants keep producing. Cut back greens and herbs regularly so that plants such as lettuce, parsley and basil don't get a chance to flower or bolt. "This is the time to make pesto with all those basil leaves," she said.

Quit fertilizing. "At this point in the season, we need to stop pushing plants and let them start slowing down," Yiesla said. Although it's hard for us to grasp when we're melting in the heat, winter is coming for plants. "They should be conserving their resources in preparation for dormancy, not putting on new growth," she said. Only container plants still need occasional fertilizing. They quickly use the available nutrients in their limited soil, and frequent watering also sluices nutrients away.

Don't worry about holes and spots. Most plants will have accumulated some imperfections by the end of the summer. "They're usually not important," she said. If you are concerned about signs of a disease or pest, consult with experts such as the Plant Clinic (mortonarb.org/plant-clinic) to identify it for certain and consider whether it's worth worrying about.

Postpone planting projects. Cooler weather in September will make planting easier on both you and the plants. If you've already planted any perennials, trees or shrubs this year, be extra sure to keep them watered through the end of the season. "They haven't had time yet to develop much of a root system to collect and store water," she said.

Assess. While the plants are still lush, take a critical look at your garden. "Make notes and take pictures," Yiesla said. "Look for spots you can improve next year." In particular, consider spots where you could add plants for late-summer or fall color or interest. "In April and May, people tend to buy plants that are in bloom at the time, and they often don't think about August," she said. "Make some notes and plans now so you can plant for late summer next spring."

ASK THE BUILDER

Adding bathroom easier than owners think

By Tim Carter
Tribune Content Agency

I've been a master plumber for nearly four decades, and I used to do all the plumbing in all the houses I built and in the remodeling jobs that had a plumbing component. If you're thinking of adding a bathroom to your existing home, I want to reassure you that it's not as hard as you might think.

Plumbing is indeed a three-dimensional puzzle. That's one of the reasons I was intrigued with the challenges each job presented to me. I use my talents now to draw 3D riser diagrams for homeowners, architects and business owners who are in need of a permit. Plumbing departments all across the USA require riser diagrams. The diagram communicates to the plumbing department that you know the correct pipe sizes for all the drains and vents. The drawings also show how to connect all the pipes together.

Inflation and high labor costs have led more homeowners to attempt plumbing on their own. I may be one of the few plumbers who applauds this. While you need to have a good grasp of the plumbing code, it's possible you can successfully install the drains and vent pipes for a typical bathroom. It may seem daunting, but allow me to pull the curtain back so you can see just how easy it might be.

While I no longer do plumbing for customers, my kids tug on me to put my skills to work on a regular basis. I'm in the midst of helping my son finish off his basement. We were able to include a full bathroom that will add lots of value to his home. Bathrooms are prized by most people looking for homes.

Here's what you need to know about adding a bathroom in your home.

Most residents normally never see the pipes that carry wastewater away from a bathroom. This is a rare instance of a basement bathroom where the sewer line exits the house about 7 inches above the concrete floor. TIM CARTER

First, a single 3-inch-diameter pipe is required. This pipe will connect to the toilet and the wastewater from a shower or tub, and one or more vanities will connect to this pipe as well.

In fact, the plumbing code allows up to two toilets to be connected to one 3-inch pipe that eventually connects to the larger 4-inch building drain in a crawlspace or under a basement slab.

Showers require a 2-inch drain pipe. Bathtubs and vanities are allowed to drain into a 1.5-inch pipe. That said, I prefer to install a 2-inch pipe for tubs. It's so much easier to send a drain-cleaning snake down a 2-inch pipe than a smaller 1.5-inch pipe.

When you connect drain pipes to one another, it's important that you use a wye fitting. A wye fitting looks much like the letter Y. In many ways it resembles how streams connect to larger rivers. You'll typically see a stream enter a larger river at a 45-degree angle. This is how the blood vessels in your body work too. This angle forces the water downstream in the piping system.

You can use fittings called sanitary tees for plumbing fixtures. Think of a sanitary tee the way you'd think of a waterfall out in nature. A river is flowing horizontally and all of a sudden the water goes over the edge to fall vertically.

The vanity in your new bathroom will undoubtedly use a sanitary tee. You can sometimes find them under a tub or shower too. Toilets can employ a sanitary tee as long as you have enough room to make one work. They work well where the vertical stack (waterfall) is within 3 feet of the toilet.

If you decide to tackle a bathroom project yourself, you need to focus your attention on the vent pipes for all the fixtures. Vent pipes are a mystery to most homeowners. Each fixture requires a vent pipe.

The purpose of the vent pipe is to supply atmospheric air back into the system once wastewater is sent down the pipes. Think about your plumbing pipes before you flush a toilet. The pipes are just filled with air before you use the toilet. When you flush the toilet, you inject lots of water into the 3-inch pipe. This water pushes the air in front of it as the water makes its way to the sewer or septic tank. The air must be replaced, and the vent pipes do this with ease if you size them correctly.

Not only do the vent pipes need to be sized correctly, but they also need to be in specific locations with respect to the location of the actual plumbing fixtures.

This is all covered in the plumbing code, but you may find it mind-numbing to read. I created a How to Vent Plumbing video for you. It's on www.AsktheBuilder.com. I feel it does a splendid job of showing you all of this vent magic.

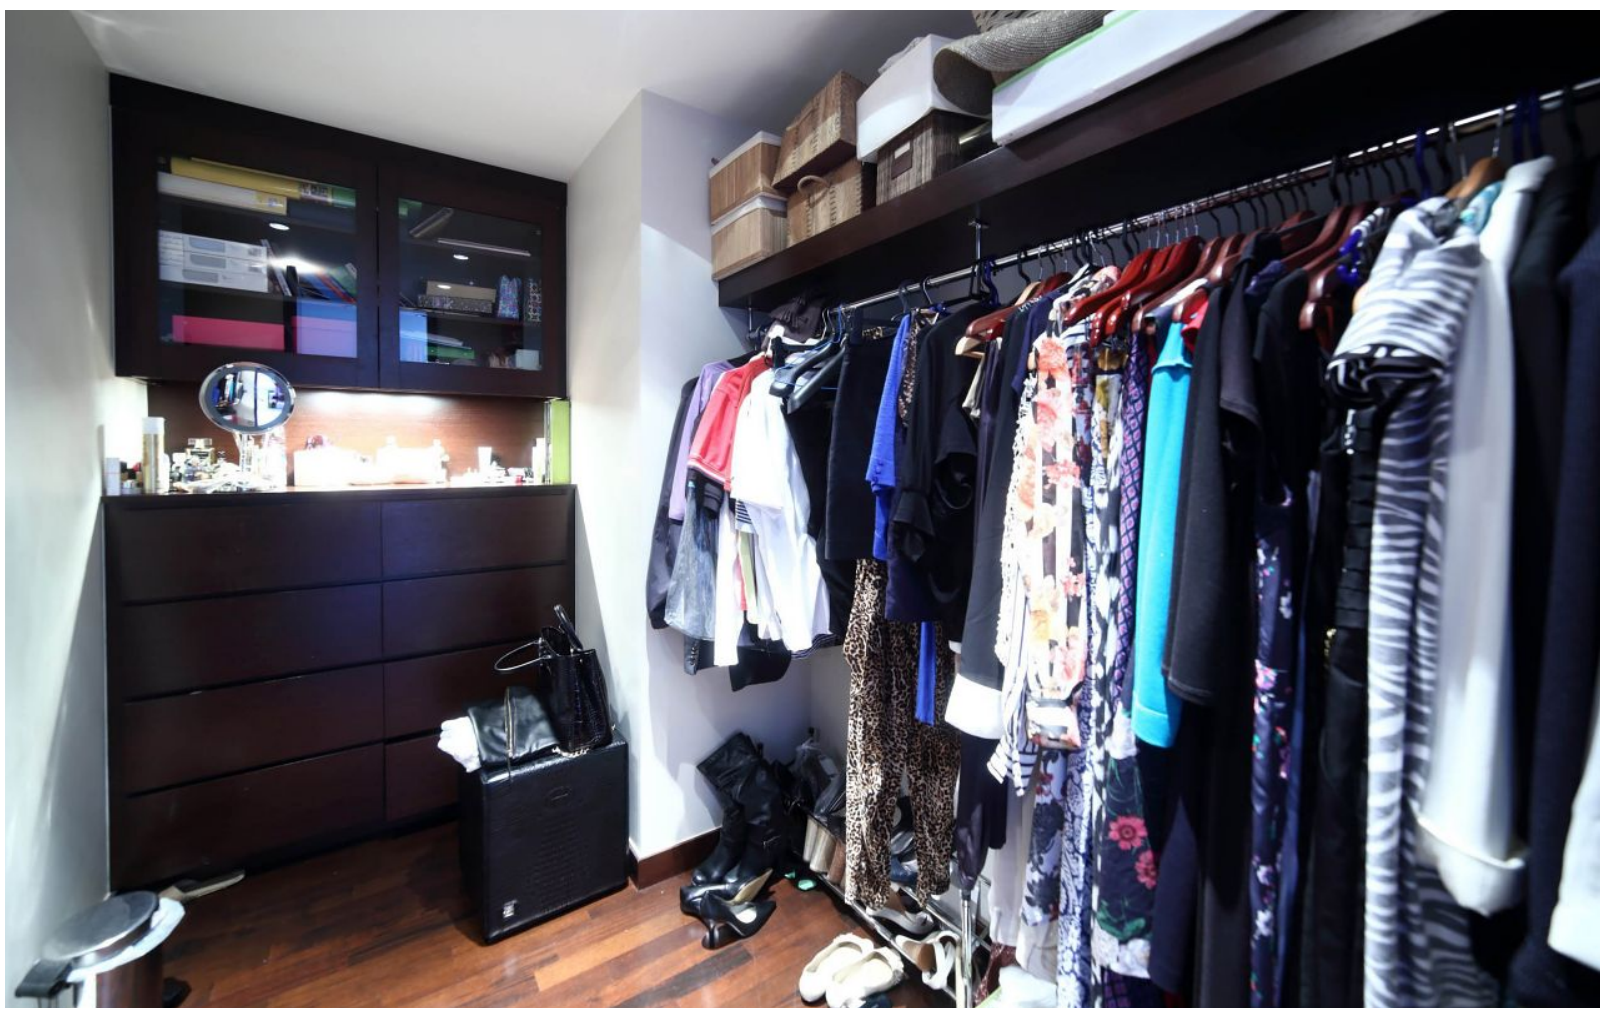
I want you to consider doing your own plumbing. It's very fulfilling, and there is a multitude of great information available on the internet.

Duplicate items can add up to a big mess

Declutter home by clearing out those extraneous items

By Amanda Lauren
RealSimple.com

It's fair to say we all have too much stuff. What's worse is that when our closets, pantries and other spaces become overly cluttered, it's hard to keep track of what we already have. As a result, we can end up with duplicates of common items, or we simply neglect to get rid of old things when we buy new ones to replace them. Either way, it all adds up to a big mess. So, here are seven duplicates you can declutter right now without any regrets.



If you keep on purchasing new clothing items because you've forgotten about your old ones, it might be time to edit your closet. DREAMSTIME

Clothing

Jamie Andrieu and Hillary Forst, of Sorted & Styled, tell me many of their clients have closets so jam-packed they don't even know what they have. "Sometimes we'll notice four white button-down shirts or three pairs of the same exact jeans," Andrieu says. "We even had a client who had a monthly clothes subscription and they kept sending her duplicate items, but she had no idea because her closet was overflowing with clothes and she had no way of seeing the problem."

Sometimes duplicates make sense. For example, if you find the perfect T-shirt, you could probably use it in two or three colors, but if you keep on purchasing new ones because you've forgotten about your old ones — it's time to edit your closet.

In some cases, having multiples of certain items can be helpful. But in other cases, it's just extra clutter. GETTY

Towels

We all need towels but lots of us have too many. "Many homeowners like to refresh their bath towels every year, especially if they're white," Forst explains. "This becomes a problem when they don't purge the old ones. They end up with double or triple the amount of towels needed, making for a nightmare of a linen closet."

Andrieu and Forst typically recommend having two towels per family member and two extra sets for guests. Instead of tossing out old towels, try donating them to your local animal shelter. Old hand towels can also make good cleaning rags.

Bedding

Sheets and duvets don't last forever. While most of us need two sets, having more than two per bed is unnecessary and can take over your linen closet. Recycle your extras or donate them to your local animal shelter.

Small appliances

Unless you're a professional chef, you probably don't need multiple hand mixers or other small appliances.

"Some of our clients have two or three different coffee makers because they have upgraded to a newer model and neglected to purge the old one," Andrieu explains. "Some clients like to hang on to the old one, just in case the new one breaks. We try to encourage them to let go of the old which will lead them to living a simpler life, with less clutter."

Baking supplies

Sometimes it makes sense to have multiple kitchen tools. For example, Andrieu and Forst tell me they had a client who had two sets of measuring spoons and cups. However, she was a baker and would often cook two things at once. So this made sense for her. But if you only bake once or twice a year, you probably don't need multiple measuring tools, rolling pins, or similarly-shaped cake pans or cookie cutters.

Mugs

Most people don't need more than a few coffee mugs. So why do you have 20? Many of us end up getting them as gifts or we get tempted at the store when we see a charming new set. But, in reality, you probably only have a small selection or rotation of mugs that actually get used. So, go ahead and throw out or donate your old mugs.

Beauty products

Is your bathroom littered with full bottles and nearly empty bottles of the same shampoo, conditioner and lotion? Turn the bottles upside down or cut them open and finish what you have before purchasing replacements. And be sure to also go through your makeup products and be realistic about what you actually use and what's just clutter — especially if it's way past its expiration date.

Kold x Windy

ALLBLK ■ Season Premiere

Season 2 of this drama set on Chicago's South Side brings conflict and desire, along with new characters and betrayals. Rising hip-hop and drill star Malika "Kold" Wise (Sh'Kia Augustin), who is now very pregnant with her deceased fiance's child, has fallen into an emotional roller coaster of anxiety and violent fits. Although Kold x Windy have recently signed with Achieve Jamz, Malika seems to have lost her musical footing. Forced to return to committing her "stains," she's reverting to the life she so desperately tried to leave behind. Meanwhile, her trusted confidante and group member Renee "Windy" Johnson (Nijah Brenea) is still obsessed with repping Kold x Windy on the mic and in the streets. Despite her bulletproof facade, Renee is dealing with her own set of demons. New to the cast is Reginae Carter as Miss 290, one half of Kold & Windy's rival rap group, K-Town.

Hernandez balances empathy, education, laughter as analyst

By Will Graves
Associated Press

Laurie Hernandez's approach to her new role as a TV analyst has made her a fan favorite. JORDAN STRAUSS/INVISION 2019

Laurie Hernandez pauses briefly and taps her head.

"There's a lot going on in here," the two-time Olympic gymnastics medalist-turned-TV-analyst for NBC said with a laugh. "There's a lot of chatter."

Yes, there is.

And whatever gets through the filter — which, to be clear, is most of it — has helped make the 24-year-old's foray into commentating a hit with both TV viewers and those like Hernandez who are perennially online.

Eight years ago in Rio de Janeiro, she was the youngest member of the Simone Biles-led "Final Five" team that stormed to the gold medal. Hernandez added a silver on beam later in those Games, where her boundless energy helped make her a breakout star.

Not much has changed in Paris other than Hernandez's point of view.

There are nerves to be sure when she slips her headset on alongside broadcast partner Rich Lerner, just very different ones than the kind she experienced as an athlete.

Yet when she starts to talk, the affection she still feels for her sport well into her retirement is obvious. So is the wonder that creeps into her commentary when the camera happens to catch someone famous in the stands, as it did during the women's all-around finals when actor and comedian Seth Rogen popped up on the monitor in front of Hernandez's spot in the media tribune inside Bercy Arena.

"Of all the people you could cut to? Like, that's so cool," Hernandez said. "But, like, I just would not expect, like, Seth Rogen to go to gymnastics."

Call that the "Biles effect." What's happening during the competition on screens — TVs, phone or otherwise — back in the U.S. might best be described as the "Hernandez effect."

She mixes empathy, education and laughter with equal measure. She spent a decade inside a sport that at times can take far more than it gives. Those memories are never too far away, and they have helped inform her approach.

"I don't know many sports, you know, who are like, 'Oh, I fear for my life every time I turn,'" Hernandez said.

And because of that, she's careful to note mistakes but not harp on them. It's gymnastics. Perfection is unattainable. So why place that level of expectation on athletes doing the hardest skills ever done?

Wobbles and falls are as much a part of the sport as leotards and chalk. They are inevitable. She prefers to explain how they happened so viewers who might only stumble across it once every four years understand. The same goes for when routines are done exquisitely. Sometimes what the viewer sees and the judges see are different things and when the score flashes there's a "wait, what?" element involved.

Welcome to the world of what she's calling "ghost deductions."

"To the naked eye, this looks like the most marvelous thing, and it is," she said. "But there are deductions that you cannot see at home that I can see or the judges can see, and it's up to you to just listen to it or not."

The gymnasts aren't the only ones being judged. Hernandez would love to tell you she buries her phone in her pocket and ignores whatever capital T "Thoughts" social media might have on her performance. She can't.

There will be times when something happens in front of her and some reference — be it from TikTok or elsewhere — will pop into her head and it transforms from thought to her microphone in a flash. Is it "unprofessional" as she put it? Not really. It's her way of trying to stay as authentic as possible. When she gets nervous — and she does — she imagines she's sitting on a couch at a party.

"Everyone's got a glass of whatever you want and we all just happen to be like, besties hanging out," Hernandez said. "And I

Today's deal is from an important tournament in India some years ago. North was Subhash Gupta, perhaps India's all-time greatest player. We are not familiar with the North-South methods, so we cannot say why Gupta chose to double at his first turn rather than making a strong spade raise. Nine tricks in no trump would have been easy on this lie of the cards, but Gupta's decision to play in a spade contract seems routine.

South won the opening club lead with dummy's ace and led the three of spades to his queen and West's ace. West cashed the ace of hearts and led another heart, ruffed in dummy with the eight of spades. Declarer now led the nine of spades from dummy, and East tried the psychological ploy of playing his seven rather than covering with the 10. South needed a 3-2 split in trumps, so he couldn't worry about possible bad splits. He decided that East could not possibly have the 10 of spades or he would have covered dummy's nine. The only hope, thought South, was to find East with the king of spades. He played the jack from his hand and lost to West's king. East's 10 of spades eventually took the setting trick. South's play of the jack was reasonable in any event, but East must be given credit for his imaginative play.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♠	2♥	Dbl	Pass
2NT	Pass	4♠	All pass

Opening lead: Eight of ♣

Aurora's Carlini is battling back from an injury to live her volleyball dream

By Stacy St. Clair
Chicago Tribune

PARIS — When the U.S. women's volleyball team beat Poland in straight sets Tuesday, setter Lauren Carlini threw her arms into the air and ran onto the court, celebrating far more than just advancing to the semifinals.

Nearly 72 hours earlier, the Aurora native's entire Olympics was in jeopardy because of a back injury that left her unable to bend over or move easily. Carlini had waited so long and worked so hard to be here, but she knew there was only one thing she could do: She had to be honest about her injury with the coaching staff, even if it meant an abrupt end to her Paris Games.

"The only thing that mattered was what was best for the team," Carlini said. "I asked myself, 'Can I go out there and help the team?' After (that first match), I knew I wasn't going to be able to do my job."

Instead, Carlini, 29, sat in the stands for the rest of pool play, watching the matches closely and using a headset to communicate what she saw happening on the court. She also worked intensely with Team USA's medical staff to get back into playing shape.

The team won't comment on the exact nature of her injury, beyond saying it's a back issue that developed after the loss to China on July 29. Carlini said her treatment included physical therapy and medicine, but she declined to go into detail.

As her condition began to improve, the coaching staff put her through a series of drills to ensure her body could handle the physical demands of the game. With the team's starting setter, Jordyn Poulter, coming back from a major knee injury, the coaches needed to be sure Carlini could

WEDNESDAY AT A GLANCE

ANOTHER US TRACK COMEBACK
Quincy Hall became the latest American to electrify Olympic track and field with an out-of-nowhere comeback Wednesday, sprinting from far behind in the 400 meters to reel in three runners and capture the gold medal. Hall, below, buried in fourth place as the runners rounded the last bend, outran the runner on his outside, then two more to the inside to cross the line in 43.40 seconds, the fourth-fastest time ever. Britain's Matthew Hudson-Smith finished second and Muzala Samukonga of Zambia finished third. Hall, 26, is the first American since LaShawn Merritt in 2008 to win the one-lap race. His victory came an evening after American Cole Hocker came from behind late to beat the favorites in the men's 1500. Hall's win came about an hour after Lyles advanced to the final of the 200 meters despite finishing second to Letsile Tebogo in his semifinal. Lyles will race for the gold medal Thursday.

US WOMEN INTO HOOPS SEMIS
A'ja Wilson scored 20 points to help the U.S. beat Nigeria 88-74 in the quarterfinals of women's basketball, extending its record winning streak to 59 consecutive Olympic wins. The semifinals will put the U.S. vs. Australia and France vs. Belgium.

SERBIA STANDS IN THE WAY
The U.S. will look to reach the gold-medal game for the 18th time in its 20 Olympic appearances when it faces Nikola Jokic and Serbia in the semifinals of the men's basketball tournament on Thursday. France plays Germany in the other semifinal.

'Hard Knocks' welcomes Williams

First episode features visit from Saban, eagle Speedo, Slip 'N Slide

By Colleen Kane
Chicago Tribune

Editor's note: Spoilers ahead from Episode 1 of "Hard Knocks: Training Camp with the Chicago Bears."

The first episode of the Bears' first appearance on "Hard Knocks" starts with a phone call.

Matt Eberflus, sitting in the draft room in a gray suit, places the call to quarterback Caleb Williams that both parties knew was coming for weeks.

"This day is going to go down as an iconic day in Bears history, my friend," Eberflus tells Williams. "And we're going to turn this cycle on its head."

"You ready?" Williams responds.

The camera tracks Williams, dressed in his navy and silver suit, as he walks down the hallway to the draft stage and then lets out a primal scream at becoming the No. 1 pick.

And the new season's intro begins, with current Bears players riding on the Architecture Tour on the Chicago River. The buildings they're admiring flash images of Bears greats on their sides. Williams' image on draft night is the last one shown on the side of a building.

The hope the Bears are placing on Williams is one storyline among several during the opening of the five-episode season, which will air Tuesdays on all HBO platforms. Here's our breakdown of the first episode.

Best behind-the-scenes look: A visit from Nick Saban, who coached Eberflus at Toledo, produces the most interesting fly-on-the-wall moment. Saban talks through the challenges Williams faces as a rookie quarterback in Chicago — and how Eberflus can manage them.

"Here's my theory on why NFL quarterbacks fail at such a dramatic rate," Saban says to Eberflus. "To me, expectations are a killer. This kid you've got has so much media, so much hype, so much expectation on doing well. And he has to develop so quickly to meet the expectations that everybody has for him. It's almost

WHITE SOX

A skid-busting win, but another series loss

After finally breaking through, Sox hop back on the 'L' in finale vs. A's

By LaMond Pope
Chicago Tribune

OAKLAND, Calif. — With their 21-game losing streak in the rearview mirror, the White Sox looked to end a few more droughts Wednesday in the series finale against the Athletics.

But the A's had other ideas.

The Sox surrendered three runs in the seventh on the way to a 3-2 loss in front of 6,946 at Oakland Coliseum.

The Sox followed Tuesday's streak-busting 5-1 victory with a late-inning fizzle in what likely was their final game at Oakland Coliseum. The A's are planning to play in Sacramento next season.

The Sox wasted a splendid start from Davis Martin, who allowed two hits, struck out four and walked one in six scoreless innings.

He left with a 2-0 lead because of a two-run homer from Andrew Benintendi in the second. It was the first time Benintendi had homered in back-to-back games with the Sox.

But the Sox lost for the 43rd time after leading as the A's rallied in the seventh. Armando Alvarez and Zack Gelof had RBI singles to tie the score. Lawrence Butler put the A's ahead with a sacrifice fly to left.

"(Martin) gave us a great opportunity to win a game," manager Pedro Grifol said. "We thought (reliever) Touki (Toussaint) was a good matchup there (in the seventh) with the split to that part of the order. They hit a couple soft-hit balls that found holes. (Dominic) Leone came in, we ended up giving up three and that was it."

The Sox were looking for their first series win since taking two of three against the Rockies from June 28-30. They haven't won consecutive games since a three-game winning streak June 27-29 against the Braves (one) and Rockies (two).

They fell to 28-89, joining the 1916 Philadelphia A's (25-91-1) as the only teams in major-league history to lose 89-plus times in the first 117 games of a season.

Here are three takeaways from the three days in Oakland.

Davis Martin saw progress in his second start: The Sox held the two-run lead in the fifth Wednesday, but the A's had runners on first and second with one out.

Catcher Chuckie Robinson made a mound visit.

"He says, 'We're going to throw a first-pitch slider and we're going to throw a changeup and we're going impossible."

Eberflus asks Saban for advice on handling quarterbacks.

Saban says he always stands behind the quarterback at practice so he can hear the QB's version of what he saw. He never is negative with the quarterback in front of the team. He finds it more effective to show than tell. And he talks about instructing quarterbacks to get the most out of the players around them by being a transformational leader — not a transactional one. He also gives interesting insight on the nature of motivating athletes.

"Human nature is to be average," Saban says. "It's to survive. It's not to win championships. It's not to be the best you can be. We think as coaches that just because a guy is a good athlete he wants all that.

"Now, every now and then, you get a guy who's got all the right stuff, who's a great leader, who does everything right. You were that way as a player. But there's not very many guys like that. You've got to make them that way."

Williams watch: The episode shows several back-and-forths between Eberflus and Williams, including one in the coach's office in which he tells Williams that he has made "leaps and bounds" in the first seven practices. Eberflus says they're getting 213 reps offensively and defensively that day, a setup to make sure Williams is getting the work he needs.

"It takes a strong mind to be able to wire in," Eberflus tells him.

Later in the episode in a quarterbacks meeting, the subject of sliding comes up. Williams, who says he didn't play baseball, shares what he believes is the proper way to do it, and coach Kerry Joseph brings up how he used a Slip 'N Slide to practice at a previous stop.

That leads to all of the quarterbacks working on their slides on a Slip 'N Slide on a practice field.

A couple of interactions between Williams and his teammates are featured, including running back D'Andre Swift talking to the quarterback about taking ownership of the team.

"If something's wrong, voice it," Swift says. "You've got the keys to this, bro. Use it. Drive."

A mic'd-up moment in practice shows Williams coming back to the huddle after a mistake and promising his teammates he'll get it. "I'll be better," he says. "I'll be better. Let's go. Let's focus in. I'll be better."

The camera then cuts to Williams hitting DJ Moore with a long pass.

Makeover story: At a pool party at Eberflus' house to open the episode, the coach is dressed in white pants and shoes and a short-sleeved tan sweater. That matches the outfit of offensive assistant Ryan Griffin, who is a couple of decades younger than Eberflus.

"There's a new sense of style in town," narrator Liev Schreiber breaks in. "From fashion to fast rides, the Bears are changing things up."

Eberflus' wife, Kelly, explains later that she initiated her husband's offseason makeover. Eberflus grew out his beard for a few days in the offseason and she told him she liked it. She came up with the idea for a new haircut, sending photos to popular Bears barber Lawrence Funk, including one of Ryan Reynolds.

"He thinks he looks cool now," Kelly says. "I think he looks cool too."

Funniest moment: Eberflus likes to give nicknames to players, and we now know why he calls offensive lineman Theo Benedet "The Canadian Eagle."

The episode shows Benedet doing the rookie tradition of singing karaoke in front of the team. Benedet, who is from Canada, begins a rendition of Lee Greenwood's "God Bless the U.S.A." with rookie Kiran Amegadjie behind him playing mini cymbals.

Midway through, as he gets to the refrain, Benedet tears off his pants to reveal a Speedo with an eagle on it, creating pandemonium in the meeting room.

Later in the episode, in a not-funny moment, Benedet suffers a hamstring strain on an extra point in the Pro Football Hall of Fame Game that will keep him out four to five weeks.

Williams also sings karaoke in the episode but almost immediately gets heckled by teammates, who boo him and throw paper his way. Williams laughs and then puts the lyrics on the big screen.

"You don't have to be able to carry a tune to carry a team," Schreiber narrates.

Best celebrity appearance: Eleven-time Olympic medalist Simone Biles makes an appearance via FaceTime with her husband, safety Jonathan Owens.

Owens received permission from the Bears to go to the Olympics last week to watch Biles, who won three gold medals, including the all-around title. Biles says hi to their three dogs and gives advice to Owens about packing for international travel. The show features emotional clips of Biles and Owens during Biles' performances in Paris. An end-of-episode clip of Owens watching Biles compete in her last two events from his couch at home is also poignant.

He grimaces and sends her text messages of encouragement when she falls off the balance beam, saying he's proud of her.

"Obviously not the outcome she wanted, but at least she gets to bounce back on floor," Owens says after the beam routine. "I'm pretty excited to watch her do that. Because she always does the best when she gets mad."

He then breaks into a big smile and takes a photo of the TV when she wins silver in the floor exercise.

Feel-good moment: General manager Ryan Poles pulls wide receiver DJ Moore from a walk-through to complete his four-year, $110 million contract extension. Moore hugs his agents and Bears staff after signing, then quietly returns to practice. Word begins to spread among his teammates, who give him big smiles. Poles explains to his staff why he gave Moore the extension before going over it with President Kevin Warren.

"The why behind it is the dependability, the durability, the production has been so consistent," Poles says. "We feel really good about this. So that he can just play free and take care of his family. That's what it's all about."

Best family moment: The Hall of Fame Game footage from Thursday night features the big performances from third-string quarterback Brett Rypien and wide receiver Collin Johnson.

It also captures the reaction of undrafted rookie quarterback Austin Reed's family as he enters the game in the third quarter.

His mom, Jen Reed, says, "I'm like shaking," and later claps giddily. Reed's night ended early because of storms in Canton, Ohio. Tom Reed, his dad, groans when an announcer notifies the crowd that severe weather has suspended the game.

"And there it is," he says.

Defense still ahead

Williams, offense kept in check in full-team periods

By Colleen Kane
Chicago Tribune

Chicago Bears offensive coordinator Shane Waldron and his assistant coaches spoke with the media Wednesday at Halas Hall after a padded training camp practice.

The coaches are preparing their units for Saturday's preseason game against the Bills in Buffalo, N.Y. Here's our camp report from the day.

Caleb Williams watch: The Bears defense, which was missing five starters in practice, continues to look like it's keeping the offense and rookie quarterback Caleb Williams in check during practices. The Bears had a handful of completed passes and not many explosive plays in full-team periods.

But offensive coordinator Shane Waldron said there are signs of progress from Williams that make the Bears think he's moving closer to putting it all together.

"When we watch him and watch him go through his reads and his progressions right there, going to where the ball should go is happening way more times than not," Waldron said. "And some of the things that haven't worked out have been from just a near miss here or an angle that wasn't feeling it the right way there. OK, got it. On to the next one. But he has been doing a good job reading with his feet, sticking within progression, recognizing coverage structures. So seeing all those things is what really gives you the confidence moving forward."

And he has shown flashes on the field of what makes him special, Brown said.

"He makes two to three throws every day that are better than most rookie quarterbacks you've been around," Brown said. "Being able to understand how to operate the offense, play on time, but also not take away from his athletic ability to move outside the pocket is going to be a big thing. He has done a really good job so far."

Play of the day: Running back D'Andre Swift had the highlight of the morning when he leaped up to make a one-handed catch on a screen pass from third-string quarterback Brett Rypien. Swift then surged ahead for a well-blocked play that could have been a touchdown.

The Bears signed Swift to a three-year, $24 million contract in the offseason with the hopes he can be an asset to Williams in both the run and pass games.

Brown said Swift has a lot of traits that make him "not a typical running back running routes."

"The short-area quickness," Brown said. "The fluidity and movement ability, but also his natural ball skills and being able to understand how to adjust to the ball in the air. I think he can run the entire route tree."

Brown called Swift, who has 2,729 rushing yards and 1,412 receiving yards over four seasons with the Detroit Lions and Philadelphia Eagles, a "super talented football player." But Brown also has been impressed with the way Swift works.

"Just every single day the guy's about business," Brown said. "No-BS-type mentality."

Player in the spotlight: As the NFL implements its new kickoff rule, kicker Cairo Santos is preparing for a potentially bigger wrinkle in his duties: being the last line of defense as a tackler.

The league expects to see more lengthy returns with the new rules, which position the kickoff and return teams 5 yards apart and restrict all but the kicker and the returners from moving until the ball is kicked. Players, coaches and officials have said it feels more like a run play, and a returner could break free with one cut.

Santos, who had the ball from his first kickoff in the preseason opener Thursday taken by the Pro Football Hall of Fame, said they've been practicing safe tackling techniques — sweeping the ankles and wrapping up the legs — and also visualizing what he would need to do in such a situation.

"From what I've seen the likelihood of a returner breaking that line of coverage guys is bigger," Santos said. "He's getting more speed from where he catches the ball. And it's going to be tough tackles when they're kind of running at full speed at you.

"Before when we could pin guys in the corner, using hang time played to my advantage, trying to close the gap and make him go to the sideline and use the sideline to tackle. There's going to be more opportunities for an open-field tackle, which I can't say I've done many. But I'll definitely try in the safest way that I can."

After watching coach Matt Eberflus as a Toledo player on "Hard Knocks," Santos then wondered: "Maybe he can teach me how to tackle."

Quote of note: Linebacker T.J. Edwards said he didn't watch Episode 1 of "Hard Knocks" on Tuesday night because he got home late and had to go to bed. But he did watch the clip of offensive lineman Theo Benedet stripping down to an eagle Speedo while singing "God Bless the U.S.A." as part of a Bears rookie performance.

"I did know that Theo was going to be on there, so I saw the highlight of that just because I had to see the reactions," Edwards said. "One of the more wild things I've seen in my time in the NFL. But that's what it's about, right? It's great for people to see, honestly. I don't know about that part great for people to see, but it's cool."

Edwards said he will watch more episodes in the future.

Seen and heard

Defensive tackle Gervon Dexter has gotten his hand up to bat down quite a few passes over the first few weeks of camp. Dexter, in his second NFL season, said he has "actively gotten better" at it.

"In college for me, if I didn't get a sack, then the play was over," Dexter said. "Coach (Eric) Washington and Coach (Travis Smith), they preach a lot, 'Get your hands up, bat the ball.' Now it has come in my head that, 'OK, if I'm not there, I need to get my hands up. Or if I'm going to split a rush guy and I'm at the point where I'm right in front of the quarterback, I have to get my hands up.' "

On the flip side, Joseph said he doesn't think batted balls will be an issue for Williams in games, noting that practices are different because defensive linemen know they can't touch the quarterback.

"They know they have to stop at a certain point, so the throwing lanes are a little different than what happens in a real game when guys are really trying to get to you and make a sack," Joseph said. "The D-lineman that's being blocked and he's right in front, he knows, 'OK, I can't get close to him so I'm just going to put my hands up.' "

Injury report: Among defensive starters, nickel Kyler Gordon, safety Jaquan Brisker, cornerback Tyrique Stevenson, defensive tackle Andrew Billings and defensive end Montez Sweat all sat out practice.

Cornerback Terell Smith, who was filling in for Stevenson, also left practice early after going down while defending DJ Moore in 11-on-11s.

Right guard Nate Davis remains out, and right tackle Darnell Wright was limited.

Running back Roschon Johnson, linebacker Noah Sewell, offensive linemen Bill Murray and Benedet, defensive lineman Keith Randolph, wide receiver Collin Johnson and tight end Marcedes Lewis also sat out.

Chicago's Rau loses consolation match in Greco-Roman wrestling

By Stacy St. Clair
Chicago Tribune

PARIS — Chicago's Joe Rau lost his Greco-Roman consolation match Wednesday, ending his Olympic tournament and leaving the wrestler struggling to regain perspective.

Rau, 33, twice missed making the Olympic team and had retired before launching an unlikely comeback bid about a year ago. When he made the U.S. team in the spring, he told the Tribune that being an Olympian would be victory enough.

After losing to Kyrgyzstan's Uzur Dzhuzupbekov in a close match, he said he wasn't so sure anymore.

"I wanted more, you know," an emotional Rau said after the match. "I wanted to become Olympic champion or medalist. I wanted to give USA Greco and my family and friends something to really be proud of. The competitor in me — this is never going to be good enough. You know, I'm never going to be good enough."

But, with time, here's what Rau might consider when he looks back on his Olympic journey.

Growing up, he was never the best wrestler on any team for which he competed. He made only one state tournament at St. Patrick High School and lost immediately. His best college offer came from Elmhurst University, an NCAA Division III school.

Yet he kept at it, defied everyone's expectations and became an Olympian.

Rau knows how improbable his story is. He acknowledged as much to reporters after the match, when he reflected on the obstacles he overcame to compete in Paris.

"It was just so hard for me to make that dream become a reality," Rau said. "I think it's hard for everybody, but I had an exceptionally rough go at it. And I'm most proud of coming back. I thought this dream was dead and I made it happen. It was a really unbelievable journey that you can't put into words."

Rau said he doesn't know if he'll continue competing because he has several coaching opportunities when he returns home. Either way, he plans to remain involved with Beat the Streets Chicago, a wrestling and life skills program for the city's youth.

Herb House, the national team coach and an Oak Park native who asked Rau to come out of retirement for Paris, said Rau fought hard in his last match and did everything they asked of him. It's too soon — one way or the other — for Rau to make decisions about sticking around for 2028, House said.

"He finished it off his last match here with a strong performance," House said. "After this we're going to give him some time off to relax, to go on vacation. Let him get his thoughts together and we'll see what the future looks like for him."

go the distance if Poulter couldn't play.

If Carlini faltered during the skills test, the team would continue with official alternate Micha Hancock, who played two pool games in Carlini's stead. A new position for 2024, the official alternate is a non-competing athlete who can serve as a last-minute replacement if a player is unable to compete due to injury or illness.

The replaced player — Carlini, in this case — would be allowed to return later in the tournament.

"I had to go have a five-on-one practice with the coaches and myself so that I could do all the movements, do all the things I needed to do in order to do my job and perform to the highest of my ability," she said. "Luckily, that was the case."

Carlini returned to action Tuesday, playing in the win-or-go-home quarterfinal match against Poland. She looked solid each time she subbed into the rotation, appearing to move easily — even diving after a ball.

The moment she left the court, however, she wrapped a heating and vibration device around her lower torso to keep her back warm.

"She did great," U.S. coach Karch Kiraly said after the match. "It's pretty gnarly to jump into a knockout Olympic quarterfinal match and handle it like she did."

Carlini is expected to be available for Thursday's semifinal match against Brazil, a continuation of her hard-fought dream to play in the Olympics.

The West Aurora High School graduate has been part of the U.S. system since she was a teenager on the youth national team. The 2012 Gatorade national player of the year, she signed with Wisconsin and joined a program that had not made the NCAA Tournament in five years.

In her first year, she led the Badgers to the NCAA finals and made the all-tournament team. She would go on to become a three-time All-American and help transform Wisconsin into a national powerhouse.

"We've never been the same as a program since Lauren came here," Wisconsin coach Kelly Sheffield told the Tribune. "We've had a lot of great players come through here, but nobody has been more important to the program's history than Lauren Carlini."

In 2016, Carlini won the Sullivan Award for best U.S. amateur athlete in any sport. She was the first volleyball player to receive the honor, which dates to 1930.

Her success led to a position on the U.S. national team and a dream to make the 2020 Olympic team. Her plan took a nightmarish turn, however, when she was the last person cut from the Tokyo squad, a decision in which both the coaches and her teammates had input.

"There can't be too many more painful things than that," Sheffield said. "It was heartbreaking ... but she got right back in the gym with the team and was in the gym training with them every day to help them reach their goal. It tells you a lot about her character."

Carlini said she dedicated the next Olympic cycle to improving her game and figuring out what she needed to do to play in 2024.

"The message was I wasn't 'there yet' for Tokyo. And I think the power of 'yet' and how powerful that word felt at that time was hard," Carlini said before the opening ceremony in Paris. "I knew I was going another round, so I asked myself what I could do in order to get better, in order to reach this next level. The past three years I've just been chipping away and working at it."

With its quarterfinal win, the U.S. team has guaranteed itself a shot at playing for a medal. Carlini, for her part, will continue to work on making her back stronger so she can remain part of the final push.

"It felt great not only to be a part of the win, but just to physically be able to perform and do my job. That's all I can ask for," she said after the match. "I'm looking forward to getting some recovery and getting back out there."

Bullpen stays hot vs. Twins; Catcher Bethancourt steps up

By Meghan Montemurro

Cubs right-hander Javier Assad has a knack for getting out of tough spots.

Even when his stuff isn't the sharpest or he struggles to command his pitches consistently, Assad often finds a way to limit the damage. Assad showed again Wednesday why the Cubs trust the 27-year-old to navigate tough spots.

Although the Minnesota Twins made him work, forcing him to throw 75 pitches in four innings, Assad held them to two runs despite three hits, two walks and a hit batter.

The Cubs lineup capitalized on Twins reliever Trevor Richards entering the game in the third inning for an injured Joe Ryan, drawing five walks and putting up three runs to help fuel an 8-2 win at Wrigley Field.

"They had an injury, unfortunately, and we did a nice job taking advantage of that — we had very patient at-bats," manager Craig Counsell said. "Kept moving the line with making Richards throw a whole bunch of pitches."

The Cubs (57-60) got home runs from Michael Busch (solo) and Ian Happ (two-run), and the Twins managed just four base runners over the final five innings. The series victory gave the Cubs a 5-2 homestand entering Thursday's off day ahead of a two-game weekend series against the White Sox at Guaranteed Rate Field.

"I'm sure there's more people like me in here that are thinking about the one Cardinals loss (Saturday), would have been nice to go 6-1," outfielder Pete Crow-Armstrong said. "But a really good homestand overall."

The bullpen continues to roll: For all the ugly Cubs losses and their disappointing position in the National League wild-card race, the bullpen has been one of the best in the majors for more than two months.

Since June 1, the bullpen's 2.68 ERA leads MLB and ranks second in home-run-to-fly-ball rate (7.7%), third in Left on Base Percentage (80.3%) and sixth in WHIP (1.17).

Counsell credited the additions of right-handers Tyson Miller and Jorge López, left-hander Drew Smyly's consistency and the emergence of right-hander Porter Hodge for stabilizing the pen.

"Those guys have been excellent and doing a heck of a job, and they're getting their outs," Counsell said.

Miller tossed 3 ⅔ scoreless innings over the homestand, allowing only one of the 12 batters he faced to reach base. Two of López's 3 ⅓ shutout innings against the Cardinals and Twins came in Wednesday's series-clinching victory, while Smyly didn't give up a run in his one inning of work, part of a stretch this month in which he allowed one run in 4 ⅓ innings.

If the Cubs somehow make a charge up the wild-card standings, the bullpen's steady performance will play a huge role in that effort.

Christian Bethancourt provides an impact: Although Miguel Amaya continues to get the bulk of starts behind the plate, veteran catcher Christian Bethancourt is finding ways to make an impact when he's in the lineup.

The Cubs improved to 5-0 when Bethancourt starts after he collected two doubles, a walk and RBI in Wednesday's victory. Since being called up from Triple-A Iowa on July 26 — roughly three weeks after signing a minor-league deal with the organization — Bethancourt is 6-for-14 with four extra-base hits and five RBIs.

"He's contributed offensively in a pretty significant way in all (five) games," Counsell said. "So to pick a guy up and have him contribute like that, can't ask for anything more."

Wednesday's performance marked the 11th time in his career that Bethancourt recorded multiple extra-base hits in a game, last occurring June 30, 2023, with the Rays.

to get a double play,' " Martin said. "His confidence in the pitch calling gave me confidence, and lo and behold we get a double play right after it."

Martin made tremendous progress from his first start to second since returning to the Sox following Tommy John surgery last season. He allowed four runs on six hits on Aug. 2 against the Minnesota Twins. On Wednesday, he didn't give up a hit until a leadoff single to Abraham Toro in the fifth.

"Today, it was more strike one, commanding counts," Martin said. "Putting in guys in better position to execute two-strike, 1-2. Led to some weaker contact and made some good plays behind me today, which is great."

Martin had pitched a combined 6 ⅓ innings in his first two outings with the Sox (one start, one relief) this season. He went six innings Wednesday, throwing 82 pitches.

"(Tommy John) is hard, sometimes you don't have the feel for stuff," Martin said. "The fact you can have some success in the big leagues post-TJ brings a lot of confidence the next week and the week after that."

The Sox were able to get 'a monkey off the shoulder' Tuesday: The 28th win for the Sox on Tuesday night was among their most significant victories of the season.

It was, after all, their first win in nearly a month.

"No one likes losing, let alone losing 21 straight along with losing 14 (in a row earlier this season)," infielder Nicky Lopez said Tuesday night. "Once you win, it's kind of a relief. It was kind of a monkey off the shoulder."

Jonathan Cannon led the way, allowing one run on six hits with five strikeouts and two walks in six innings.

The Sox hit the reset button the day after ending the 21-game skid, which tied the longest in American League history and ranks second on the all-time major-league list behind the 23 by the 1961 Philadelphia Phillies.

"Every win here, that is what this level is about," Grifol said before Wednesday's game. "Every win here is special, and they're hard. Playing against the best in the world.

"The fact we were in a 21-game losing streak and won last night makes it a little sweeter, to get it behind us. But we still went through it."

The Sox said goodbye to Oakland Coliseum: Chris Flexen grew up in the Bay Area and went to some A's games as a kid.

The Sox starter recalled pitching at the Oakland Coliseum as a sophomore for Newark (Calif) High School.

"Threw pretty well, and had a buddy hit a home run halfway up the stairs," Flexen said.

He also is 2-0 with a 1.08 ERA and 15 strikeouts in four career major-league outings (two starts) at the ballpark.

"Being able to pitch there with Seattle, I usually had a pretty good following there as far as friends and family," Flexen said.

Those memories returned for Flexen and other Sox players as they likely made their last trip to the ballpark.

The A's are planning to play in Sacramento next season.

Luis Robert Jr., one of the few remaining players from the 2020 Sox playoff roster, recalled squaring off against the A's in the AL wild-card series. He hit a mammoth 487-foot home run in Game 3.

While the stadium was nearly empty because of pandemic protocols, Robert reacted in the moment as if the place were filled.

"I flipped the bat like if it was a thousand people in the stands," Robert said through an interpreter. "It was really special."

ON THIS DATE

AUG. 8
1903: A week after pitching his first doubleheader triumph, Joe "Iron Man" McGinnity of the New York Giants scored a double victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers 6-1 and 4-3. In the second game, he stole home.
1915: Philadelphia's Gavvy Cravath hit four doubles and drove in eight runs in a 14-7 victory over the Reds at Cincinnati.
1920: Howard Ehmke of the Detroit Tigers pitched the fastest 1-0 game in American League history — 1 hour, 13 minutes, for a victory against the New York Yankees.
1931: Bob Burke of the Washington Senators pitched a 5-0 no-hitter against the Boston Red Sox.
1954: The Brooklyn Dodgers pounded the Cincinnati Reds 20-7 at Ebbets Field. The Dodgers scored 13 runs in the eighth inning after two were out.
1973: Designated hitter Orlando Cepeda hit four doubles as the Boston Red Sox posted a 9-4 victory over the Kansas City Royals.
1985: Baseball, after a two-day walkout, resumed playing with 18 games scheduled, including five doubleheaders.
1988: The first night game scheduled in the 74-year history of Chicago's Wrigley Field's was postponed with the Cubs leading the Philadelphia Phillies 3-1 after heavy rains started in the bottom of the fourth inning. Philadelphia's Phil Bradley led off the game with a home run, but all numbers were wiped out when the rain came.
1992: Oakland's Dennis Eckersley had his consecutive save record snapped at 40. His consecutive save records — 36 straight to start a season, and 40 straight over two seasons — ended trying to protect a 2-1 lead in the ninth inning against the Kansas City Royals. Eckersley gave up a two-out, two-run single to Gregg Jefferies to give the Royals a 3-2 lead. But the Athletics came back to win the game in the ninth, 5-3.
1997: Randy Johnson struck out 19, matching the major league record for left-handers he had tied earlier this season, as the Seattle Mariners defeated the Chicago White Sox 5-0.
1998: Paul Molitor stole his 500th base in Minnesota's 6-3 loss to Baltimore become the fifth player with 3,000 hits and 500 steals. Molitor joined Ty Cobb, Honus Wagner, Eddie Collins and Lou Brock.
2000: Darren Dreifort of the Los Angeles Dodgers hit two homers and was the winning pitcher in a 7-5 victory over the Chicago Cubs.
2001: Damion Easley went 6-for-6 with a home run and three RBIs as Detroit pounded Texas 19-6.
2014: Bartolo Colon records the 200th win of his career in the Mets' 5 - 4 win over the Phillies.
2016: Brandon Crawford became the first major league player in 41 years to get seven hits in a game, putting the San Francisco Giants ahead to stay with an RBI single in the 14th inning of an 8-7 victory over the Miami Marlins. Crawford tripled, doubled and had five singles in eight at-bats.

AROUND THE HORN

■ Astros: Framber Valdez was so steady for eight innings. A wobbly ninth cost the Astros left-hander his second career no-hitter. Valdez was an out away from more history when Rangers slugger Corey Seager hit a two-run homer in the Astros' 4-2 victory on Tuesday night in Arlington, Texas. The Astros beat the Rangers 6-4 on Wednesday to take the season series from their in-state rivals. It had been just more than a year since Valdez's first no-hitter, and the 30-year-old was cruising when he took the mound needing just three outs for what would have been the second this season for the Astros. The 99th pitch from the two-time All-Star finished a leadoff walk to Robbie Grossman, but the 100th was the second Rangers double play of the game. When Ezequiel Duran's bouncer to third baseman Alex Bregman emptied the bases with two outs, the roar from another strong contingent of Astros fans at the home of the Rangers signaled the anticipation. Josh Smith kept the defending champs alive with another walk, setting up Seager's 24th homer on the first pitch he saw in the ninth — the 107th and final one from Valdez (11-5). It was the fifth homer in five games for the reigning World Series MVP. Josh Hader replaced Valdez and walked Marcus Semien before Josh Jung flied out to the base of the wall in right field. It was Hader's 23rd consecutive save, one shy of Brad Lidge's franchise record from 2005. "I try to always go out there trying to have fun," Valdez said through an interpreter. "Obviously, sometimes I have got to get serious. Went out there and do what I try to do every single time, try and throw strikes on all my pitches and just try to help help the team win." Yordan Alvarez hit a two-run homer in the ninth inning that ended up being the difference. Jake Meyers drove in the first two Astros runs with a pair of singles. Valdez, whose other no-hitter was a 2-0 victory against Guardians on Aug. 1, 2023, had a perfect game through five innings, but still faced the minimum of 18 batters through six. The perfect game ended when Jonah Heim opened the sixth by reaching on Bregman's throwing error. Grossman then grounded into a double play before Duran was called out on strikes. It was just the third win in nine games for the Astros. The Astros' other no-hitter this season came from Ronel Blanco on April 1.

■ Diamondbacks: Josh Bell homered twice and drove in three runs, Eduardo Rodriguez went 5 ⅔ innings to win his season debut on Wednesday, and the Diamondbacks beat the host Guardians 5-3 to sweep a doubleheader. In the first game, the D-backs received two-run HRs from Ketel Marte, Geraldo Perdomo and Corbin Carroll in a 7-3 victory. The D-backs won their seventh straight series and moved into the first NL wild-card spot. The Guardians extended their longest losing streak of the season to five, but lead the AL Central by 3 ½ games over the Twins. Their 35-20 home record remains the best in baseball.

■ MLB: Bristol Motor Speedway in Bristol, Tenn., will host a game between the Reds and Braves in 2025, according to reports.

Harbaugh hit with NCAA ban

By Larry Lage
Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — The NCAA announced a four-year show-cause order for former Michigan coach Jim Harbaugh on Wednesday for impermissible contact with recruits and players while access was restricted during the COVID-19 pandemic, effectively banning him from college athletics until August 2028.

The NCAA said Harbaugh, who left his alma mater to coach the NFL's Chargers after last season's national championship, "engaged in unethical conduct, failed to promote an atmosphere of compliance and violated head coach responsibility obligations."

The NCAA had already put Michigan on three years of probation along with a fine and recruiting limits after reaching a negotiated resolution in the case. Harbaugh did not go along with the agreement, disputing allegations he failed to to cooperate, so his case was handled separately.

"The panel noted that Harbaugh's intentional disregard for NCAA legislation and unethical conduct amplified the severity of the case and prompted the panel to classify Harbaugh's case as Level I-Aggravated, with penalties to include a four-year show-cause order. Subsumed in the show-cause order is a one-season suspension for Harbaugh," the NCAA said.

The recruiting case is separate from the NCAA's investigation into impermissible in-person scouting and sign stealing allegations that roiled Michigan's championship season in 2023 and resulted in a three-game suspension of Harbaugh by the Big Ten Conference.

The NCAA's show-cause order started Wednesday and runs through Aug. 6, 2028. It requires a school wanting to hire Harbaugh to suspend him for the first full season. After that, Harbaugh would be still be barred from athletics-related activities, including team travel, practice, video study, recruiting and team meetings until the order expires.

Harbaugh's attorney, Tom Mars, has said the coach was not invited to participate in the settlement process or aware that an agreement had been reached between the school and the NCAA.

"The way I see it, from coach Harbaugh's perspective, today's COI decision is like being in college and getting a letter from your high school saying you've been suspended because you didn't sign your yearbook," Mars posted on social media. "If I were in coach Harbaugh's shoes and had an $80 million contract as head coach of the Chargers, I wouldn't pay any attention to the findings of a kangaroo court, which claims to represent the principles of the nation's most flagrant, repeat violator of the federal antitrust laws."

The sign-stealing case is still open. Multiple infractions cases in such a short time period could prompt the NCAA to treat Michigan as a repeat offender, opening the school up to harsher penalties in the sign-stealing case.

New Michigan coach Sherrone Moore is facing allegations he violated NCAA rules related to the investigation into scouting and sign-stealing.

IN BRIEF

Nadal won't play in upcoming US Open

News services

Four-time champ Rafael Nadal pulled out of the U.S. Open on Wednesday, making it the third Grand Slam he's missed this season and raising more questions about his future in tennis at age 38.

Nadal wrote on social media that he will miss "those electric and special night sessions" in Arthur Ashe Stadium, "but I don't think I would be able to give my 100% this time."

He added that his next event will be the Laver Cup in Berlin on Sept. 20-22. Nadal teamed with Roger Federer in a doubles match at that event in 2022, when Federer played for the final time before his retirement.

Nadal's announcement wasn't much of a surprise. Yes, he was on the official entry list released last month for New York, but that was more of a formality than anything and didn't preclude the 22-time major champ from withdrawing before the tournament.

Plus, Nadal telegraphed this news a week ago after his participation at the Paris Olympics for Spain.

The 38-year-old Nadal hasn't announced anything about a possible retirement, but given his age and a recent history of injuries it seems safe to say it's coming soon.

Colleges: The NCAA D-I Board of Directors voted unanimously Tuesday to introduce a proposal that will give performance units to teams that play in March Madness. Units represent revenue. The proposal goes to the NCAA's Board of Governors later this week to approve the allocation of funds, which is considered a formality. ... Texas sophomore RB CJ Baxter suffered a knee injury in practice that will require season-ending surgery. Baxter was expected to be a major contributor for Longhorns.

NFL: The league fined the Giants and Lions on Wednesday each $200,000 for multiple fights that broke out at join practices between the teams this week. Lions DB Emmanuel Moseley is out indefinitely after being injured in one of the fights.

Boutier likes home-course advantage

For all the countless times Celine Boutier has played Le Golf National, what carried her to a 7-under 65 and a three-shot lead Wednesday in the Olympics were the two days when she didn't even have her clubs. Boutier watched from the gallery over the weekend as the French fans cheered and chanted and sang for Victor Perez and Matthieu Pavon, ovations they rarely hear anywhere else. When it was her time to perform, the 30-year-old from France delivered a round to remember. On a course so difficult that only two players broke 70, Boutier rolled in seven birdie putts and chipped in for another birdie to steal the show. "I'm really over the moon with the way the tournament started for me," said Boutier, who won her first LPGA major last year at the Evian Championship in France. Ashleigh Buhai of South Africa had a 68, and only 10 other players broke par. The group at 70 included Gaby Lopez of Mexico and Lilia Vu of the U.S. Nelly Korda, the American gold medalist from the Tokyo Games and No. 1 player in women's golf, had to push hard to get back to even for the day at 72.

American Hall surges to gold in 400m

As the flash of red, white and blue streaked past one sprinter — then the next, then the next — the American man delivering the latest out-of-nowhere comeback on the track said he had one thing going through his mind: "Get home, son! Get home, son!" Quincy Hall got home in first, then fell to the ground and did snow angels. Just another routine day in a come-from-behind kind of Olympics for the U.S. Hall reeled in three runners down the stretch of the 400-meter final Wednesday to deliver another win for his country at the Stade de France. He finished in 43.40 seconds, beating Britain's Matthew Hudson-Smith by .04 seconds; they're now the fourth- and fifth-fastest men at the distance. The 26-year-old Hall's late push came the evening after American Cole Hocker rocked his sport by coming from way back to beat the favorites in a memorable men's 1500. Add in Noah Lyles, whose only lead in his 100-meter thriller Sunday came at the exact point he crossed the finish line. Hall is the first American since LaShawn Merritt in 2008 to capture gold in the one-lap race.

Weightlifter ends US medal drought

Hampton Morris does not have a driver's license. He does have an Olympic bronze medal. The 20-year-old who trains in his garage at home in Marietta, Georgia, on Wednesday became the first U.S. men's weightlifter to take home a medal of any color at the Games in four decades. Narrowly missing out on a world record that would have gotten him silver, Morris, above, followed Mario Martinez and Guy Carlton from Los Angeles in 1984 as the most recent American men to medal at the Olympics. "It's amazing that I'm able to leave that kind of mark in the sport," Morris said after finishing third in the men's 61-kilogram division. "I'm just in disbelief." Morris, who's coached by his father, Tripp, moved the bar forward for his second attempt and was successful on the 172 kilogram (379 pound) lift that put him in medal position at 298. Locked into a medal, he went for a clean and jerk world record attempt of 178 kilograms (392 pounds) and came up just short of completing it. "I knew I had it in me," Morris said. "Any other day, I would definitely have a shot at making it." —Associated Press

Familiar faces to face off

Semifinals are rematches of group-play contests

By Tim Reynolds
Associated Press

PARIS — U.S. coach Steve Kerr knows something unexpected is going to happen when his team plays against Serbia in the semifinals of the Paris Olympics. Maybe Serbia will change its lineup. Maybe Nikola Jokic will play the entire game. Or maybe the surprise will be that there's no surprise at all.

Whatever the case, Kerr knows the Americans have to be ready for anything.

The U.S. will look to reach the gold-medal game for the 18th time in its 20 Olympic appearances when it faces Serbia in the semifinals of the Paris Games on Thursday night. The Americans are 2-0 against Serbia this summer, winning an exhibition last month and then winning again in the Olympic opener for both teams.

"Serbia is really good," Kerr said. "We can't get lulled to sleep because we beat them twice. We have to be prepared for their best effort."

The final four teams at the Paris Games aren't an overly surprising mix, and the semifinal games are both rematches from contests earlier in this tournament.

World Cup champion Germany takes on Victor Wembanyama and host France in the first semifinal, while World Cup runner-up Serbia takes on the four-time defending Olympic champion U.S. in the second semifinal.

Germany, Serbia and the U.S. were all favored in their quarterfinal wins over Greece, Australia and Brazil, respectively, while France pulled the lone surprise of sorts by ousting Canada.

Serbia rallied from 24 points down to beat Australia. Germany — which had barely trailed at all in the tournament before Tuesday — erased a 12-point deficit to beat Greece.

"We stayed together. We didn't panic, we stayed together," Germany coach Gordie Herbert said. "Adversity's good. The quarterfinal is one of the toughest games to play. And we just talked about enjoying the moment, but it's easy to say, not so easy to do."

The medal games are Saturday. Thursday's winners play for gold, Thursday's losers play for bronze.

"It's a great feeling to be able to make sure we play on the last day of the tournament, to make sure we give ourselves a chance to win a medal," France guard Evan Fournier said. "And hopefully it's going to be the right one."

Germany vs. France

How Germany got here: defeated Japan 97-77, defeated Brazil 86-73, defeated France 85-71, defeated Greece 76-63 in quarterfinals.

How France got here: defeated Brazil 78-66, defeated Japan 94-90, lost to Germany 85-71, defeated Canada 82-73 in quarterfinals.

Medal history: France is a three-time silver medalist (1948, 2000, 2020). Germany has never won an Olympic medal in men's basketball.

Outlook: The French rode defense to their win over Canada in the quarterfinals, with the curious case of Rudy Gobert an interesting subplot to that one — he says he had surgery to fix a finger issue, coach Vincent Collet says Gobert didn't have a procedure, but either way, he'll be good to go in the semifinals. Whether he will return to the starting lineup remains unclear. ... This is Germany's first trip to the Olympic semifinals. Going back to last year's World Cup, Germany is 12-0 in major international competition since last summer (excluding exhibitions). ... Thursday's game will be the fourth between these clubs this summer. Germany went 2-1 in the first three, and France's win came when Germany was missing a bunch of starters. ... Germany's Franz Wagner is the highest per-game scorer left in the tournament, getting 20.8 per contest so far.

U.S. vs. Serbia

How the U.S. got here: defeated Serbia 110-84, defeated South Sudan 103-86, defeated Puerto Rico 104-83, defeated Brazil 122-87 in quarterfinals.

How Serbia got here: lost to U.S. 110-84, defeated Puerto Rico 107-66, defeated South Sudan 96-85, defeated Australia 95-90 in quarterfinals.

Medal history: The U.S. has won 16 golds (1936, 1948, 1952, 1956, 1960, 1964, 1968, 1976, 1984, 1992, 1996, 2000, 2008, 2012, 2016, 2020), one silver (1972) and two bronzes (1988, 2004). Serbia won silver in 2016.

Outlook: The U.S. has started an Olympics with four consecutive games of 100 or more points for only the second time. The other was 1992; that team scored 100 or more in all of its Olympic contests. ... Both U.S. wins over Serbia this summer have been by exactly 26 points — 110-84 in France and 105-79 in Abu Dhabi, United Arab Emirates. ... Jokic is averaging 19.3 points and Bogdan Bogdanovic is averaging 18.5 points for Serbia in these Olympics. ... Anthony Edwards is averaging 16.8 points per game to lead the U.S., and he's doing that coming off the bench. ... If Jayson Tatum makes a 3-pointer in either of the final two U.S. games — he hasn't made one yet this summer — this will be the first U.S. Olympic team in which all 12 players make at least one shot from beyond the arc.

ROUNDUP

US women's hoops rolls into semifinals

Associated Press

A'ja Wilson scored 20 points and had 11 rebounds and Jackie Young added 15 points to help the U.S. beat Nigeria 88-74 on Wednesday night in the quarterfinals of the women's basketball tournament at the Paris Games, extending its record winning streak to 59 consecutive Olympic wins.

Breanna Stewart also had 13 for the Americans, who haven't lost since the 1992 Barcelona Games and are now two victories away from an unprecedented eighth consecutive gold medal. They will face a familiar foe in Australia in the semifinals on Friday night.

The Opals routed Serbia 85-67. The other medal round game will feature host France playing Belgium.

With this being the U.S. team's first game in Paris, the contest drew some fellow Olympians including men's team players LeBron James, Bam Adebayo and Devin Booker as well as American swimming greats Michael Phelps and Katie Ledecky. Members of the U.S. rowing team were also in attendance.

Strange day, indeed: The most unusual day of Sarah Hildebrandt's wrestling career ended with her earning a gold medal.

The American won the 50-kilogram women's category, defeating Yusneylis Guzman Lopez of Cuba 3-0 in the championship match to become the fourth U.S. woman to win a gold medal.

For a while, she thought she wouldn't even have a gold medal match.

Vinesh Phogat of India appeared to reach the finals of the 50-kilogram category after three wins on Tuesday. But United World Wrestling, the sport's governing body, disqualified her after she barely missed weight.

Hildebrandt, 30, a bronze medalist in Tokyo, originally thought she had won gold by forfeit. Instead, Guzman Lopez, who had lost to Phogat in a semifinal, was moved up from a bronze-medal match.

Poland rallies past US, into men's volleyball final: Poland will play for a gold medal in men's volleyball, rallying from a 2-1 deficit to beat the Americans in the deciding fifth set of the semifinal match.

Poland came back from 20-18 in the fourth and needed two set points to force it to a deciding fifth.

Led by Cuba native outside hitter Wilfredo León and his match-high 26 points in the attack, Poland jumped out to an early lead in the fifth and held on.

Poland will play France in Saturday's gold-medal match. The U.S. and Italy will battle for the bronze on Friday.

Long pursuit of gold over: The U.S. women's pursuit team of road race Olympic champ Kristen Faulkner, Chloe Dygert, Jennifer Valente and Lilly Williams held on to beat New Zealand in the race for gold.

The Americans had won a pair of silver medals and a bronze in the last three Olympics.

US men's water polo edges Australia: Adrian Weinberg made two blocks in a penalty shootout to help the U.S. beat Australia 11-10 in the quarterfinals of the men's water polo tournament.

Hannes Daube and Alex Bowen each scored two goals in regulation as the U.S. reached the semifinals at the Olympics for the first time since 2008. Daube and Bowen also converted their penalty shots in the tiebreaker. It was the third straight win for the U.S., which will play two-time defending champ Serbia on Friday. Croatia will face Hungary in the other semifinal.

Romania appeals gymnast's score after inquiry drama: The Romanian Olympic Committee says it has appealed Sabrina Maneca-Voinea's score from the floor exercise final after a last-minute inquiry on behalf of American rival Jordan Chiles prompted heartbreak and rage from the former gymnastics powerhouse.

Maneca-Voinea and Romanian teammate Ana Barbosu were left outside the medals in Monday's floor final after finishing with matching scores of 13.700. Barbosu thought she had won bronze over Maneca-Voinea via a tiebreaker and began celebrating with a Romanian flag on the floor.

Chiles initially was given a score that put her in fifth place but a review of her routine bumped her up to third.

The special medal ceremony allowed the nine Americans to parade on a runway in the bright Paris sunshine and gaze at the Eiffel Tower.

Exactly 2½ years after the figure skating team event ended at the Beijing Olympics — and the doping saga of the winning Russian team started — the Americans got the medals that weren't awarded at the time.

All nine American skaters came to Paris. Seven of the eight members of the Japan team came to get their silver medals — an upgrade from their third-place result.

A Russian appeal trying to win back the team title was dismissed at the Court of Arbitration for Sport just before these Games opened. The title had been stripped in January when a different CAS panel disqualified Russian teen Kamila Valieva for doping with a banned heart medication. She also was banned for four years.

CUBA TOWNSHIP ASSESSMENT ROLL FOR 2024

OFFICIAL ASSESSMENT LIST:

This publication is the official notice to property owners of the 2024 assessments value changes in the Township of Cuba. These 2024 assessments, as published, are those determined by the Assessor and/or the Chief County Assessment Office.

The assessment roll recording the values of property determines only the distribution of the total tax burden among the individual property owners in Lake County. The Township Assessor and/or the Chief County Assessment Office have no control over the amount of taxes levied, nor the public expenditures. The amount of these assessed values (subject to State equalization), minus applicable homestead exemptions, multiplied by the established tax rate, determines the amount of your property tax bill.

EQUALIZATION

The following printed assessments, as well as all other assessments in the township, other than farm land and coal, are required by law to be assessed at 33.33% of market value, having been equalized to that level by the Chief County Assessment Office, who has applied a factor of 1.0550 to all values except those assessed under the provisions of Chapter 35 (ILCS), Act 200, Secs. 10-110 through 10-140, 10-145, 10-155, and 10-170 through 10-200. Application of the township equalization factor represents a 5.50% increase in the original assessments.

To determine the fair cash value of your property based upon the sales transactions in 2021 – 2023, divide the total assessed value by 0.3333. If it appears that the resulting number is higher than the market value of the property, you may be over-assessed. If the resulting number is less than market value, the assessment may be under-assessed.

ARRANGEMENT OF LIST

Your property is listed under the name of your city or village, which will be in alphabetical order. Each street within the city or village is also arranged in alphabetical order. Property on the same street will be listed beginning with vacant or improved property that has no street number, followed by property with street numbers listed in numerical order. Note that the value that appears is a total assessed value for the property. All values are subject to a State equalization factor certified to the County Clerk by the Illinois Department of Revenue.

INFORMATION ON ASSESSMENTS

Questions regarding this assessment information should first be directed to the Cuba Township Assessor's office at 28000 West Cuba Road, Barrington, IL 60010. Cuba Assessor office hours are Monday – Friday 9:00 a.m. – 4:00 p.m. Any property owner who objects to the amount of their assessment should file an appeal, in writing, with the Board of Review on or before September 9, 2024. Appeals must be filed electronically using the Board of Review's Smartfile E-filing portal at boardofreview.lakecountyil.gov. If you have questions on the E-filing process you can call the Board of Review office at 847-377-2100 or come to the Board office for assistance at 18 North County Street - 7th Floor, Waukegan, IL 60085-4335. The Board of Review rules of procedure are also available on the internet at boardofreview.lakecountyil.gov under the Assessments link at the top of the home page. Taxpayers have 30 days from the date of this publication to file an assessment appeal with the Board of Review.

HOMESTEAD EXEMPTIONS

All owner-occupied properties may be eligible for one of the following homestead exemptions: General Homestead Exemption, Senior Homestead Exemption, Low-Income Senior Citizen's Assessment Freeze Homestead Exemption, Homestead Improvement Exemption, Homestead Exemption for Persons with Disabilities, Returning Veteran's Homestead Exemption or the Disabled Veteran's Exemption or the Standard Homestead Exemption for Veteran's with Disabilities. Homestead exemptions reduce the assessment value for tax billing purposes. More information on homestead exemptions appears on the Chief County Assessment Office website. For more information on homestead exemptions you can contact your township assessor, the Chief County Assessment Office (847-377-2050) or the county website at assessor.lakecountyil.gov.

FOX VALLEY UNITED WAY

Denise Crosby

Dolly Parton might not have personally been at the downtown Aurora ribbon-cutting ceremony on July 30, but certainly her spirit was evident, including the country megastar's passion for early childhood literacy.

It's a passion shared by Fox Valley United Way, which held this ceremony to mark a partnership with the Dolly Parton Imagination Library that aims to deliver a book a month into the hands of every child from birth to age 5.

The project, a tribute to Parton's dad, "the smartest man I have ever known" whose "inability to read probably kept him from fulfilling all of his dreams," she wrote on her website, has so far put 2.4 million free, high-quality, age-appropriate books into the hands of kids each month around the world. And this local event added another 1,245 in the Oswego, Montgomery, Plano and Yorkville area – a number expected to grow as the program gets more attention.

"I am so excited about this," said Fox Valley United Way Chief Executive Officer Deborah Rudel, who remembers how she'd walk to the mailbox with her young kids – now parents themselves – and they'd "always ask if there was anything for them."

The monthly books will indeed be arriving via the United States Post Office and addressed to the child. Which means if each youngster gets 12 books a year starting at birth, he or she will have up to 60 by age 5.

Regardless of age, the first book that arrives is "The Little Engine That Could," and the last book is "Look Out Kindergarten, Here I Come."

This Fox Valley United Way program began in March and has already topped its yearly estimation, with another 20 kids picked up in a recent 24-hour period, said Director of Engagement Lisa Foydel.

With word spread via the Grundy Kendall Regional Office of Education and early childhood agencies, Foydel expects to have 2,200 participants by the end of the year. Parents or guardians in Kendall County can sign up for the books once a child is born, with all kids under 5 eligible.

The program, of course, is not cheap. It was about five years ago, said Rudel, that her organization learned of the Dolly Parton program and "began diligently raising money to support this so no family has to pay a dime."

Nationally, United Way has become one of the biggest partners with the Dolly Parton Foundation, she added, but it was the state of Illinois, which "put money into its annual budget to support early literacy," that made last week's ribbon-cutting possible.

Weighing public art vs. public access

Charles Selle

When there's "free" money in the wind, folks always are looking for ways to spend it. Waukegan is no exception.

City officials have asked residents to help determine how best to spend about $738,000 remaining from a grant from the Illinois Department of Commerce and Economic Opportunity. The cash is part of a $1.5 million Energy Transition Community Grant given to Waukegan to offset the closure of the NRG generating plant, now used during peak energy days, on the city's lakefront. A third grant installment is expected next year.

Portions of the funds have gone to replacing lead water pipes in older neighborhoods, beautification programs, small business grants, cleaning up the Waukegan River and the city's ravine system. All beneficial programs.

Then there is the proposal to spend $400,000 for artists to create murals in crosswalks along the Genesee Street corridor to gussy up the downtown's appearance. Who doesn't love public art?

For example the statue of Waukegan's favorite son, entertainer Jack Benny, at Genesee and Clayton Street, kitty-corner from the Historic Genesee Theatre. Or the out-of-this-world statue of the city's other favorite son, author Ray Bradbury, by the library at Clayton and County Street.

But if the aim of the crosswalk art is to draw daylight foot traffic downtown, good luck. Currently, the painted public art is planned for Clayton and Genesee, Madison and Genesee, Water and Genesee, and Lake Street and Genesee, according to a News-Sun story last month by Steve Sadin.

Those attending Genesee Theatre performances might get a glimpse of the crosswalk mural at Genesee and Clayton while scurrying from the area's parking lots to their seats. Or those hoofing to the Green Town Tavern might enjoy the mural at Genesee and Water while thinking of the restaurant's Wednesday luncheon Reuben sandwich special.

The aesthetics might be lost on the rest of us. Although one city official told Sadin the "murals will be traffic-calming and pedestrian-friendly." Uh-huh.

The Dolly Parton Foundation is responsible for choosing the books, purchasing them in bulk and delivering them to the homes. The average cost, noted Foydel, is $26 a year per child, with Illinois picking up half. Other contributors that have made the local program possible include the Grundy Kendall Regional Office of Education and the Ft Cares Foundation.

Even the Aurora Rotary Club donated funds because members "recognize the importance of early literacy," said Rudel, adding that Fox Valley United Way is focusing on Kendall County simply because it was more "manageable."

One of the state requirements of the partnership with Dolly Parton is that the program cover the entire county. And because Kendall is far smaller in population than Kane, she pointed out, "it was much more affordable to us."

Fox Valley United Way would like nothing better than to add Kane County, where there is a larger underserved community. "But it would be five times as expensive," said Rudel. "If we look at a five-year sustainability plan in Kane, it would cost a half-million. And we will not get there without additional partners at the table."

While Fox Valley United Way is "not giving up on Kane," she added, "we recognize it is a huge lift."

The books, by the way, come with "tips and tricks" that provide support for parents in how to engage with their children.

"Inspiring kids to love to read," declares Parton, "has become my mission." And the Fox Valley United Way, says Rudel, is thrilled to be part of it.

"You would be surprised at how many families don't have books in their homes," she added. "As we all know, a parent is a child's first teacher, and this gives them an opportunity to sit down and read with them together."

The city is close to naming the artists, with those from Waukegan and Lake County receiving preference, who will be commissioned for the projects. Pay depends on what the artisans decide to creatively dive into during a "community paint day".

Yet, if the city is spending nearly a half-million dollars for downtown beautification, there's another long-term project officials could turn their eyes to: How to connect the downtown to the lakefront and the promise of lagging shoreline development north and south of Waukegan Harbor.

The administration of President Joe Biden has set aside billions of federal dollars to reconnect communities that were impacted by infrastructure that divided them. The idea is to make communities whole again. Seems like the four-lane Amstutz Expressway, that infamous sunken "road to nowhere" opened in 1979, would be one of the projects that qualifies.

We have seen what transforming under-used infrastructure has done in Chicago. Turning a one-time rail yard into what has become one of the Windy City's jewels, Millennium Park. The park celebrated its 20th anniversary last month.

Chicago planners are now talking about creating a public park on the north end of Michigan Avenue, including a pedestrian bridge that would take walkers over DuSable Lake Shore Drive to Lake Michigan and Oak Street Beach. In the big city, they make no small plans.

Of course, cost to transform an industrial property into parkland and entertainment offerings at Millennium Park was nearly a half-billion dollars. But something needs to be done to jump-start Waukegan's lakefront as has been done in similar-sized cities to the north, Kenosha and Racine in Wisconsin.

In Detroit, plans are afoot to replace Interstate 375 which was built some 60 years ago. It has grown expensive to maintain, according to a National Public Radio report, with less traffic. Motown officials want to fill in the one-mile highway which is below grade and turn it into a boulevard.

Michigan was given a $105 million federal windfall two years ago to get the project started and planning continues. Large infrastructure undertakings take time and infusion of money, mainly federal funds.

Eventually, Waukegan has to address the elephant in the lakefront development room if dreams of a vibrant shoreline ever become reality. City administrations dating back to the 1960s saw the possibilities of a de-industrialized Lake Michigan beachfront.

Such possibilities exist by building a deck over the highway as it moves from Genesee Street to Grand Avenue. That would link the College of Lake County Lakeshore Campus, new Waukegan History Museum at Washington Street and Sheridan Road, the Metra train depot with the harbor and beyond.

Just spit-balling here, but that expressway gap from the downtown to land to the east is holding back Waukegan's lakefront future. Public art is fine in the short term, but public access to the city shoreline is what officials should focus on for the long-term vision.

NOTICE OF SALE
PUBLIC NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that pursuant to a Judgment of Foreclosure and Sale entered in the above cause on February 1, 2024, an agent for The Judicial Sales Corporation, will at 10:30 AM on August 26, 2024, at The Judicial Sales Corporation, One South Wacker, 1st Floor Suite 35R, Chicago, IL, 60606, sell at a public sale to the highest bidder, as set forth below, the following described real estate:
Commonly known as 2939 N. 77TH CT, ELMWOOD PARK, IL 60707
Property Index No. 12-25-122-004-0000
The real estate is improved with a single family residence.
Sale terms: 25% down of the highest bid by certified funds at the close of the sale payable to The Judicial Sales Corporation. No third party checks will be accepted. The balance, in certified funds/or wire transfer, is due within twenty-four (24) hours. The subject property is subject to general real estate taxes, special assessments, or special taxes levied against said real estate and is offered for sale without any representation as to quality or quantity of title and without recourse to Plaintiff and in "AS IS" condition. The sale is further subject to confirmation by the court.
Upon payment in full of the amount bid, the purchaser will receive a Certificate of Sale that will entitle the purchaser to a deed to the real estate after confirmation of the sale.
Where a sale of real estate is made to satisfy a lien prior to that of the United States, the United States shall have one year from the date of sale within which to redeem, except that with respect to a lien arising under the internal revenue laws the period shall be 120 days or the period allowable for redemption under State law, whichever is longer, and in any case in which, under the provisions of section 505 of the Housing Act of 1950, as amended (12 U.S.C. 1701k), and subsection (d) of section 3720 of title 38 of the United States Code, the right to redeem does not arise, there shall be no right of redemption.
The property will NOT be open for inspection and plaintiff makes no representation as to the condition of the property. Prospective bidders are admonished to check the court file to verify all information.
If this property is a condominium unit, the purchaser of the unit at the foreclosure sale, other than a mortgagee, shall pay the assessments and the legal fees required by The Condominium Property Act, 765 ILCS 605/9(g)(1) and (g)(4). If this property is a condominium unit which is part of a common interest community, the purchaser of the unit at the foreclosure sale other than a mortgagee shall pay the assessments required by The Condominium Property Act, 765 ILCS 605/18.5(g-1).
IF YOU ARE THE MORTGAGOR (HOMEOWNER), YOU HAVE THE RIGHT TO REMAIN IN POSSESSION FOR 30 DAYS AFTER ENTRY OF AN ORDER OF POSSESSION, IN ACCORDANCE WITH SECTION 15-1701(C) OF THE ILLINOIS MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE LAW.
You will need a photo identification issued by a government agency (driver's license, passport, etc.) in order to gain entry into our building and the foreclosure sale room in Cook County and the same identification for sales held at other county venues where The Judicial Sales Corporation conducts foreclosure sales.

The Project consists of the following work:

LEYDEN TOWNSHIP

CONTRACT DOCUMENTS
Specifications and bid forms may be obtained from the Office of the Township Clerk, at 2501 N Mannheim Road, Franklin Park, IL 60131. No bidding documents will be issued after 5:00 PM Central Daylight Savings Time on the 27TH DAY OF AUGUST, 2024. Bid proposals must be submitted on the forms provided. Submission of a bid shall be conclusive assurance and warranty that the bidder has examined the plans, the site of the work and the local conditions affecting the contract and understands all of the requirements for performance of the work. The bidder will be responsible for all errors in its proposal resulting from failure or neglect to conduct an in-depth examination. Leyden Township will, in no case, be responsible for any costs, expenses, losses or changes in anticipated profits resulting from such failure or neglect of the bidder. The bidder shall not take advantage of any error or omission in the plans or proposal. Sealed envelopes or packages containing bids shall be addressed to the Township Clerk and plainly marked, "BID PROPOSAL FOR BULK ROCK SALT" on the outside of the envelope.

QUESTIONS, CHANGES, CLARIFICATION
Any questions that arise must be made in writing and shall be directed to the Township Clerk by email at clerk@leydentownship.com. The written questions, along with the Township's response, shall be circulated to all known potential bidders without identifying the party submitting the questions. The cut-off for receipt of additional questions shall be 5:00 PM, Central Daylight Savings Time on FRIDAY, AUGUST 23, 2024 in order to facilitate preparation of any addenda. No inquiry received after that time will be given consideration. Replies and/or addenda will be mailed and faxed to all known potential contractors by 4:00 PM, Central Daylight Savings Time on MONDAY, AUGUST 26, 2024. Receipt of any addenda must be acknowledged in writing as part of the Bidder's Proposal. Bidders shall be responsible for ensuring that they have received any and all addenda. Leyden Township shall not assume responsibility for the receipt by the Bidder of any addenda.

RIGHT TO REJECT BIDS

AWARD OF CONTRACT
Unless all bids are rejected, the contract award will be made to the lowest responsive responsible bidder. In determining who is the lowest responsive responsible bidder, Leyden Township will consider all factors which it, in its discretion, deems relevant in determining who is the lowest responsive responsible bidder.

NOTICE OF INTENT TO ISSUE GENERAL OBLIGATION BONDS (ALTERNATE REVENUE SOURCE) AND RIGHT TO FILE PETITION

Notice is hereby given that pursuant to an ordinance adopted on the 9th day of July, 2024 (the "Ordinance"), Leyden Township, Cook County, Illinois (the "Township"), intends to issue its General Obligation Bonds (Alternate Revenue Source) (the "Bonds") (i) in the aggregate principal amount of not to exceed $16,000,000 for the purpose of providing funding for the construction, financing and equipping of a senior citizens' housing facility (the "Senior Living Project") and (ii) in the aggregate principal amount of not to exceed $6,000,000 for the purpose of building and equipping a senior center and improving the site thereof (the "Senior Center Project"), and bearing interest per annum at not to exceed the maximum rate authorized by law at the time of the sale thereof. The revenue source that will be pledged to the payment of the principal of and interest on the Bonds will be property taxes received by the Township for township corporate purposes. If this revenue source is insufficient to pay the Bonds, ad valorem property taxes upon all taxable property in the Township without limitation as to rate or amount are authorized to be extended to pay the principal of and interest on the Bonds. A complete copy of the Ordinance follows this notice.

Notice is hereby further given that a petition signed by 3,950 or more electors of the Township (being equal to the greater of (i) 7.5% of the registered voters in the Township or (ii) 200 of those registered voters or 15% of those registered voters, whichever is less) may be submitted to the Township Clerk asking that the question of issuing the Bonds for the Senior Living Project or the Senior Center Project be submitted to referendum. If any such petition is filed with the Township Clerk with respect to either the Bonds to be issued for the Senior Living Project or the Senior Center Project within thirty (30) days after the publication of the Ordinance and this notice and on or before the 5th day of August, 2024, the respective question of the issuance of the Bonds for the Senior Living Project or the Senior Center Project shall be submitted to the electors of the Township on the 5th day of November, 2024. If any such petition is filed with the Township Clerk with respect to either the Bonds to be issued for the Senior Living Project or the Senior Center Project within thirty (30) days after the date of publication of the Ordinance and this notice and after the 5th day of August, 2024, the respective question of the issuance of the Bonds for the Senior Living Project or the Senior Center Project shall be submitted to the electors of the Township on the 25th day of February, 2025, unless none of the voters of the Township are scheduled to cast votes for any candidates for nomination for, election to or retention in public office at said election, in which case the respective question of the issuance of the Bonds for the Senior Living Project or the Senior Center Project shall be submitted to the electors of the Township on the 1st day of April, 2025. The Circuit Court may declare that an emergency referendum should be held prior to any of said election dates pursuant to the provisions of Section 2A 1.4 of the Election Code of the State of Illinois, as amended. If no such petition is filed with the Township Clerk within said 30 day period, the Bonds shall be authorized to be issued.

By order of the Township Board of the Township.

Jamie Losurdo
Township Clerk, Leyden Township,
Cook County, Illinois

ORDINANCE NO. TO 2024-11

AN ORDINANCE authorizing the issuance of General Obligation Bonds (Alternate Revenue Source) of Leyden Township, Cook County, Illinois, for the purpose of providing funding to construct, finance and equip a senior citizens' housing facility and build and equip a senior center and improve the site thereof.

WHEREAS, Leyden Township, Cook County, Illinois (the "Township"), is a duly organized and existing township incorporated and existing under the provisions of the laws of the State of Illinois, and is now operating under the provisions of the Township Code of the State of Illinois, as amended (the "Township Code"); and

WHEREAS, the Township Board of the Township (the "Board") has determined that it is advisable, necessary and in the best interests of the Township to (i) provide funding for the construction, financing and equipping of a senior citizens' housing facility (the "Senior Living Project") and (ii) build and equip a senior center and improve the site thereof (the "Senior Center Project"), in accordance with the preliminary estimate of costs heretofore approved by the Board and now on file in the office of the Township Clerk; and

WHEREAS, the estimated costs of the Senior Living Project, including legal, financial, bond discount, printing and publication costs, and other expenses, is not less than $16,000,000, and there are insufficient funds on hand and lawfully available to pay such costs; and

WHEREAS, the estimated costs of the Senior Center Project, including legal, financial, bond discount, printing and publication costs, and other expenses, is not less than $6,000,000, and there are insufficient funds on hand and lawfully available to pay such costs; and

WHEREAS, the costs of the Senior Living Project and the Senior Center Project are expected to be paid for from the proceeds of General Obligation Bonds (Alternate Revenue Source) (the "Bonds") authorized to be issued at this time pursuant to the Local Government Debt Reform Act of the State of Illinois, as amended (the "Act"); and

WHEREAS, pursuant to 60 ILCS 1/85-13, the Board may either expend funds directly or may enter into any cooperative agreement or contract with any other not-for-profit corporation or for-profit business entity with respect to the expenditure of Township funds to provide: the ordinary and necessary maintenance and operating expenses for social services for the poor and aged and the ordinary and necessary capital expenditures authorized by law; and

WHEREAS, pursuant to 60 ILCS 1/35-50.1, the Board has the power to expend Township funds for the construction, financing, purchase, improvement, equipping or management of senior citizens' housing; employ or contract with management firms to aid the Board in the managing of senior citizens' housing, and make contracts necessary in the exercise of the aforesaid powers; and

WHEREAS, pursuant to said powers, the Township will provide funding to developers seeking to develop the Senior Housing Project, such funds to be derived from the proceeds of the Bonds; and

WHEREAS, the Section 140-5(c) of the Township Code does provide that any township may, by ordinance, build, purchase or lease a multi-purpose senior center within the township (such as the Senior Center Project) without referendum approval if the building, purchasing or leasing of the multi-purpose senior center is paid or provided for with funds that are not proceeds of bonds authorized under Article 140 of the Township Code; and

WHEREAS, the Board does hereby find and determine that the Bonds to be issued for the Senior Living Project and Senior Center Project are authorized to be issued under the Act and not under the provisions of Article 140 of the Township Code and, as such, the Township is authorized to proceed with the Senior Living Project and Senior Center Project without submitting such question to the voters of the Township; and

WHEREAS, it is necessary and for the best interests of the Township that the Senior Living Project and the Senior Center Project be undertaken and in order to finance the costs thereof it will be necessary for the Township to borrow an amount (i) not to exceed $16,000,000 to finance the costs of the Senior Living Project and (ii) not to exceed $6,000,000 to finance the Senior Center Project, and in evidence thereof to issue the Bonds, all in accordance with the Act; and

WHEREAS, the revenue source that will be pledged to the payment of the principal of and interest on the Bonds will be property taxes received by the Township for township corporate purposes; and

WHEREAS, if such revenue source is insufficient to pay the Bonds, ad valorem property taxes upon all taxable property in the Township without limitation as to rate or amount are authorized to be extended to pay the principal of and interest on the Bonds:

NOW, THEREFORE, Be It Ordained by the Township Board of Leyden Township, Cook County, Illinois, as follows:

Section 1. Incorporation of Preambles. The Board hereby finds that all of the recitals contained in the preambles to this Ordinance are full, true and correct and does incorporate them into this Ordinance by this reference.

Section 2. Determination to Issue Bonds. It is necessary and in the best interests of the Township to undertake the Senior Living Project and the Senior Center Project for the public health, safety and welfare, in accordance with the estimate of costs as hereinabove described, and there are hereby authorized to be issued and sold the Bonds in an aggregate principal amount (i) not to exceed $16,000,000 to finance the costs of the Senior Living Project and (ii) not to exceed $6,000,000 to finance the Senior Center Project.

Section 3. Publication. This Ordinance, together with a notice in the statutory form (the "Notice"), shall be published once in a newspaper of general circulation in the Township, and if no petition, signed by 3,950 or more electors of the Township (being equal to the greater of (i) 7.5% of the number of registered voters in the Township or (ii) 200 of those registered voters or 15% of those registered voters, whichever is less) asking that the issuance of the Bonds for the Senior Living Project or the Senior Center Project be submitted to referendum is filed with the Township Clerk within thirty (30) days after the date of the publication of this Ordinance and the Notice, then the Bonds shall be authorized to be issued. Petition forms shall be provided by the Township Clerk to any individual requesting one.

Section 4. Additional Ordinances. If no petition meeting the requirements of applicable law is filed during the petition period hereinabove referred to, then the Board may adopt additional ordinances or proceedings supplementing or amending this Ordinance providing for the issuance and sale of the Bonds and prescribing all the details of the Bonds, so long as the maximum aggregate principal amount of such Bonds as set forth in this Ordinance is not exceeded and there is no material change in the Senior Living Project or the Senior Center Project or the purposes described herein. Such additional ordinances or proceedings shall in all instances become effective in accordance with applicable law. This Ordinance, together with such additional ordinances or proceedings, shall constitute complete authority for the issuance of the Bonds, under applicable law.

Section 5. Intent to Reimburse. None of the proceeds of the Bonds will be used to pay, directly or indirectly, in whole or in part, for an expenditure that has been paid by the Township prior to the date hereof except architectural or engineering costs incurred prior to commencement of any of the Senior Living Project or the Senior Center Project or expenditures for which an intent to reimburse has been properly declared under Treasury Regulations Section 1.150-2. This Ordinance is in itself a declaration of official intent under Treasury Regulations Section 1.150-2 as to all costs of the Senior Living Project and the Senior Center Project paid (i) within the 60-day period ending on this date and with respect to which no declaration of intent was previously made or (ii) on or after the passage of this Ordinance.

Section 6. Severability. If any section, paragraph, clause or provision of this Ordinance shall be held invalid, the invalidity of such section, paragraph, clause or provision shall not affect any of the other provisions of this Ordinance.

Section 7. Repealer. All ordinances, resolutions or orders, or parts thereof, in conflict with the provisions of this Ordinance are to the extent of such conflict hereby repealed.

Quote-Acrostic

1. Define clues, writing in Words column over numbered dashes.
2. Transfer letters to numbered squares in diagram.
3. When pattern is completed, quotation can be read left to right. The first letters of the filled-in words reading down form an acrostic yielding the speaker's name and the topic of the quotation.

Life has its ups and downs for Billy Bigelow (played by Conor Jordan) and Julie Jordan (Maliha Sayed) in "Carousel" by Music Theater Works, staged Aug. 8-18 at the North Shore Center for the Performing Arts in Skokie. ANTHONY ROBERT LA PENNA

'Deals with some dark topics'

Music Theater Works' 'Carousel' includes talkbacks about domestic violence themes

By Myrna Petlicki

A womanizing carnival barker named Billy Bigelow finds himself attracted to a strong-willed millworker named Julie Jordan in "Carousel." Their love story has a dark side, though, in the iconic musical by Richard Rodgers (music) and Oscar Hammerstein II (book and lyrics).

The show, which is filled with unforgettable songs, is being presented by Music Theater Works Aug. 8-18 at North Shore Center for the Performing Arts in Skokie. Performances are at 2 p.m. Aug. 8, 11, 14, 17 and 18; 7 p.m. Aug. 9; and 7:30 p.m. Aug. 10, 15, 16 and 17.

"Billy Bigelow is definitely one of the most complex characters in all of musical theater," said Conor Jordan, who plays the carnival barker. "Playing him is like walking on a tightrope. You need to be able to express his deep insecurities and the danger in his impulsive rage in a way that the audience still wants to root for him to achieve redemption despite all the sins that he does commit. He's a troubled soul who needs to feel love and a guiding hand in order to become the good man he really is deep down inside."

Jordan noted that Billy could have any girl in town but Julie is different. "She's not immediately falling for his normal charm," Jordan said. "Ultimately, she casts a spell on him. He's never had love truly before and he finds that with Julie for the first time."

Jordan's favorite number is "You'll Never Walk Alone." "My favorite song to sing would probably be the 'If I Loved You Reprise,' " he said. "That's a beautiful culmination of his arc as a character."

Jordan praised this staging of the musical, saying, "Our production not only has a brilliant full orchestra to sell the epic nature of the score but we also don't downplay the heavy themes that this show brings up." Among those is the issue of domestic violence.

"Julie is someone who keeps her heart close to her chest," said actor Maliha Sayed, who plays Billy's love interest. "I think she's a very deep thinker. She's someone who loves really hard and wants to be loved but has trouble expressing that at times."

She's also someone who craves excitement and adventure, Sayed noted, which Billy offers.

"Despite his flaws and his faults, I think he sees Julie for who she is, perhaps in a way no one else does," Sayed said.

That doesn't mean they have a smooth relationship, though. "They are both really stubborn," Sayed noted. The actor said that she relates strongly to Julie. "I understand how she feels like an outsider. I've felt like an outsider my whole life," Sayed said.

The actor said that one challenge of the role is portraying someone who is dealing with domestic violence.

As an actor, Sayed noted, she has to figure out why her character stays with Billy.

Sayed's favorite song in the show is "If I Loved You." "That was the song that made me fall in love with the show 10 years ago," she revealed.

"It's one of my favorite musicals of all time," said director Sasha Gerritson. "It has some of the most beautiful melodies."

There is also a serious reason why Gerritson has wanted to stage the show. "It deals with some dark topics, most notably the topic of domestic abuse and domestic violence," she said. "I think it's important that we address this as a society."

Bringing the topic to the forefront through theater means "that we can work as advocates to help end domestic violence," Gerritson said. Talkbacks are being planned for that purpose. Gerritson is thrilled with her cast — and has especially high praise for the two leads.

"Conor (Jordan) is a dream come true," Gerritson said. "His voice is golden. He has a wonderful range and he's a fantastic actor. He really understands the character."

Gerritson said about Sayed, "She is so sensitive and so strong at the same time and also has a magnificent voice."

In addition, Gerritson added that the two leads "have a wonderful chemistry on the stage. The whole cast is so good. I feel like I won the lottery with this cast."

Try consuming ginger the next time you feel carsick

By Joe Graedon, M.S. and Teresa Graedon, Ph.D.
King Features Syndicate

Ginger is known for preventing and alleviating motion sickness, though scientists still aren't sure why. DREAMSTIME

Q: My wife has terrible motion sickness. She can't sit in the back seat of a car. When she needs to travel, she takes ginger root before she leaves home. She has not experienced any side effects and it is inexpensive. Perhaps this approach might work for others who are susceptible to this problem.

A: Your suggestion may help people headed out on their summer vacations. Ginger has a reputation for preventing motion sickness, though scientists don't yet know the exact mechanism (Journal of Ethnopharmacology, May 23, 2022). In mice, ginger compounds improve balance and coordination by reducing the release of histamine and acetylcholine in the vestibular system responsible for balance and motion sickness.

Q: Bag Balm applied topically works wonders for red, itchy rashes in sensitive areas of the human body. It can be found at some drugstores as well as farm and feed stores.

Bag Balm comes in a square green can. It was originally developed for irritation on the udders of farm animals (cows, sheep, goats). In my view, it's amazing and inexpensive, well worth the time it takes to find it!

A: Bag Balm was introduced in 1899 by the Dairy Association Company of Vermont. It was intended as a treatment for cows' chapped udders. It is now made by Vermont's Original.

Farm families adopted its use for their own dry, chapped skin. It contains an antiseptic, 8-hydroxyquinoline sulfate. Other moisturizing ingredients include lanolin and petroleum jelly. Thanks for sharing your experience.

Q: I have been taking lisinopril for years to control high blood pressure. It seems obvious that you should reduce salt. After all, salt can raise blood pressure.

I have learned from your column NOT to use salt substitutes. I am very surprised that I needed to learn this from you because neither my pharmacy nor my doctor warned me about it.

A: Lisinopril is known as an ACE (angiotensin converting enzyme) inhibitor. Many blood pressure pills such as thiazide diuretics deplete the body of potassium. ACE inhibitors, on the other hand, help the body preserve potassium.

As a result, using a potassium-based salt substitute could lead to an excess of this mineral. Too much potassium is just as dangerous as too little. Symptoms may include weakness, slow pulse, heart palpitations, tingling or numbness in hands, feet or lips and confusion. When potassium levels get too high, they can cause fatal heart rhythm abnormalities.

Another class of drugs that pose similar risks are ARBs (angiotensin receptor blockers) such as losartan.

Q: I'm almost 60 and an avid pickleball player. In recent years, I find that when I play for more than a couple of hours and get dehydrated, I have cramps after I play. Hamstrings and glutes are often a problem or sometimes abdominal and back muscles.

Pickle juice or mustard can discharge the nervous system firing within a minute or two. That relieves the cramp right away.

A: Pickle juice is not just for pickleball. We have heard from hockey players, football players and other sports enthusiasts that both pickle juice and yellow mustard can reverse muscle cramps. Even nonathletes tell us that these strong flavors work well to calm nighttime leg cramps.
